INDIAN PUBLIC WORKS.—The first meeting of the Select Committee on East India Public Works is postponed until March 7.

LABUAN ISLAND (DOWNING-STREET, Feb. 21).—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Andrew Boosie, Esq., to be a member of the Legislative Council of the Island of Labuan.—Gazette.

SPECIE FOR INDIA.—The Cuthay, which sailed on Feb. 26, took £635,600, the particulars of which are given as follows:—For Bombay £20,000 was in bar gold and £183,500 in bar silver, while £227,000 was also in silver for Calcutta. Of the dollars for Penang, Singapore, and Hong Kong, the amounts consigned were valued respectively at £71,000, £15,400, and £6,200. To Shanghai £112,500 was sent, £108,700 being in bar silver and £3,800 in dollars.

BRITISH MEDICAL SERVICE.—The following candidates were successful for appointments as surgeons in her Majesty's British Medical Service at the examination held in London on Feb. 11:—J. Stevenson, 1,970; A. J. Landon, 1,939; J. W. H. Flanagan, 1,690; W. L. Lane, 1,605; W. P. Feltham, 1,578; K. S. Wallis, 1,535; W. Leah, 1,520; J. L. Ritchie, 1,505; C. Seymour, 1,390; M. D. O'Connell, 1,385; P. J. Dempsey, 1,372; A. Harding, 1,355; J. F. Dowman, 1,335; H. R. Cross and A. S. W. Young, each 1,305; H. J. Noad, 1,245; J. G. MacNeece, 1,225; and J. J. Falvey, 1,205. At this examination only nineteen candidates presented themselves, although there were forty vacancies.

BILLS FOR INDIA.—The tenders for £300,000 (Rs. 3,000,000) in bills on India were received on Feb. 27 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £175,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8 9/16d.; to Bombay, £120,000, at an average rate of 1s. 9 2/6d.; and to Madras, £5,000, at an average rate of 1s. 9 6/12d. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 9d. will receive about 9 per cent., all above in full; on Bombay at 1s. 9d. about 33 per cent. all above in full. The Council have again sold the whole amount of bills advertised for tender, but there is no change in the rates obtained, although an improvement on last week's rates had been confidently expected.

H.M.'s TROOPS FOR INDIA.—The following officers embarked at Portsmouth on board the Indian relief troopship Serapis, Capt. Davidson, for Bombay, to join their respective corps and regiments, namely:—Lieut. Rogers, 3rd Hussars; Major Le Motté; Captains Corbett and Moore; Lieuts. Hamilton and Trollope, R.A.; Lieut. M'Donnell, R.E., Capt. St. Paul, 4th Batt. Rifle Brigade; Sub-Lieut. Crawley, 2nd Batt. 2nd Foot; Sub-Lieut. O'Donnell, 1st Batt. 8th Foot; Sub-Lieut. Seaton, 2nd Batt. 8th Foot; Major Daunt, 2nd Batt. 9th Foot; Sub-Lieuts. Wardner, Edwards, and Cole, 2nd Batt. 17th Foot; Lieut. Becher, 1st Batt. 25th Regt.; Lieut. Burnett, 51st Regt.; Lieut. Whistler, 62nd Regt.; Sub-Lieut. Gardner, 63rd Regt.; Quartermaster F. Jones, 66th Regt.; Capt. Seton, 67th Regt.; and Surgeon Molloy, A.M.D. There are not any troops to embark this voyage, but the Serapis takes a few naval supernumeraries and will return home with a number of military invalids and time-expired men, being the last of the troop season. The Serapis sailed from Portsmouth on Feb. 24, and Plymouth on Feb. 25.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.—A general meeting of the shareholders of this bank was held on Tuesday at the offices of the bank, Old Broad-street, Mr. G. Nicol in the chair. The Chairman said the meeting was of a purely formal character; it was simply to confirm a resolution passed at a meeting of the 16th Oct., "That the court of directors be authorised for and on behalf of the company to apply for and accept a renewed or supplemental charter of the company for extending the existing charter a period of ten years from the expiration thereof, or for such other period and generally upon such terms, and under such provisions and conditions, as to the directors shall seem fit, and as they may be able to obtain the same." The solicitor had the matter in hand, and he had no positive information to give them except that negotiations were going on with the Treasury, and that there was no doubt they would get an extension of the charter on the same terms as before. He moved that the resolution be confirmed. The motion passed unanimously, and the meeting then separated.

INDIAN RAILWAY ACCOUNTS.—In looking through the statement of the revenue and expenditure of the Indian railways for 1875 and 1876, embodied in Mr. Danvers's last report to the Secretary of State for India, we observe a number of errors which, occurring in a public document of this important nature, are quite inexcusable, and must tend greatly to impair confidence in the accuracy and value of the report as a whole. In the statements printed on pages 24 and 25 the total receipts for 1875 are entered as £7,412,079, whereas the true amount is £7,327,100, the latter being the correct sum total of the addition of the various columns. The difference amounts to £84,979. On the expenditure side the total is stated as £3,764,311, whereas the correct addition of the figures shows that it is only £3,694,924, being an overstatement to the extent of £69,387. In the figures given for 1876 the errors are even more numerous.

The total receipts are stated as £8,793,982, instead of the true sum of £8,784,990. The difference is only £9,042, but it is the result of no less than four errors in adding and extending figures. The effect of these numerous errors is to make the accounts for 1875 worse for the railways by £15,592, being the difference between £84,979 overstated receipts, and £69,387 overstated expenditure; and those for 1876 worse by £12,404, being the addition of the overstatement in the receipts of £9,042, with the understatement in the expenditure £3,362.—Financial Opinion.

IRRIGATION REGARDED AS A PREVENTION OF INDIAN FAMINES.—On Feb. 22 a paper was read on this subject by Mr. W. T. Thornton, C.B., before the Indian section of the Society of Arts, in the Lecture Room of that institution, John-street, Adelphi, Colonel Yule occupying the chair. After referring to the frequency of Indian famines, and speaking of the great cost of them to the Government, he said he admitted that, if the theory of the irrigationists were correct, it would be economy to spend fifty, or even a hundred, millions in constructing irrigation works for the whole of India. It was impossible to overrate the importance of such irrigation works as could be implicitly trusted to continue in a condition to furnish water when it was needed; but as a matter of fact the maximum discharge at the head works of the Ganges and Jumna Canals were often less by a fourth in one year than in another, and it was obvious that even in Northern India not only was irrigation not capable of indefinite extension, but if provision were made for the utmost extension possible in one year immense tracts of ordinarily irrigated land might in extraordinarily deficient seasons be left without a drop of water. Far greater must be the risks incurred in the Deccan, where there are no snowy mountains, and where what mountains there are intercept most of the moisture which they attract. If canals could not be relied on in such junctures, still less could tanks. Last year in Madras the failure of crops was most complete on lands which in ordinary seasons would have been styled wet by reason of their being irrigated. What they had to deal with was the rainfall, but there were in India vast breadths of country which never in any single year received more rain than was required for that same year's purpose, and it could not therefore be stored in those districts for subsequent dry seasons. This was not the only drawback. Another had been expressed with epigrammatic force and neatness, as the inability of water to run up hill. Neither from the banks of any river nor from the site of any tank did the ground decline on all sides with so uniform a slope but that its surface was broken by occasional undulations; and Southern India in general consisted not of low lying plains, but of lofty table lands, averaging 1,500 ft. above the sea level, and the rivers which traversed it had their channels for the greater part deep down below the surface, so that anicuts or dams could not be placed higher up stream than at present. It was plain, therefore, that if irrigation works were multiplied to the utmost extent, much the greater part of India would still be left high and dry. But while denying that even universal irrigation could be a specific for famine, he admitted that irrigation very far short of universal would be not only a most valuable palliative, but would likewise serve as a partial preventive. The Indian Government had been attacked for spending so little on such works; but he maintained that no other Government, ancient or modern, had been nearly so lavish in respect to public works as it had been during the last twenty or thirty years. After a few words from Sir Arthur Cotton and Sir George Balfour, M.P., the discussion was adjourned.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, Feb. 25.—SOLDIERS FOR INDIA.—Mr. HARDY assured Sir G. CAMPBELL that he had every reason to believe satisfactory means would be found for providing a sufficiency of seasoned and experienced soldiers for India.

THE JOWAKIS.—Mr. D. ONSLOW inquired whether there was any truth in the statement of the unconditional surrender of the Jowakis, as stated in a telegram in the Times of that morning.—Lord G. HAMILTON said the Government had received a telegram confirming the news contained in that morning's Times, and it was the more satisfactory because it not only established peace, but inaugurated a new and more civilised policy in regard to dealing with native tribes.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, Feb. 28.—INDIAN TAXATION.—Sir G. CAMPBELL asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether, since he had laid before this House the views of the Government of India in regard to the imposition of new taxation, he would also produce papers showing the views on this subject of the Governments of Madras, Bombay, the North-West Provinces and the Punjab, and of the members of the Council of India at home.—Lord G. HAMILTON said if the hon. member would move for the papers he required he would consult with the Secretary of State for India and ascertain whether they could be laid on the table. From the vagueness of the question, it was at present impossible to say what papers the hon. member required.

MR. CALDWELL has been appointed Emigration Agent for the Colony of Natal in Calcutta.

A HARROW DINNER.—There was a Harrow dinner at Government House, Calcutta, on Saturday, January 26, his Excellency the Viceroy presiding. The Englishman says, that "a goodly number of old Harrovians sat down; and after dinner the Viceroy proposed the customary toast 'Prosperity to Harrow,' in a speech which evoked unbounded enthusiasm. Reminiscences of public school-days always seem to unlock the hearts of even the most grave and reverend seniors, who look back to the 'old school' with fond regret, and are proud of being called 'old boys.' Like the old Wykehamist, who declared in the Times some two years ago that even tuning was not devoid of some picturesque and agreeable features, every one on Saturday seemed agreed that it would be difficult to beat Harrow anywhere for anything. Lord Lytton was in his happiest vein, and passed from grave to gay with Horatian grace, some of his points literally setting the table in a roar. Mr. Justice Cunningham followed, in proposing the health of his Excellency and of Lady Lytton, with an eloquent speech of true Attic flavour, which was warmly applauded. Altogether, a most pleasant evening was spent, such as is seldom enjoyed, even by an old Harrow man, in the days when men begin to lose that capacity for keen enjoyment which they possessed in the old days of exacts."

RIFLE CONTEST.—A rifle match between the sergeants of H.M.'s 54th Regiment v. the Calcutta Volunteers took place at the Ballygunge Range on Saturday, Jan. 25; the conditions were ten shots at 500 yards, and ten shots at 700 yards, ten men a side. From the beginning the Volunteers showed themselves too strong for their opponents, and the result gave them the victory, with 156 points to spare. The shooting of the winning team was very creditable, an average of 59.1, or very nearly a centre a shot, having been obtained; the three highest scores—72, 71, and 70—are exceptionally good. The 54th sergeants were under the disadvantage of firing with the new Martini rifles, with which they have had very little practice, and of shooting at a range with which they were unacquainted; in the return match they will no doubt show up in much better form.

The quantity of wheat exported from Sind to foreign ports in December last was 59,982 cwts., valued at Rs. 2,95,855.

MEMORIAL IN HONOUR OF LORD
NAPIER OF MAGDALA.

By Public Meeting in Calcutta, 16th March, 1878. A Committee was constituted under the Presidency of Sir RICHARD TEMPLE, to collect Funds for the Erection of a Fitting Memorial of LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA, for which they require about £5,000. About £2,800 has already been raised in India, and an Auxiliary Committee (named below) has been formed in London to collect Subscriptions in this country.

Subscriptions are now invited, and it is requested that they may be paid into the Bank of Messrs. Courts and Co., Strand; or to the Honorary Secretary, Captain R. THOMAS, late 35th Royal Sussex, Junior Army and Navy Club, who will give any further information.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA

Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.
Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa of the Finest Quality, with the excess of fat extracted.

The Faculty pronounce it "the most nutritious, perfectly digestible beverage for Breakfast, Luncheon, or Supper, and invaluable for Invalids and Children."

Highly commended by the entire Medical Press.
Being without sugar, spice, or other admixture, it suits all palates, keeps better in all climates, and is four times the strength of Cocos THICKENED yet WEAKENED with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and IN REALITY CHEAPER than such Mixtures.

Made instantaneously with boiling water, a teaspoonful to a Breakfast Cup costing less than a Halfpenny.

COCOATINA A LA VANILLE is the most delicate, digestible, and palatable Vanilla Chocolate, and may be taken when richer Chocolate is prohibited.

COCOATINA IS THE BEST COCOA FOR EXPORT

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, February 18; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, February 16; Calcutta, February 15.

FROM the Madras Famine report for the week ending Feb. 12 it appears that 305,000 labourers were still on relief works in Madras, and the price of grain was again rising. The numbers on gratuitous relief had declined, however, by 11,000. In Mysor 45,000 persons were employed on works. The Madras Famine Committee state that only a few lakhs of rupees out of the half million sterling remain on hand, and that there is still "a depth and intensity of distress that the committee do not feel themselves able to meet." Some indignation is expressed in Bombay that only £7,500 of this large sum has been allotted to meet the famine in that Presidency. A swarm of locusts, too, had lately visited Tinnevely, in Southern India, dealing great havoc among the crops. It is feared that this new misfortune may have the effect of considerably prolonging the effects of the famine. From Bombay we learn that owing to the great distress prevailing in Katiawar, Mr. Peile, the Agent of the Governor-General, has received instructions to proceed with some of the railways which were sketched out as famine works, and afterwards dropped, last year.

THE latest accounts of the prospects in Rohilkhand and Oudh show that, though scarcity will doubtless be felt severely until the spring crop comes into the market this month, yet the distress is well in hand; Colonel Fraser having taken his precautions as early as last November. A sufficient staff of engineers has been sent into the Rai Bareli division. The North-West Government have proposed to start certain relief works at Farakhabad and Lucknow, and are ready to open relief-houses and works wherever the need for them may arise.

THE telegraph has already finished the Jawaki campaign, but the mail brings home some unrecorded particulars of the successful move against the village of Sapri on February 15. The force consisted of 250 Guide Cavalry under Captain Wigram Battye, of whom fifty were left near Abazai, while 200 went on and reached Sapri, after a march of some eight miles through "exceedingly bad, and for the last mile very steep, country."

At daybreak an attack was made on the enemy, who were completely taken by surprise. Mian Rukhan, the ringleader, who planned the raid of December, 1876, resisted all attempts to seize him, and was eventually shot down and killed, not, however before he had stabbed the tahsildar, who was saved by a notebook in his breast-pocket. Six of the enemy were killed and six made prisoners; three of whom are men of note. The number of the wounded was unknown. On our side six were wounded—one dangerously. The force remained several hours in the village, attacking and dispersing the parties which came up from other villages to support Sapri, and returned unmolested with their prisoners and the wounded. The Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab thinks the Guides behaved splendidly, and assigns the utmost credit for this dashing exploit to Captain Cavagnari, the Deputy Commissioner with the force, and the officers and men of the Guides.

It appears after all that the telegram concerning Mr. Gordon was wrong, and not the Pioneer. That gentleman has been gazetted guardian to the young Maharajah of Mysor, and Mr. J. D. Sandford succeeds him as Judicial Commissioner. The new Chief Commissioner, Mr. Aitchison relieves Mr. Saunders at Mysor on the 31st of March, about which date Mr. Lyall will take his place in the Foreign Office. Major E. R. C. Bradford has already been appointed to succeed Mr. Lyall as acting Governor-General's Agent in Rajputana.

TRAVELLERS across China to India are no longer the rare birds of a time still recent. In the last few months we have recorded two or three instances of such a journey successfully accomplished; and another comes to us by the last mail. Mr. Cameron, a member of the Inland China Mission, arrived at Bhamo on Jan. 26 from Yunnan, and was shortly to proceed to Rangoon. We are told that Mr. Cameron was everywhere civilly received in Western China.

THE Viceroy left Calcutta for Barrackpore on Saturday, the 16th February. His Excellency, having been somewhat indisposed, would probably remain there throughout the following week. It appears that his meditated trip to Rajputana at the end of March has been abandoned; the wonder seems, indeed—as the Pioneer remarks—"considering the climate of those regions in April, that the idea was ever seriously entertained. Besides, most of the States are suffering from drought, and their Chiefs from impecuniosity, aggravated by the cost of their efforts during the Prince of Wales's visitation." Of course a private visit from a Viceroy, however anxious he may be to discourage all display on the occasion, is a thing not to be thought of in the case of princes who plume themselves on a sense of what is due to the host's personal dignity. Assam and Nepal, among other places, have been suggested, we hear, for a short tour; but each in turn presented some difficulty which could not be got over.

It has often of late been asserted that Sir Salar Jung's recent bearing towards the Indian Government, which provoked among other things the dismissal of Mr. Oliphant, was largely owing to the support he had received from the Prince of Wales. His Royal Highness was charged with using his personal influence in the matter, and with receiving valuable presents from Sir Salar Jung. We are glad to find that, as soon as his attention was drawn to these statements he desired that they should be flatly contradicted. In view of the great care which his Royal Highness has always taken to avoid all interference with political complications, the supposition that he would for a moment lend his personal influence to aid any attempt to embarrass her Majesty's Government is one that his Royal Highness would naturally be anxious to disavow; and as it is unusual for members of the Royal Family to accept presents from native dignitaries, save through the regular channels of the Government of India, his wish to contradict this portion of the canard will be readily understood. To this authoritative contradiction the Bombay Gazette replies by reaffirming its old conviction that "the injudicious attentions paid by the Prince and his most intimate friends, first in Bombay and afterwards in London, to the Nizam's Minister, who was notoriously all the time at feud with the Government of India, have been the main cause of the widening of the breach between that Government and Sir Salar Jung." "We speak"—it adds—"of what we know when we say that" eminent Anglo-Indians "remonstrated with the Prince's friends, if not with the Prince himself, when Sir Salar received as flattering a reception in London as if he were an independent Sovereign and not the Minister of a native Prince who had gone to England to fight against the Government of India."

WE hear that the senior member of the Madras Civil Service, Mr. Andrew Wedderburn, Collector of Coimbatore, retires this month, after thirty years' service.—Mr. Amir Ali, Barrister-at-Law, has been appointed to a vacant seat in the Bengal Legislative Council.—The new post of Commissioner of Salt Revenue for Madras has been given to Mr. H. W. Bliss, a Madras Civilian.—A son and heir has been born to the Maharajah of Jodhpur.—It is stated that Mr. J. Monro, Inspector General of Police, will not retire in April next as announced, and that Mr. F. M. Halliday, who was to have succeeded him, will succeed Mr. Molony as Commissioner of Patna.

THE Englishman once more draws attention to "the grievous inequality which obtains in the pension rules of the Indian and English branches of her Majesty's army," and we agree with it in thinking that the subject is one which fully justifies reiteration. While twenty years' service in the English army, leave included, entitles officers of the new line regiments to retire as captains on a pension of £200 a year, officers of the Indian army get only £192 after twenty years' actual service in India. Such a distinction is obviously and grossly unfair to the Indian officer, whose conditions of service entitle him to expect the higher pension of the two. The very least concession to his just claims would consist in offering him a pension of £200 per annum after twenty years' service, inclusive of leave. As things are, the practical result is that, as a rule, the Indian officer simply hangs on after twenty years' service, and thus imposes a heavier burden on the finances of the country. Two instances of this result are cited by our contemporary. "Major Mackenzie, of the cadre of the old 5th European Light Cavalry, was in England, and after twenty-four years' service was anxious to retire. But not having completed twenty years' actual service in the plains, he was not entitled to the first pension of £191 a year. What is the consequence? Major Mackenzie comes out again to India and does general duty in that rank, drawing, instead of £191, the sum of Rs. 969 odd monthly from the revenues of the country, or £1,000 a year. He may hang on another ten years in this way, at the end of which time the difference between his pay and the pension he would have retired on, had Government treated him with the commonest justice, will have mounted up to a very respectable total. The other case to which we refer is precisely similar, except that the officer concerned is at present drawing the equivalent of £700 only instead of £1,000 per annum. But he, too, will shortly get his promotion, and thenceforward will draw the higher sum." We can well believe that many Indian officers would retire to-morrow, if only a fairly liberal pension were offered them, instead of which all leave counts against them, and it is only after twenty-four or twenty-five years' service that they find themselves entitled to the lowest rate of pension. No wonder, therefore, that many of them determine to hang on until they get their Colonel's allowances, or the extra pensions offered under the Colonel's Retirement Scheme.

OLIVE-CULTURE appears at length to have gained its first footing in Upper India. The official reports for last year show that the fruit-bearing olive can be successfully cultivated in the dry districts of the Rawalpindi division, and a plantation on a large scale will probably be tried this year as an experiment at Government expense.

THE correspondent of an Indian paper gives one or two amusing instances of the blunders made by native students through their ignorance of English, especially of technical terms. One of the Civil Engineering College students when asked by the examiner in engineering "what plant is required to turn out 10,000 bricks per diem?" replied that in India teak was the plant always used, whilst in England oak was invariably employed. Another candidate for an overseer's certificate who, however, was not a college student, on being asked what was "the ruling gradient of a road," replied that "the chief ingradient was gravel."

It appears that the Panthays of Yunnan, who not long ago took refuge in British Burma from the cruelties of their Chinese conquerors, have now found another country in which to make a home. This, says a Rangoon paper, is "in a tract of country on the north-east of Upper Burma which belongs neither to Siam nor Burma, and over which China has never pretended to have any claims. This tract of land is ruled over by a congeries of Shan and Kachin petty chiefs, some of whom at first were inclined to oppose the Panthay settlement, but have ceased to make any opposition to it. These Panthays number nearly 3,000, and are divided into two settlements about ten miles distant from each other. They have intermarried with the women of the country, and in time will form a community among these savage tribes. Their principal occupation is agriculture, though a few of them have taken small quantities of goods from Mandalay, and established the beginning of a trade with the surrounding tribes. These Panthays prefer the rude independence and freedom from taxation which they enjoy in their colony in the wilds, to immigration to either Upper or British Burma."

FRENCH INDIA, according to the Madras Standard, appears to be more successful in making both ends meet than its big neighbour, British India. We learn that the revenue of French India for the current year is estimated at one million seven hundred and two thousand and forty-two francs. To this sum Pondicherry contributes f.1,018,031; Chandernagor, f.201,148; Karikal, f.400,942; Mahé, f.46,292; Yanaon, f.85,627. The land revenue of the whole of French India is f.483,103; it is only in Mahé that there is a house tax which yields the insignificant amount of f.779. The impost on the manufacture and sale of spirits and their importation yields f.417,619, and the contribution by the British Government for salt is about the same figure. Port dues amount to f.19,233; and the postal revenue f.14,835. The expenditure for the year is calculated at f.1,347,589, of which to Pondicherry is allotted f.909,054; Chandernagor, f.107,000; Karikal, f.258,219; Mahé, f.639,663; Yanaon, f.33,000. The cost of administration is set down at f.709,823 for the whole of French India. The estimate for public works is f.326,800.

It is widely rumoured in India that Sir Richard Temple intends shortly to resign the Governorship of Bombay. As there is no apparent reason for his taking such a step we are inclined to regard the rumour as a misconception of Sir Richard's real purpose. It is not unlikely that he will run over to England for a few months to give evidence before the Committee now sitting on Indian Public Works in relation to the famine. It is said that several other officials of high standing will come home for the same purpose.

WE hear that the settlement of the Sitapur district in Oudh has been confirmed by the Secretary of State for the usual period of thirty years. This district comprises 14,10,387 acres, the cultivated area being 64.4 per cent., a higher proportion than in any other district of the same province. The district is held mainly by Rajput communities. The final result of the revised assessments, the rates of which have been greatly lowered in the course of the settlement from those originally proposed, is an increase of revenue from Rs. 9,39,397 to Rs. 13,03,694, an increase of 33 per cent. The revenue rate per cultivated area is Rs. 1-6-10, which is lower than in any other district, except Gonda, in which it is the same, and Baraich, in which it is Rs. 1-5-11.

We learn that with the sanction of the Secretary of State the Viceroy has appointed General Sir Richard Strachey President of the Famine Commission, which is to sit in India concurrently with the Special Committee in London.

In his despatch of April 22, 1877, Lord Lytton repeats his former assertion that our supremacy in India is mainly due to "the straightforward, upright, and disinterested action of English gentlemen, and to the influence which higher mental power and culture never fail to exert over those who are brought much in contact with them." For this among other reasons he proposes the appointment of a Chief Commissioner at Peshawar, who would "represent to the native mind more directly and personally than either the Lieutenant-Governor at Lahor, or the still more distant Viceroy at Calcutta, the embodied power and dignity of the British Government." If there is any ground for such a proposal, all we can say is that things must have greatly changed for the worse since the days of Dalhousie and the Lawrences, when the affairs of the Punjab Frontier were managed with equal vigour and success by the Punjab Government and its chosen officers. The Viceroy further proposes to transfer the command of the Frontier Force to the Commander-in-Chief, and to increase somewhat the police force, giving it as good an organisation as possible, and placing it directly under the district officers. The local militia also should be under the district officers, and ordinarily these civil forces should be sufficient to meet and punish any attempts from over the border. With a picked police force, composed of men of the same stamp, and as inured to hill work as the tribes whom they have to act against, but better armed, organised, and disciplined, under picked officers, and with a proper system of espionage and intelligence, I see no reason why the security of the Frontier should not be maintained, in ordinary times, without the assistance of troops. But when once the troops are called out, then the control of all armed forces, military, police, or militia, should pass in the hands of the officer commanding the troops, and he alone, acting, of course, in concert and communication with the civil authorities, should be responsible for the protection of the frontier.

With regard to "small punitive expeditions" the Viceroy does not

For a moment suppose that these turbulent and savage tribes can be managed without occasional displays of power and severe punishment; but I object to this particular form of punishment. I object to it because it perpetuates a system of semi-barbarous reprisal, and because we lower ourselves to the ideas of right and might common to our barbarous neighbours, rather than endeavour to raise them to our own ideas; because it seldom really touches the guilty, and generally falls most heavily on the innocent; because its natural tendency is to perpetuate animosity rather than to lead up to good relations; because, as a rule, it leaves no permanent mark, and the tribes assailed by us can point triumphantly to our having evacuated their country after all; because there can be no more trying fighting for our own troops than that which obliges them ultimately to retire before an enemy increasing in strength and boldness; and it appears from the records of these expeditions, which are not always successes even in the most limited sense, that the losses suffered by ourselves often exceed the losses we inflict. Finally, I object to this system, because I think the confidence of the hill tribes and their warlike spirit are quite as likely to be raised as lowered by contests in which they generally fire the last shot at a retreating foe. I am aware that the expeditions I thus deprecate are defended by a large number of our most experienced frontier administrators, on the grounds, so far as I understand them—1st, that they are the only means of dealing with barbarous races; and 2nd, that their success has been proved by results. With regard to the first argument, I cannot find that any other system has ever been tried with sufficient persistence to give it a chance; and with regard to the second, I cannot at all admit the results that have been obtained, after twenty-five years' frontier administration, as evidence of successful dealings with these tribes, seeing that European life is as insecure as ever beyond our immediate border; that we have recently been exposed to a series of successful raids and outrages from one tribe; and that in my short tenure of office I have twice had to consider the necessity of military operations against offending sections. I maintain that, under ordinary circumstances, the police should be able to cope with offences committed within our border, and, if necessary, follow up and inflict punishment beyond it. I also maintain that when troops are used, the expedition should be on a considerable scale, and productive of permanent results. At any rate, under no circumstances, should the troops be withdrawn until all opposition has absolutely ceased: they should never be required to turn their backs to an enemy who is still firing at them. And I think these expeditions, in which, while doing little to put our relations permanently on a better footing, we injure a whole tribe for the vicarious punishment of an individual, are particularly inapplicable where (as is so repeatedly and strongly represented to us by the Punjab authorities) there really is little or no tribal responsibility or control. In the Punjab Report of Oct. 1876, it is pointed out that the Belooch system of tribal responsibility cannot be applied to the Pathan tribes, because "every tribe is divided and sub-divided into numerous clans, each independent of the others, and yielding but small obedience to its own petty head-men." These tribes, it is stated, "only unite against a common enemy. Control exercised over such tribes through their chiefs would be impossible, for the chiefs do not exist." Yet it is to these very tribes that the system is applied of burning certain villages because other members of the tribe have committed outrages.

ACCORDING to a Times telegram of March 3 from Calcutta an important despatch, regulating the financial responsibilities of the Punjab Government, was published in last Saturday's Gazette. From this document it seems that the net excise revenue of the Punjab for 1877-78 has been estimated at Rs. 1,00,50,000, and for 1878-79 at Rs. 1,01,08,000. The Indian Government has assigned this revenue to the Punjab Government on the condition that the latter guarantee to the Imperial Treasury Rs. 9,70,000 for the year 1877-78, Rs. 9,90,000 for 1878-79, and Rs. 10,10,000 for 1879-80. The additional land tax having been roughly estimated at Rs. 425,000, and the new licence tax at Rs. 9,00,000, both these have been assigned to the Punjab Government for Rs. 12,00,000, or for any less sum actually collected. The net stamp revenue has been estimated at Rs. 25,85,000 for 1877-78, and Rs. 25,82,000 for 1878-79. The Indian Government making over this revenue, at Rs. 23,95,000 for 1877-78, at Rs. 24,15,000 for 1878-79, and at Rs. 24,35,000 for 1879-80. The net revenue arising from the administration of law and justice is estimated at Rs. 3,69,000 for 1877-78 and Rs. 3,64,000 for 1878-79. The Indian Government assigns this revenue for Rs. 3,80,000 per annum for 1877-8-9-80. The Government has, moreover, reserved for the Imperial Treasury half of the net revenue from excise, stamps, and from law and justice which may accrue in excess of the amounts fixed by contract with the Local Government, undertaking on the other hand, in the event of a deficit, to make good the half. The gross obligation of the Punjab Government on account of excise, stamps, law and justice, assessed with miscellaneous taxes now assigned will accordingly be for 1877-78, Rs. 39,90,000; for 1878-79, Rs. 52,30,000; for 1879-80, Rs. 52,80,000. For the land revenue expenditure the Indian Government has assigned Rs. 16,21,000 a year. The net total assignments, after various deductions, are thus estimated:—In 1877-78, at Rs. 64,63,000; in 1878-79, at Rs. 52,55,000; and in 1879-80, Rs. 53,10,000. These will, however, be subject to readjustment on receipt of the actual outturns.

FROM the same source we learn that the final terms imposed on the Jawakis were a fine of 5,000 rupees, the surrender of twenty-five English and twenty-five native rifles, and the banishment during the Government's pleasure of the four outlaws named in the proclamation.

A CALCUTTA telegram of March 3 states that a meeting attended by about 700 natives, was held at Calcutta the previous evening, at which resolutions were adopted opposing increased taxation and expressing the belief that both the ordinary and famine expenditure could be met by considerable retrenchments and by a more economical administration. It was unanimously resolved to petition Parliament in the sense of the resolutions carried at the meeting.

A Times telegram of yesterday's date from Calcutta gives the following news:—

A Darbar was held on Monday last at Peshawar, in presence of the whole garrison, for the purpose of receiving a public expression of submission on the part of the Jawakis. The Jawakis accordingly paid the fine of 5,000 rupees imposed by the Government, and surrendered twenty-five English and twenty-five native rifles, which included those stolen from Shaheote. The Lieutenant-Governor, in addressing the various Chiefs assembled, said that he had summoned them to-day to witness the submission of the Jawakis to the British Government; and that under pressure the Jawakis had now submitted to the terms proposed, expelling from their territories four of their people who had been chiefly concerned in acts of plunder and bloodshed. They had also surrendered the rifles demanded, had paid a fine of 5,000 rupees, and had further given hostages for future good behaviour. Although the Jawaki country might with justice have been permanently annexed, the Government had no desire to seize the possessions of its neighbours, and therefore had consented to restore these lands on condition of their submission. The conduct of the other sections of the Adam Khel tribes had been praiseworthy. "The Government," he continued "will not permit the peace which reigns within its own boundaries to be broken by turbulent neighbours; it possesses both the will and the power to punish violence and aggression, and will not hesitate to exercise that power promptly and severely." Many of the Chiefs there assembled received large allowances in cash, grants, jaghirs, and honours, conditional on service to the Government, and yet they had failed to manifest any really zealous loyalty. Their loyalty was not active but asleep. They were devoured by jealousies and enmities against each other. This was the cause of the troubles existing within and without the border of their dominions. The Government, however, would no longer tolerate such a state of things, but would demand from all those whom it had honoured and enriched loyal, hearty, and undivided service. At the conclusion of his speech the Lieutenant-Governor praised the conduct of the troops as admirable and deserving warm acknowledgment. At a public meeting of the natives, held here on the 2nd, there being no Europeans present, various resolutions condemnatory of Indian taxation and expenditure were passed, and it was finally agreed to memorialise Parliament on the subject.

SHORT SERVICE IN THE INDIAN ARMY.

IN spite of Mr. Hardy's sneer at "the universal knowledge of the honourable member for Kirkcaldy" we do not see much evidence of superior knowledge in the War Minister's reply to the objections raised last Monday by Sir George Campbell against the short-service system as applied to India. It was rather startling, for instance, to find Mr. Hardy setting Sir George right about the so-called "White Mutiny" of 1859, as being a mutiny, "not of English, but of alien troops." We certainly were not aware that the Company's European army at that date consisted chiefly of foreigners, unless Irishmen and Scotchmen are to be included in such a term. Nor is it easy to see how the case of men who mutinied because they resented the attempt to hand them over "like cattle" from one service to another, could be said to illustrate the working of any principle, whether of long or short service. And we wonder whether Sir G. Campbell will learn a lesson of modesty in argument from the curious way in which Mr. Hardy answered his contention, that men enlisted for service in India ought to stay there as long as they were fit for service. "They had been made soldiers in England at great expense, and while he admitted that the pressure of the expense bore heavily on India, he must submit, further, that England paid a larger proportion of the expense than she ought to be called upon to pay." From this it would appear that each succeeding Viceroy and Secretary for India has been wholly mistaken in attributing the growth of the Home charges on India to the action of the War-office, backed by the English Government. That boldness which Danton held to be the first and last principle in politics is certainly not lacking in our present Secretary for War.

Without claiming omniscience for Sir George Campbell, or questioning his capacity for boring the House of Commons, we may at least acquit him of knowing less than Mr. Hardy about the questions in dispute between them. Sir George, in fact, was standing on pretty firm ground when he rose to call attention to "the great difficulties resulting from the attempt to supply both the reserves in this country and the military service in India by a uniform system of enlistment for six years;" and urged the necessity of a twofold system of "short-service enlistment, with a view to passing rapidly into the reserve, without liability to service in India except in case of extreme urgency, and a long service enlistment to supply seasoned and experienced soldiers for Indian service." If it be borne in mind, as Mr. Hardy himself allows, that we send out only our "trained levies" to India, that is, men of a certain age who have already served a year or more at home, and that regiments ordered to India contain many men who have served, perhaps, half or two-thirds of their time already, it follows that India will have to import a fresh army about once in three years under the present system of enlistment for six years. The obvious costliness of such an arrangement is equalled by its inefficiency. Under the short service system, as Sir G. Campbell reminds us, the bulk of the soldiers supplied to India will return home just as they have become acclimatised and really fit for work. Mr. Hardy himself admits that eight years is the average time during which an English soldier retains his health and efficiency in India. But he thinks that many of these who now enlist for short service will be certain to re-enlist for a further term; and thus India will get, in fact, her due share of seasoned troops, at a considerable saving of expense, without any change in the system now adopted for the army at large. It may turn out so; but the experiment has still to be made, and many persons meanwhile doubt with Sir G. Campbell, whether a sufficient number of volunteers for further service will ever be secured under the present system. And if the time-expired men should volunteer in any numbers for a longer term, how does Mr. Hardy expect to keep the Home Reserves recruited to their proper strength? And what will ultimately become of the re-enlisted men? They will hardly care to re-enlist without the certainty of a pension or its equivalent at the end of their twelve years' service, and this the War Minister seems to put aside as impossible; for though he allows that enlistment for twelve years would involve a pension, he asks whether Sir G. Campbell is "prepared to undertake that responsibility?"

The difficulty of applying the short-service system of the home army to the special requirements of Indian service reveals itself in Mr. Hardy's statement that the War and the India-office are even now considering the whole question. He has no doubt, indeed, that they will come to "a satisfactory conclusion." Satisfactory perhaps from the British tax-payer's point of view; but is it likely to prove quite as satisfactory to those who consider the well-being of our Indian Empire? Will any modification of the short-service system give India a good working substitute for the local British army of former days? To our thinking there is only one way of escape from the slough in which we have been floundering ever since 1860, and that is by restoring to India the separate army which was broken up with a haste that sowed the seeds of a long repentance. If our statesmen had the courage of their secret convictions, they would cease to waste time over insoluble problems, and leave India free to import soldiers for her own use on such terms as may best suit her own interests and theirs.

THROUGH KWETTA TO KANDAHAR.

The following extracts from the Route-Book of Lieutenant-General E. Kaye have been kindly placed at our disposal. They will be found of special interest at this moment:—

Through the Bolun Pass. Extracted from the Route-Book of a Subaltern Officer, Fourth Troop, Third Brigade, Bengal Horse Artillery, attached to Shah Shoojah's Force in 1839.

29th March, 1839.—From Dadur to Kundae or Kundaeloun, twelve miles; road stony. Our course at first lay rather east of north, but shortly inclined to west; and, on entering the gorge of the hills about five miles from last camp, the road made a detour to the left, lying nearly due west for two miles; then south-west, three miles; after which it took a westerly direction for about a mile; and the same distance to S.W. brought us into camp in a stony plain, surrounded by hills. Coarse grass, plenty of water: we crossed a small stream eight or nine times.

30th March.—Kirtah, ten miles and a-half.—Road for the most part stony and bad; crossed the stream some seventeen or eighteen times. After leaving last camp road turned to the north of west; our course varied from north-west to north. Kirtah about a coss N.E. of camp. Coarse grass and forage for camels.

31st March.—Beebe Nancee.—Started at eight P.M. on 30th; arrived one A.M., 31st; distance, nine miles. We marched in rear of infantry brigade; road rather better, over a stony plain, for six miles; then passed a small gorge, and crossed another plain. Direction of march at starting N.N.W., then inclined gradually to W., until last mile lay nearly W.N.W. Encamping ground stony; water, coarse grass.

April 1st.—Ab-i-goom, nine miles and a-half.—Started at eight P.M., 31st; road stony; footing for horses bad; gradual ascent of about eight hundred feet; plenty of water and coarse grass. Direction of road, N.N.W. and N.W. Forage for camels scarce.

April 2nd.—Sir-i-Bolun, nine miles.—Started at six P.M., and arrived at 10.15 P.M. on 1st. Gradual ascent; last mile or so a heavy tug; big stones, bad footing, put in eight horses; encamping ground stony; close to the source of the stream Bolun, which gushes out of the rock to the left of road. Direction of route, nearly west. Grain becoming scarce in camp; the army ahead reduced to half rations; climate improving.

April 4th.—Siriab, twenty-eight miles.—Marched from Sir-i-Bolun at one P.M. on 3rd. About two miles and a-half from last encamping ground entered the zig-zags of the Bolun Pass; road rather narrow, gradually opened out. About nine miles from Sir-i-Bolun came to a Ghat about one hundred yards in ascent, and the same in descent.

Encamped at Munzilgah in the Dusht-i-Bedowlut, about two or three miles beyond the Ghat. The road was rather better than on the previous days in the Pass, but stony until within two miles of the Ghat; a dead ascent as far as the Ghat; put in eight horses about half-way; surmounted the ascent without any difficulty, the horses galloping up, with guns (or waggons), and limbers.

Spence had been sent in advance on morning of 3rd with a strong party to occupy the heights on each side of the Pass. Rain fell in the evening and during the night. Some musketry firing about ten P.M., and a general turn out, but without cause.

Marched at four A.M. to Siriab, some fifteen miles; arrived about 9.30 A.M.; road firm, but broken and uneven; grass and water at Siriab; no water at Munzilgah. Horses put on half feed—two and a-half seers of dal.

Direction of march from Sir-i-Bolun to the Ghat variable from W.N.W. to S.W.; after crossing the Ghat gradually inclined to the north, till the latter part of our march to Siriab, when the direction was about due north.

April 5th.—Halted. The Candahar Vakeel came in to propose terms. Sir John Keane says he will dictate terms under walls of Candahar.

Fighting men reduced to three-quarters, camp followers to half seer; report that the troops in advance are, soldiers on half, followers on quarter seer.

6th.—Kiwetta, nine miles. A little east of north; road much cut up by small and deep water courses; the cavalry division and Sale's Brigade encamped here. The 4th Brigade and Artillery Park also marched in this day from Siriab. Fighting men and followers put on half and quarter rations, as in the Army of the Indus. Fields of wheat and lucerne.

7th April, 1839, Head Quarters.—Horse Artillery, Cavalry, Sale's Brigade, and the Shah's Force marched from Kiwetta to Kooshab, ten and a-half miles. Direction N.N.W.; several water courses to cross. About six miles from camp commenced the ascent of a low range—a branch of the Tukattoo hill; a steep descent the other side, a fine clear stream issuing from the foot of the hill; fields of green wheat.

8th April.—Hyderzye, eleven miles.—Road lay along the foot of the hills somewhat east of north for about two miles; then turned more to the west, and crossed the valley; after which we ascended slightly, and continued our march through a succession of low, clay hills; road much intersected by deep nullahs, some dry, some with water; two of them exceedingly difficult, with high and steep banks. At the last nullah locked the wheels, and held on with drag ropes for the descent; horses took up guns and limbers easy. Green wheat; plenty of water; herbs similar to mint and thyme in smell; daisies, and some wild flowers resembling others of Europe, observed on this march, as well as previously in Valley of Shawl. At Siriab, tulips and species of ferns.

April 9th.—Hykutzye, nine miles.—Road much better than that of yesterday, a little east of north; orders issued against cutting wheat; a quantity of snow on northern face of Tukattoo.

April 10th.—Encamped on left bank of River Lora, seven miles; direction nearly due west; road good; no grass; bought boosa (chopped straw) for horses. Tukattoo bore S.E.

April 11th.—Crossed the Lora; banks steep; unhorsed and let down the guns with ropes. Encamped near Kilah Abdoolah Khan, six and a-half miles; road good; direction N.W.; the Khojeh Amran hills a short distance to the north; plentiful supply of water; wheat in ear.

April 12th.—Halted; the Engineers making a road for the guns through the hills. The 1st Brigade marched to take possession of the Pass (Munzil-gan, 5,800 feet above the sea; camp not above 4,200).

April 14th.—Marched seven miles, and encamped in the mouth of the Kojuck Pass; direction of march north-west for the first four miles, when we rounded the foot of a low branch of the hills; our road then inclined more to the right, due north. Road pretty good; last mile or so rather stony; Kila Abdoolah Khan some three miles distant, S. 18 deg. W.; Macan's regiment left to garrison the fort.

April 16th.—Crossed the Khojeh Amran Hills and encamped in the Kojuck Pass, on the western face of the range. For six miles and a half the road led to the north; a continued but gradual ascent; low ranges on either side; the pass narrowing by degrees. After marching this distance we entered the defile, exceedingly narrow and steep; the road soon turned to the left and brought us to the summit of the first chain; we then descended and ascended the second chain. About fifty yards of either ascent, just at the summit, very steep, and we required the assistance of drag ropes to raise the guns and bodies of waggons. The descent of the second range also steep and difficult; took out the horses, and let the carriages down by drag-ropes. The highest point of the hills over which we passed 7,000 feet above the sea, and about 4,000 above the plains to the North-West. The ascent and descent this day were, either, at least, 2,500, the descent nearer 3,000. There were a few springs on the side of the hill insufficient to water the horses. At Choki (about four miles in advance of our camp) there was water sufficient, but we knew not of this till too late. Grass and wild oats, but in no great quantity.

April 17th.—Marched at half-past four A.M., and joined the Cavalry Brigade, seventeen miles. Five hours on the road, a descent nearly the whole way; passed the camp of the 1st Brigade near the mouth of the Pass, about two miles and a half from our old ground; it was intended that we should encamp near some tanks about seven miles and a-half on the road. We watered there on the march, but there was not enough for a day's supply; so we continued our route. Road for the most part good, but latterly heavy.

April 18th.—Halted. Sir John Keane and head-quarters came up from Chokee or Chummin. The Park and 4th Brigade commenced crossing the hills. Reported that the Candahar Chiefs are building up the gateways. The Atchekzes and Kaukers very troublesome. Only seven days' supply left for man and beast.

The leading column of Bombay troops reached Kwetta on 16th. This place is called Dandi Golai in General Orders, 3,210 feet above the sea. General direction of our march hither N.W. 15 deg. W. Water from Kahrez, but a great scarcity of it and much distress; good grass and wild oats.

April 21st.—Kila Puttoola, nine miles N.W.—Road pretty good, but somewhat cut up by dry watercourses; green wheat distributed to mounted corps; water from Kahrez, very brackish. The whole camp much distressed, as the supply failed during the day.

April 22nd.—Marched eleven miles and a-half.—Road rough and uneven among the Gautie hills; the greater part an ascent; direction about N.W. Troops distressed for water on the march; men and horses drinking at every foul black pool. Encamped at Mela-Manda. Green wheat; water from Kahrez; plenty of water three miles from camp. The Cavalry Brigade went on to Tukht-i-pool.

April 23rd.—Camp on the Durrge river, fifteen miles.—Road uneven, rough, and stony; many ascents and descents among a rocky chain of hills; country barren and unpromising; direction of march for nine or ten miles nearly W.N.W.; then about N.W.; turned off to the west, and a mile brought us into camp. Plenty of water, but rather brackish; grass or rather a species of wild oats. A hill called Leila Muynoon lies N.E. 10 deg. N.

Mr. McNaghten, General Simpson, and the Padshah lost their road (!), and went on to Deh-i-Hajee; we are consequently ordered thither; horses get Oorad-ka-dal; bad food.

Marched in the evening to Deh-i-Hajee, eight miles.—Road good; direction N.N.W., until on rounding the foot of a hill, road turned due north.

April 24th.—Candahar, seventeen miles.—Passed Kooshab, about eight miles from last ground; direction so far about N.W. Road good; a considerable quantity of green wheat and barley; crops good. The road from Kooshab to Candahar rather bad for guns; several mud walls or banks to cut through; crossed a low ghaut, from which we first saw the city of Candahar. Our road then lay generally through the suburbs. Extensive crops, and a considerable number of fruit trees. The country around the town has a far more pleasing aspect than any we have hitherto traversed. No opposition being offered the Shah visited the city the day after our arrival, and guards were posted at the gateways. The Candahar Chiefs had fled in different directions; Sir John Keane, much annoyed at the Shah having reached Candahar in advance of himself and head-quarters.*

April 26th.—Head-quarters arrived.

April 27th.—Cavalry and Rifle Brigade arrived.

* This explains why the Shah and the Envoy lost their way on the 23rd, and found themselves at Deh-i-Hajee that morning, so much in advance of the Commander-in-Chief. It was desired that the Shah should enter his Southern capital escorted by his own troops (raised and officered by the British, and with 1-3 B.H.A. attached), in accordance with the programme of Government.—E. K.

We hear from Assam that the pruning of the tea plants is generally well advanced for the season.

THE INDIAN ARMS BILL.

The Englishman remarks that the object of the Government, or, at least, the only object warranted by the arguments which the Government has put forward in defence of the Bill, is to prevent the importation of military weapons and weapons of a character which are likely to be abused by the predatory classes. The higher class of sporting weapons obviously do not fall within this category. It is true, indeed, that a rifle which will give a tiger his quicquid will kill a man with equal or greater facility. But there is no reason to suppose that weapons costing two hundred or three hundred rupees a piece are imported, or are likely to be imported, for military purposes, while it is morally certain that nothing but accident will ever render arms of this expensive character available to the predatory classes. Now, over and above the duty of fifty rupees a piece on guns, the Bill contemplates the imposition of a whole series of duties on the appurtenances of guns. The effect of these supplementary duties will, we are informed by experts, be to raise the total tax on sporting rifles, as usually imported into this country, with their cases and appurtenances, to something like a hundred and twenty or a hundred and thirty rupees, while, as against the class of weapons which it is really important to keep out of the country, they will hardly tell at all. The Bill, in short, if it becomes law, will bear with special severity upon the very class of weapons, the introduction of which into India is not merely harmless but positively useful. If it were intended to put down sport, this feature of the Bill would be intelligible. It is not intelligible on the supposition that it is merely intended to tax sport for fiscal purposes, for prohibitive duties such as these defeat themselves. But it is, as far as we know, the intention of the Government neither to put down, nor to tax, sport. The tale of human lives, let alone cattle, destroyed by beasts of prey in India is already heavy enough to make it an important object to encourage, rather than check, their destruction; and the increase of revenue which, under any circumstances, a tax on sporting weapons could be expected to yield, is so trifling as to be undeserving of serious consideration. We have not referred to the interests of the trade in the matter, for, in the face of larger public interests, they are of minor moment. There can be little doubt, however, that the effect of these multifarious, and, in the aggregate, oppressive duties would be to crush the trade, and though the individual interests involved are comparatively few, there is no excuse, in the absence of really grave public reasons, for even this measure of wrong.

AN INDIAN PARLIAMENT.

The Bombay Gazette thinks it will be considered mad by many respectable gentlemen who have walked circumspectly for years in the ways of Government if it asserts that the time has now come when the non-official community should make a stand for their rights. As the experiment of introducing the franchise in England was first tried in the large towns, the same experiment ought to be made in the great cities of India. The public opinion of India ought to have fair and effectual representation. Official domination ought now to be modified. The intelligence of India is not concentrated in official circles, and we claim the franchise for the representation of the intelligence of all India. The success which has attended the working of the Municipality of Bombay ought to be a guarantee that an Indian Parliament would work well. We do not propose that there shall be popular representation in the form with which we are familiar in England; but the franchise should at first be extended only to municipalities and important public associations like the Chambers of Commerce. Let such a Parliament, which would be fairly representative of all the intelligent classes, meet in Calcutta, Allahabad, or Poona, and there would be no further necessity for officials telling the non-official community that if there is bad legislation it is its own fault, because it did not speak soon enough. If Lord Lytton will use his influence to establish such a Parliament, he will make a reputation worth the creation of many Orders of the Indian Empire. The days of obedient official majorities in Legislative Councils cannot last for ever. Already, we believe, they are numbered.

THE LICENCE TAX.

The Englishman notes that the maximum fee which can be imposed under the Bill has been raised from Rs. 200 to Rs. 500, the next below it in the scale being Rs. 200. We expected to find some explanation of the reason for this change in the report of the Select Committee. But all that it says on the subject is that the change has been made. The measure has been further assimilated to an income-tax by the introduction of a provision that where a person carries on business in more than one district he shall take out a licence in each district, with reference to his "earnings" in such district, a provision wholly inapplicable to a licence tax, which is a tax, not on "earnings" but on callings; which, though it might be otherwise equitable in the case of some callings, is likely to prove oppressive in that of others, and which is at the best objectionable, as tending to multiply the liability to taxation by a purely arbitrary factor. Why a man who has one branch of his business at Hughli and another at Bardwan should have to pay twice as much as a man who has one branch of his business at Hughli and another at Serampur, we cannot see. Having refused to draw the line at provinces, why draw it at districts? The tax being a provincial tax, for provincial and imperial, not for local purposes, there is no just ground for requiring a man to take out more than one license for a particular calling. The sub-division of the country into districts is entirely arbitrary; to make taxation proportional, as this provision tends to make it, to the degree of minuteness of that sub-division, is absurd. The notion probably is that the greater the number of districts in which a man carries on business the larger his profits are; and this may be true in many cases, though it is not invariably true. But, as we have already observed, the tax is not an income-tax; and the attempt to assimilate it to an income-tax in the case of a few individuals is both invidious and opposed to the original intention of the Government of India. It is simply iniquitous that a person who earns a profit of Rs. 50,000 a year divided between five districts should pay five times as much as a person who earns the same annual sum in one district. Yet this is only an example of what the Bill sanctions.

THE NEW LAND-CESS.

The Pioneer observes that the Government treats the land as if, in common with trade, it had hitherto paid nothing. It imposes what it believes to be a burden of two per cent. on incomes from land, and then balances it by a like impost on trade. In all justice, the mercantile and professional classes, the petty traders and artisans, should first be made to bear their share of the expenses of government. It is unreasonable that incomes derived from the land should be taxed from eight to twelve per cent., while incomes derived from trade cannot be taxed more than two per cent. Under what principle of justice has the sum of Rs. 200 been taken as the maximum to be paid by any individual or company? No one benefits more from the administration of the Police, the Public Works, the Educational, and the Postal Departments than rich traders and bankers; yet it is proposed that men making lakhs of rupees in the year shall not be asked for more than Rs. 200, a sum which every landowner with an income of Rs. 2,000 per annum has now to pay. Surely this is making friends with the mammon of unrighteousness. It is to be expected that the principles now laid down will yield a crop of difficulties hereafter. In the present measure the Government is acting as if each class were starting fair, and were equally weighted with taxation. Hence, if after a year or two it may seem advisable to raise the rate under the licence tax, it will hardly be possible to do so without also imposing a fresh rate on the land. It may be true that the professional and official classes are not so liable to be thrown on the hands of Government in famine time, and are therefore not under the same obligation to contribute to the famine fund. But the classes named benefit as much as others from the police, schools, and roads which have heretofore been maintained for them at the expense of the land. So far as is known, they have contributed nothing hitherto to these purposes. There is much fallacious reasoning and jugglery in all this. It is true that the land should contribute to famine expenditure. But why should it, and it alone, pay for the police who guard the merchant's wealth, for the roads which are the life of his trade, for the schools which educate his children? So also as regards the official class, which, above all others, makes use of the schools towards the support of which it contributes nothing. Before proceeding to apportion the famine charges the burden of existing local rates should be adjusted. The exemption of the professional and official classes from the famine cess may be right. But on what grounds are they exempted from all local taxation? The landowners may have no right to ask that these classes should contribute to the famine insurance. They have an undoubted title to demand that they should bear a fair share of the charges for police, education, and roads. The conclusion is this: that the Government measures do not adjust the burden of taxation as between provinces. That as regards classes the land is unfairly treated. That if the land is to bear its share of famine charges, as undoubtedly it should, the commercial classes are bound to pay their share of local rates. That the professional and official classes, if exempt from famine taxation, should also pay their share of local rates.

PROPOSED RAILWAY BRIDGE OVER THE HUGHLI.

Some further details of the scheme of the Port Commissioner for a railway bridge between Howrah and Calcutta and a central railway station for the East Indian and Eastern Bengal Railway will probably prove interesting to our readers. The leading features of the scheme are the construction of a large warehouse within the jetty inclosure, with an arched roof sufficiently strong to carry a railway for passenger traffic, the goods traffic being confined to the low level; the construction of a brick viaduct along the Strand-road on the Port Commissioners' lands, as far as Ahiritolah Ghat, to carry the lines of the East Indian and Eastern Bengal Railways; the construction of a bridge across the river at Ahiritolah, and a line on the Howrah bank, joining the main line of the East Indian Railway about two miles from Howrah, and the construction of an iron viaduct immediately above the present tramway along the new riverside road from Ahiritolah to Chitpore, to connect with the main lines of the Eastern Bengal Railway. The buildings to be constructed within the jetty enclosure would consist of a series of warehouses with arched roofs, strong enough to carry railway traffic. Merchants who rented them could have their goods sent direct to the godowns from the jetty, or loaded direct from the godowns into railway waggons. Exports could also be received direct into the godowns and removed from them to the ship by the jetty tramway. The station would consist of a large hall 800 feet by 175 feet, with abundant platform space, for arrival and departure, for both lines. From the north end of the station the line would be carried on a brick viaduct to Ahiritolah Ghat, bifurcating at Nimtolah Ghat, one line going to the bridge above the Burning Ghat, and the other to Nimtolah Ghat, where the iron viaduct would begin. The incline, to connect the high and low levels for goods traffic, would commence immediately below the Calcutta end of the bridge, and be carried parallel to the high level viaduct on the west side, as far as the Mayo Hospital. The bridge would cross the river from a point 230 feet north of the Burning Ghat to Sulkea Ghat, and would consist of six spans of 310 feet each, the line being continued to the proposed station by a brick viaduct along the Strand bank. The working of the passenger traffic would be left entirely in the hands of the Railway Companies concerned, who would run direct into the station with their own engines, the Commissioners concerning themselves only with the goods traffic to be taken along the low level tramway. The total probable revenue, from warehouse rent, passenger and goods traffic, and the additional jetty traffic, is estimated at Rs. 7,50,000 per annum, the capital expenditure at seventy-five lakhs, the annual charges, including interest on capital and sinking fund, at Rs. 5,33,025, leaving a net revenue of Rs. 1,67,975 to the credit of the Port Trust. It is also proposed to construct a line of tramway along the Strand-road, to connect the Commissariat, Ordnance and Public Works' godowns with the jetties and railways.—Englishman.

Miscellaneous.

LEGISLATIVE.—The meeting of the Legislative and Executive Councils of the Viceroy, which was fixed for Wednesday, the 20th instant, have been postponed to Saturday, the 23rd instant.

TEST EXAMINATION.—The general Test Examination is now being held in Madras and the district. Of the 4,000 candidates who have applied to be examined, 1,000 appeared in Madras.

OCTROI TAX.—An octroi tax is to be introduced in Madras to help the municipal revenue, and the Hon. Mr. Coleman has obtained leave to introduce the necessary Bill into the Legislative Council.

THE NAGA COUNTRY.—The Chief Commissioner of Assam was to have left Samaguting on January 31, accompanied by Captains Williamson and Trotter, with an escort of one hundred men under Lieutenant Macgregor, to march across the hills to Wokha.

LIEUT.-COL. W. RICHARDS.—It is said that Lieut.-Col. W. Richards, Chief Garrison Instructor at Lucknow, will have to resign that appointment, owing to his regiment, the 55th, not being borne on the Indian establishment.

COLONEL FRASER.—Colonel Fraser, Secretary to the North-West Government in the D.P.W., joins General Strachey and Mr. Rendel, the Consulting Engineer to the E. I. R., at Benares, and accompanies them to Delhi on their tour of inspection.

DEATH OF DR. CAMPBELL.—We much regret to hear of the death at Almorah, on the 5th instant, from inflammation of the lungs, of Mr. Donald Campbell, C.S., Assistant Commissioner in Kumaon. Mr. Campbell, we believe, was only twenty-nine years old, a promising officer who will be sincerely lamented by many friends.

MR. DALGLEISH.—According to the Lahor paper, Mr. Dalgleish, of the Central Asian Trading Company, about whose safety fears were entertained, has arrived safely at Leh from Yarkund. Mr. Dalgleish is now pressing on towards India with his consignment, but he makes but slow progress on account of stress of weather.

SIND, PUNJAB, AND DELHI RAILWAY COMPANY.—It is rumoured that the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi Railway Company contemplate running a through fast passenger train between Lahor and Ghaziabad, in direct connection with the East Indian slow train to Allahabad and Calcutta. This service is to supplant the present mixed and miserable slow trains stopping at Umballa.

TAXES ON GAME.—The Hon. the Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Commissioner of the North-West Provinces has sanctioned the levy of the following taxes on game brought for sale or sold within the limits of the Fyzabad Municipality during the "close" season, i.e., between the 1st April and 31st August of each year, viz.:—On every partridge eight annas; on every hare Rs. 1; on every peafowl Rs. 2.

INDIAN STATISTICS.—For some time past, says the Pioneer, there have been painful discrepancies between the Indian statistics, especially those of area and population, published by the several administrations here, and those laid before Parliament. Some of these discrepancies, indeed, are explained away with much ingenuity by the Department of Revenue, Agriculture, and Commerce; for the correction of others, which are inexplicable, the Government of India will shortly pass orders.

LITERARY PATRONAGE.—It is officially notified, that in accordance with instructions received from her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to direct that officers in the service of Government who may desire to solicit Government patronage, other than that of the Local Government, for literary or other works, shall apply to the Government of India, and not to the Secretary of State.

MILITARY.—The squadron of the 4th Punjab Cavalry, under command of Captain Money, now at Quetta, is to be relieved by one of similar strength, of the 3rd Punjab Cavalry. The headquarters of the 4th Punjab Cavalry march from Dera Ghazi Khan to Dera Ismail Khan, on the left bank of the Indus, commencing their march on the 15th February and expecting to arrive at Dera Ismail Khan on the 28th current.

THE SALT DUTIES.—The salt revenue of the official year has not turned out such a good trump card as the Government expected. Down to the end of September the collections only exceeded the average, for the same period of the last five years, by about 12½ lakhs. The inland revenue on salt is actually falling off; the figures down to the 22nd of January show a decrease from the year before of 2½ lakhs. In August last Government was rejoicing over an increase in the revenue from Bengal and Northern India salt of over 22½ lakhs.

POST OFFICE.—Probably many more letters miscarry on their way to the Post-office than in course of delivery. Holding this creed, the postal authorities are about to adopt a system by which, on payment of half an anna, one may obtain a receipt for his letter at the post-office window. Our impression is, however, that the system, though it only provides a certificate of safe posting, may diminish eventually the receipts for registration fees, unless the fee is reduced. In England it has just been lowered from 4d. to 2d. Why not here from four annas to two?—Pioneer.

ACTION AGAINST THE "CIVIL AND MILITARY GAZETTE."—The suit brought by Mr. Horace Herbert against the Civil and Military Gazette was withdrawn on the 12th inst., before the Deputy Commissioner of Lahor, on the proprietors of that paper intimating that the comments made in the columns of the Civil and Military Gazette, regarding the failure of the Punjab Bank, were not intended to cast the personal imputations on the plaintiff's character alleged in the plaint, and that they regretted that a construction should have been put upon them which was not intended to be conveyed. The arrangement thus arrived at was characterised by the Deputy-Commissioner as eminently satisfactory.—Pioneer, Feb. 16.

INDIGO PLANTERS.—At a meeting of the Behar Indigo Planters' Association at Mozufferpur on the 28th ult., a detailed and strict code of rules was adopted and signed by all the leading planters present previous to being published and circulated for signature amongst the general body of the members. The organisation of the Association may now be considered an accomplished fact, and planters may be congratulated on it. The readiness with which, in several instances, members have obeyed the award of their District Committees even when very adverse to their immediate interests and wishes, proves the success of the Association in one of its main objects, viz., "the improvement of the relations between planter, zemindar, and ryot."—Englishman, Feb. 8.

THE LATE DR. KURZ.—The death is announced at Penang of Dr. Kurz, for many years Curator of the Herbarium of the Botanical Garden at Calcutta. Dr. Kurz had never thoroughly recovered from the effects of an illness contracted in exploring the botany of the Nicobar Islands about three years ago, but unwilling to interrupt the progress of his work on the forest flora of Burma on which he was engaged for Government, he deferred seeking the change and rest which he so much required; and it was not until November last that he took leave. Hoping that a short voyage would restore him to health, Dr. Kurz started on a trip to Burma and the Straits. His untimely death deprives botanical science of one of its most devoted and disinterested followers, adds another name to the distinguished roll of martyrs in its cause, and deprives Government of a good and faithful servant.

MAJOR-GENERAL HENRY E. L. THUILLIER, C.S.I.—When a man has served his country for upwards of forty-five years, with credit to himself and the approbation of his superiors, he must be admitted to have done good service to the State. Major-General Thuillier entered the old Bengal Artillery so long ago as December, 1832, and it is upwards of forty years ago since he first joined the Survey Department, in which he has continued ever since, rising steadily through all the successive grades by his own application and ability, until he reached the head of the department in March 1861, so that he has superintended the working of this important branch of the State work for nearly eighteen years. Every man who occupies such a position must expect to make enemies, and General Thuillier has not escaped the general fate; but he can rest assured that the accusations made against him have not in the least affected his position in the esteem of the general public, whilst the Government he served so well has lately borne public testimony to its appreciation of his services.—Charivari.

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

I have before me at this present moment a report on public instruction in the Madras Presidency for 1875-76. It is not altogether uninteresting, and some precious grains of information may be gleaned from it by those who are fond of noting the progress of educational matters. In the first place, the report clearly shows that the existing number of collegiate schools is not enough for the Presidency and its wants. I am not prepared to say a collegiate school is needed in every district, but in Madura and Salem they are really required, and at Berhampore and Kurnool are matters of necessity. Kurnool and its stagnation struck Lord Napier so forcibly that Government interfered, and two small taluq schools were established, only, however, to disappear in a short space of time. Middle-class schools on the whole are in a very unsatisfactory state. After some examination it is easy to see how reduced they are in number, and the general improvement appears to be small. The Lawrence Asylum is the only middle-class school in the Nilghiris. It is well-conducted, and from personal observation I thought the inmates looked healthy and happy. They delight in the experimental farm at Lovedale, where each boy gets a small plot of ground "which he cultivates under the supervision of the Farm Bailiff." The Lawrence Asylum does much credit to Mr. Chisholm; it looks well suited to the site on which it is built, and coming upon it amidst the dark droogs and sharp windings of the hills, it reminds one, as I have said before, of an Italian monastery in the Alps as you near the Italian lakes, having left the loftier peaks behind you. In the Tinnevely district there are some excellent middle-class schools, amongst which the Church Mission Society's schools hold a conspicuous place. It is curious to mark how strongly the Christian religion has taken hold of the inhabitants of this district. There are entire villages where every man is a Christian, and where Christianity has been handed down from father to son for some time back. Everywhere in Tinnevely you come across the little mission stations which start up before your weary eye when perhaps you least expect to meet with human habitations. Not far from Mengnanapuram the scene is a wild and barren one. It has been well described of late. The endless range of sandy waste, the sand hillocks rising one behind the other, off which the wind blows the dust in clouds into the circular hollows below, the lonely stunted palm trees, the thorny acacia and withered banian, have each and all a dreary, melancholy effect. Beyond lies perhaps a wide marsh or piduwei, on whose edge waves a thick fringe of reeds and rushes seven feet high, and "it imparts a singular appearance to the whole marsh, as if ten thousand brooms were waving over it." At sunset these tall tufts of coarse rush (out of which mats are manufactured) are reddened by the dying light and stand out clearly like points of flame against a dark back-ground of tree and distant bramble. Again, at night when the moon rises and touches them with pallid rays, they wave, and sway, and rock in the wind with a shivering uncertain movement, and look weird and ghostlike. It is in this region of sand and marsh that the Church Mission Society has established its churches and schools, and indeed has turned a "barren desert" into a fine and flourishing village. The native Christians of Tinnevely fully appreciate the benefits to be derived from education, and contribute largely to the native church fund. In Madras itself we have a goodly number of schools, and female education especially has had no little attention bestowed upon it. In Peter's-road, Royapettah, a school for Mohammedan girls was opened in April, 1875, by the Princess of Arcot. It was called after Lady Hobart, as she was warmly interested in the institution and gave it a donation of some 10,000 rupees. It is justly said that "much mischief is done in the elementary and middle classes of many schools in various parts of the Presidency by the employment, as English teachers, of men who have passed for the fourth and fifth grades, but whose knowledge of English is so limited that they cannot speak half a dozen consecutive sentences." Women make good teachers for young boys, and East Indians might be employed with advantage for this purpose.—Englishman Correspondent.

STATION TALK.

MADRAS, Jan. 26.—The romantic story of Richard Nash, (Lance) Sergeant of her Majesty's 67th Regiment and acting organist of the Cathedral here, is drawing to a conclusion. A gentleman by birth (report says he is the son of a clergyman in Jersey), a good musician, and a man of education and intelligence, Richard Nash belongs to a class of men to whom respectability is odious, and a good character a weight too heavy to be borne. He was fairly off in Madras, had excellent prospects and plenty of work, had had ample experience of the straits and miseries to which ill-conduct brings a man, and had apparently settled down into respectability and decorum. His sudden disappearance from the scene caused considerable surprise, but he remained unheard of till the other day, when he was arrested at Puna, where he had enlisted in the 2nd Queen's. To look back on the man's career, with evil rumours and ugly facts to guide one, is not a pleasant task. Doubtless, he has been placed (by his own fault) in a false position; but after his numerous backslidings he was lucky enough, thanks to the kindness and consideration, it is said, of his Colonel, to find himself in comparative prosperity. Why he disappeared from Madras when he did is a mystery. It is rumoured that he was seen in Puna in various disguises before he surrendered himself. The charges against him are serious, and he is too old an offender to deserve either consideration or pity. An offender of a different stamp, Vencatachellaputhy Chetty, cash-keeper of the Bangalor Bank, is to take his trial at the ensuing sessions at the Nundidroog Court on charges of criminal breach of trust by a servant, theft and forgery. The defalcations had existed for some time, but were cleverly concealed by the cash-keeper, who replaced the money when an examination of the cash was made, "abstracting" it again at the first opportunity. Such attempts are too common to attract much notice. The petty thefts which take place daily at Bangalor and Madras in ordinary households, if not serious, are vexatious and annoying, and they cannot be punished easily like the graver offences. But, putting theft out of the question, how wearisome are the trifling difficulties employers meet with on all sides when there is a press of work, or anything to be done promptly and well. The new Master and Servants Bill, introduced by Mr. Coleman, but which is pigeon-holed until we know what is to be done about Mr. Whitley Stokes's Bill, tends to simplify relations between employers and employed. "The object of the Bill is to give jurisdiction to magistrates to determine disputes arising between masters and servants, and to punish servants convicted of misconduct in the course of their service, or of unlawfully terminating their engagements." It is true that to sue an offending servant in the civil courts demands more time, trouble, annoyance and expenditure of horse-flesh (in Madras especially, where each man has an office to attend to, and the distances are great) than people care to face. Many an offender escapes scot-free because he is aware of these difficulties, and chooses his time and opportunity well, and anything which tends to simplify such difficulties must prove beneficial. On the other hand, servants have an easy means of redress, and have nothing to complain of. They can, if capriciously dismissed, obtain compensation by appealing to a magistrate; but this is of far rarer occurrence than the constant breaches of contract by servants, an offence they think little or nothing of committing. I gather from the experience of many residents in Bangalor that the difficulties experienced there by masters are very frequent, if not serious.—Englishman Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE SALT DEPARTMENT.—We understand that the Secretary of State has sanctioned the appointment of a separate Commissioner of Salt Revenue in Madras on a salary of Rs. 2,000 per mensem, and has asked the Government of India for an early expression of its opinion on the important question of the substitution of an excise for the present system of monopoly.

RAVAGES OF LOCUSTS.—From several districts in Madras reports have been sent in to Government of much injury done to the crops by the ravages of locusts and kindred insects. The crops chiefly attacked seem to have been ragi and bajrie when just appearing above ground; and the partiality of the destruction is very remarkable. In some cases one field has been severely damaged while another close to it has escaped intact. The locusts seem to have come in large numbers since the end of November, and to have travelled into Cuddapah from the north or east. The ryots say they have tried night fires as a means of exterminating them, but that the insects will not come to them.

RAILWAYS TO PONDICHERY.—Pondicherry will probably soon be the terminus of two lines of railway, for a Madras contemporary tells us that "certain native merchants in the Southern districts have resolved to start a company to construct a railway line between Pondicherry and the south end of the South Indian Railway line, at the Palar. It is intended to run this line from the French settlement through the large salt-producing tracts of Mercanum, Chenempett, and Cheyoor, by which a distance of thirty miles will be saved between Pondicherry and Madras. The route which the Pondicherry Railway Company will take to connect their line with that of the South Indian Railway is a circuitous one, while the route of the proposed company, if it is at all launched, will shorten the distance between the presidency capital and the French settlement."

GOLD MINING.—A meeting was lately held by the members of the Alpha Gold Mining Company at Utakanand, when three new directors, gentlemen well known in Madras, were appointed. The members present expressed their conviction that, considering the splendid results shown by the working of the Alpha Reef by the Prince of Wales Company, which has indisputably proved the existence of gold in paying quantities, the time has arrived when active operations should be resumed on the Alpha. It is hoped that the company will be worked with greater care than before. Everybody is looking forward to large profits, and with perseverance and a good haul of gold-producing quartz, the anticipations entertained may not prove Utopian dreams.

COIMBATORE.—Mr. Andrew Wedderburn, Collector of Coimbatore, and the senior member of the Madras Civil Service, will retire next month, at the conclusion of thirty years of actual service. His supersession in the matter of getting into the Board, Secretariat, and Council, by several of his juniors, gave him some claim to their generous consideration, and hence it was that last April, when he should, under the service rules, have retired, he was allowed an extra year as a special case. That he accepted this dubious boon was surprising, as he had a handsome fortune. He had just entered his fifty-seventh year, but looks ten years younger. He is descended from Walter de Wedderburn, who flourished in the time of Edward I., and died nearly six centuries ago. He is a relative of Sir David Wedderburn, Bart., late member for South Ayrshire, whose elder brother, John, a member of the Bengal Civil Service, his young wife, and only child, were murdered by the mutineers at Hissar in 1857.

THE FAMINE.—The weekly statement of the Madras Committee, dated February 9, says that the reports from various districts give a melancholy aspect to the future. The low state of the funds, too, enables the committee to do very little towards relieving the distress which seems to be impending. The Bellary Committee state that very gloomy accounts were being received from many of the villages which were thought to have got well through their distress. The dry crops recently harvested have, in some cases, turned out a total failure. These statements are repeated by many of the other committees. The Madras Executive Committee resolved that copies of the letters should be at once sent to his Grace the Governor in Council, with the remark that the committee felt it their duty, without loss of time, to lay such serious statements before Government. From Bombay application for further aid was received, but the executive regretted they were unable to grant it. In Mysor the prospects were even worse than in Madras. There were on relief works 150,906, and fed gratuitously 165,072—making a total of 315,973. The situation was felt on all hands to be one of some anxiety. Much, if not all, depended on the turn of prices within the next month or so, and already there were strong indications of a fall in the price of second sort rice. The general fall in rice was a very good sign, and the uncertainty as regarded dry grain rates showed that they had not yet settled down and was not altogether an unhelpful sign. A digest of reports from the various districts says:—"The latest accounts from the famine districts of Madras and Mysor are of a discouraging nature, and make it very doubtful whether, after all, it will be safe, or even possible, to bring relief operations to a close as quickly as had hitherto been hoped. The dry crops had suffered a good deal from various causes, and prices did not fall as they were expected; in fact, in some parts they were rising, while, everywhere, they were abnormally high. The imports were trifling, though there had been some indication of their reviving. All depended on the turn things might take at the harvest time—at the end of February or beginning of March. If the prices fell, all would be well, otherwise the relief operations would have to be continued till August or September."

PARIS EXHIBITION.—The M.M. steamer Tigre, leaving for Marseilles at noon on February 7, conveyed the collection of Ceylon exhibits for the Paris Exhibition, contained in fifty-four cases.

DEPARTURES FOR EUROPE.—The passengers proceeding to Europe by the last homeward bound Messageries steamer were Messrs. Hunter, Blair, John Buchanan, T. N. Christie, and P. T. Hadow.

KANDY.—The water supply for the town of Kandy is now in full operation. The inhabitants of the central capital are luxuriating in an abundance of the element so essential for health in the tropics, whilst we in Colombo appear to be as far as ever from obtaining what we desire.—Ceylon Times.

COFFEE PROSPECTS.—The weather continues very favourable for coffee estates; and accounts from planting districts assure us that the prospects for blossom are excellent. By the middle of the present month we may expect a good show of flower, and there is no reason for doubting its setting well.—Ceylon Times, Feb. 7.

THE LATE SIR EDWARD CREAM.—Sir Edward Cream's death, intelligence of which reached Colombo on Jan. 31, has been very feelingly alluded to both by Bench and Bar; and the Courts suspended their sittings for a day as a mark of respect to the memory of the ex-Chief Justice.

THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

The following notification appears in the Gazette of India, dated Fort William, Jan. 24.

The Gov. gen. in Council has been pleased to issue the following amended rules for the preparation and publication of the Indian Law Reports:—

1. A staff of reporters shall be maintained for such courts of law as the Government of India from time to time direct, consisting of one reporter for each court and as many assistant reporters as the business is found to require.

2. The Law Reports shall be published under the authority of the Government of India in the Legislative Department.

3. Each reporter shall have the general supervision and control of his assistants, and shall distribute their work among them.

4. Each reporter is, from the materials collected by himself and his assistants, to select all the cases he thinks it useful to report, to reduce them into the shape of reports, to prefix a head-note to each report, to have them printed, and to transmit the proof to the Legislative Department.

5. No case shall be reported if the judge or judges who decided it desire that it should not be reported.

6. If the Court desires that the reporter shall consult it, or any committee appointed by it, on any case or matter, it shall be his duty to do so.

7. The Government of India in the Legislative Department will authorise the publication of such cases as are finally determined on.

8. If the Court or the Chief Justice desires that any case decided by the Court or any division or judge thereof shall be reported, and signifies such desire to the reporter, such case shall be reported and published.

9. Arrangements shall be made for the separate local publication of reports relating to local laws when such local publication may be deemed advisable.

10. In framing reports regard shall be had to the following general rules and principles:—

(a.) Every report ought to contain a statement of all facts necessary for a due understanding of the decision.

(b.) Reports ought not to state any facts which are clearly unnecessary for a due understanding of the decision.

(c.) In judging whether to insert or to omit a statement of facts, it is better to err on the side of overstatement than of understatement.

(d.) It is not meant that the reporter must state the facts over again if there is a clear, full and consecutive statement of them in the judgment.

(e.) As a general rule, cases for which a full statement of facts cannot be obtained are not to be reported.

(f.) As a general rule, every report ought to contain a statement of the arguments of counsel, sufficient to show what points were pressed upon the Court.

(g.) The reporter should note any material bearing which the decision may have on other decisions or on any principle of law, and which is not otherwise apparent on the face of the report.

(h.) Every report ought to contain a full copy or account of the judgment delivered by the Court and by each judge thereof, or of so much of the judgment as bears on the point for which the case is reported.

(i.) As a general rule, cases turning upon evidence or inferences of fact, cases relating to the construction of private documents, and, generally, cases which do not illustrate some principle of law or some important bearing of an enactment in a way not covered by previous decisions, ought not to be reported.

(j.) In selecting cases for report, the reporters are to be guided by the weight and importance of the decision, and the existence of materials for a satisfactory report, and are not to abstain from reporting a case merely because they may think the decision to be erroneous, or to be in conflict with other decisions.

Home.

SPECIE FOR INDIA.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Nepaul has left with £435,125; £211,000 being in bar silver for Bombay, and £120,000 for Calcutta; of the balance £46,300 is in dollars for Penang, and £27,000 for Hong Kong, while of the £30,825 consigned to Shanghai £10,000 is in bar silver and £20,825 in dollars.

BILLS ON INDIA.—As previously announced, tenders for Rs. 50,00,000 (say £500,000) in bills on India were received on March 6 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £346,400, at an average rate of 1s. 8'66d.; to Bombay, £147,600, at an average rate of 1s. 8'692d.; and to Madras, £6,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8'648d. Tenders on all Presidencies at 1s. 8'3d. will receive about 6 per cent.; above in full. By submitting to a reduction of about 1½ per cent. in the rates obtained, the India Council was thus successful in selling all the bills advertised for tender. The Council states that next week it will again receive tenders for Rs. 50,00,000, or £500,000, of Bills on India, of which not more than Rs. 20,00,000, or £200,000, will be drawn on Bombay. The reduction in rates has therefore not had the effect of causing the Council to lessen the amount to be tendered for, but it is no doubt governed more by its necessities than by consideration for traders or business prudence.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE ON INDIAN PUBLIC WORKS.—The Select Parliamentary Committee obtained on the motion of Lord George Hamilton, Under-Secretary of State for India, as supplemental to the late East India Finance Committee, met for the first time to receive evidence on March 7, the Right Hon. Hugh Childers, M.P., in the chair, in the absence of the appointed chairman (Lord George Hamilton). Major-General Dickens, formerly Secretary to the Government of India in the Public Works Department, was the first witness examined, and he gave evidence on the operations of the Department in reference to railways and irrigation works over a period of years. Leaving the railway question for the present, he referred to the Blue-book on "East India Finance and Revenue Accounts for 1875-76," and, with the aid of a map, described the position of all the irrigation works and projects. It appeared from the explanations given that the irrigation works are of a very extensive and costly nature, being chiefly situated in the North-Western Provinces, Madras, and the Punjab; and that, with one or two noted exceptions, the numerous works were unremunerative, although the Government had prosecuted them at enormous expense. The evidence on irrigation works lasted throughout the day, and the committee again adjourned.

THE INDIAN ARMY.—If the possible use of the Indian army in a European war has not been much discussed in the newspapers, it certainly is not that the idea of these troops being turned to account is new or hastily suggested. But the subject bristles with great difficulties, and there are, no doubt, very strong opinions for and against the policy and utility of employing a native force outside of India against a European enemy. It may be taken for granted that Indian officers would advocate the measure, and would gladly embrace the opportunity of leading their men against any enemy; but it is almost equally certain that they would demand an increase of European officers in each regiment, the power of weeding out and selecting their men, and the support of British troops in fair proportion. The Indian statesman who quite accepted the opinions of the British officer respecting the actual value of good Sikh, Pathan, or Goorkha regiments in warfare under such conditions, would, nevertheless, hesitate to expose British rule in India to the consequences which might flow from a campaign in which native troops had proved that they could successfully encounter Europeans. The return of triumphant native troops to India must be attended by much excitement and elation, and by the increase of a martial pride and sentiment which has its dangers; and the risk of relying on an untried factor—such as the conduct of native regiments against a disciplined European army must be—is also manifest. There is not a man too many now in India—we speak of British troops—and none can be spared for any outside work.—Army and Navy Gazette.

MILITARY.—Lieut. Brabazon, of the 10th Hussars, is to join the staff of Lord-Lytton, Governor-General of India, as aide-de-camp. It may not be generally known, says the London correspondent of the Irish Times, that this officer is the Captain Brabazon who was a few years back one of the most popular members of the "Guards." Captain Brabazon committed a not uncommon error—quitted the Service without due reflection—and deeply regretted afterwards the false step he had taken. When the Ashantee expeditionary force was being organised, he volunteered his services, which were accepted, and in recognition of his devotion he was appointed, in June, 1874, to a lieutenancy in the 10th Hussars, with which gallant corps he has seen service in India. It rarely happens, says the above paper, that two such excellent regiments relieve one another as the 6th Dragoon Guards and 11th Hussars. The 11th brings home with it a character which it will, of course, maintain. Most corps deteriorate after a lengthened sojourn in India, yet, if anything, the 11th have improved since they landed at Bombay some eleven months ago. But this improvement, as a local journal points out, has been due in a large measure to the system inaugurated by Colonel (now Major-General) Crawford Fraser, v.c., c.b., who, whilst he was in command, spared no trouble in order to raise the character of the regiment and promote its welfare. When he retired, Colonel Annesley succeeded him. Thus the 11th have enjoyed the privilege of being commanded by exceptionally good officers, so that its present condition is not, after all, surprising, when we consider how seldom a really good lieutenant-colonel of Cavalry is met with.

INDIAN APPEAL.—SHEO SINGH RAI v. MUSSUMAT DUKHO AND ANOTHER.—This was an appeal from a judgment of the High Court of Judicature for the North-West Provinces at Allahabad on Nov. 27, 1874, affirming in part a prior decree of the Subordinate Judge of Meerut. The matters in dispute were as to the laws governing the Indian sect of Jains on the subject of adoption. From the judgment of the Court below it was gathered that for upwards of eleven or twelve centuries the Jains had seceded from the creed of the Vedas, and their religious tenets had more affinity with the precepts of the Buddhists than with those of the Brahmans. They recognise the caste system of the Brahminical Hindoos, and in such ceremonies as they retain generally avail themselves of the assistance of a Brahmin. They differ particularly from the Brahminical Hindoos in their conduct towards the dead, omitting all obsequies after the corpse is burnt or buried. They also regard the birth of a son as having no effect on the future state of his progenitor, and consequently adoption is a merely temporal arrangement and has no spiritual object. The respondent, Mussumat Dukho, is the widow of one Ishq Lall, a Jain, who died in 1867; the other respondent is his grandson, by a daughter, and the appellant is his brother. He left considerable property, including £50,000 in Government notes, and he was also possessed of an estate which had been granted to him for his life by the Government. At his death that estate was purchased by his widow, who desired that the other respondent (her daughter's son), whom she had adopted, should succeed her after her death. The appellant objected that, according to the usage of his caste, the widow was not competent to adopt without obtaining the consent of her husband's relatives. The Indian Courts declared the validity of the adoption, and the right of the respondent to succeed to the estate in suit. The case was not finished when the Court rose, and was therefore adjourned.

INDIAN IMPORT DUTIES.—On Friday afternoon the President and several directors of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce waited upon Lord Salisbury, at the India Office, their object being to urge the abolition of the Indian import duties on cotton goods and yarn. Mr. B. Armitage, Mr. George Lord, and Mr. Edmund Ashworth addressed his lordship, pointing out that the present was a very suitable time, now that the finances of India were about to come under his lordship's attention, to ask that something might be done towards abolishing the duties. The Marquis of Salisbury, replying, observed that the policy which had been recommended was one the expediency of which her Majesty's Government felt quite as strongly as did the deputation, viz., the policy of getting rid of the import duties so soon as it should be financially possible. They desired to do that not only for the sake of maintaining in the view of foreign nations our own unbroken and unflinching adhesion to the principles of free trade, which was a matter of very great importance, but also because the cotton goods were not in the main articles of luxury but articles of great necessity to the whole of the millions of the population of India. Unfortunately all those who had an articulate voice in framing such public opinion as existed in India rather belonged to the class that benefited by the profits of production, whilst the enormous multitudes who would benefit by a lower price upon the articles of necessity which had been mentioned had not reached that stage of culture by which they could make their wants known to India and Europe. He was not less earnest now than he was four years ago, that those import duties should be removed, but there had been great difficulties in connection with the finances of India which had stood in the way of the accomplishment of his object. They had had two famines, which for their intensity were almost unexampled in Indian history, and they had had another calamity which, although not apparently so severe, had disturbed and crippled to some extent their resources—that calamity was the fluctuation in the price of silver. Some gentlemen had spoken of the increase of taxation; in this country it did not mean anything very terrible. It was, perhaps, very disagreeable for an extra penny or twopence to be put on the income-tax or on the price of gin, but when the payment was made, and the account was settled, they could hardly say that there had been any addition to the sum of human misery. But if in India they taxed salt or land it made all the difference between existence and starvation. All they could do was to renew the promise, taking into consideration all the circumstances of India, that the Government would do their utmost to see that the import duties were removed. With regard to the Bombay Cotton Frauds Act, the abolition of which had been urged by several members of the deputation, his lordship added that the subject was one on which different opinions prevailed, and it was still engaging the attention of the Government.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, March 4.—THE INDIAN ARMY.—Sir G. CAMPBELL called attention to the difficulties resulting from the attempt to supply both the reserves in this country and the military service in India by a uniform system of enlistment for six years. In his opinion there ought to be short-service enlistment, with a view to passing men rapidly into the reserve without their being liable to go to India, except in case of extreme urgency; and long-service enlistment, to supply seasoned and experienced soldiers for India.—Mr. HARDY said it was a very great disadvantage that, whereas he should have to go fully into many of these subjects in bringing forward the Estimates, he had to discuss them partly and disjointedly now. He threw no imputation upon the universal knowledge of the hon. member for the Kirkcaldy Burghs (Sir George Campbell), but they found a difficulty in getting men to enlist for twelve years' service, though, when men had served their first six years, there was no difficulty in getting a great number of them to serve for a second term of six years. The service in India was an extremely popular service, and volunteers for another six years' service could be got there. The hon. member for Kirkcaldy had tried to persuade them that the average service of men who went out to India was only two and a half years, but those who had carefully inquired into the subject found that the average was nearly as long as before. As a general rule medical men had proved they could not keep a soldier in India for more than eight years with advantage. He proposed that they should be enabled to take volunteers, so that in no case would they have a shorter service than five years or a longer one than eight. With all the value he placed upon India, and looking to the responsibility which this country had undertaken with respect to it, he could not forget there was an England, and with colonies and great dependencies, all wanted trained soldiers just as much as India. We sent trained soldiers to India, till the effect at home was declared to be that we had to be content with "immature boys." He, however, thought our army at home was not exactly of the class which many hon. members considered. He pointed to the alacrity with which the reserves had responded to the call made upon them, which, he said, was most creditable to them. The hon. member for Kirkcaldy did not shut his eyes to the real meaning of his plan, which was more or less conscription. But in almost all our boys' schools there was now drill, and in almost every village, town, and city, volunteer corps. While the hon. gentleman would go in for conscription at home, was he really prepared to take the responsibility of finding pensions for the Indian Army? If they took twelve years in India out of a man's life they must allow him a pension. He altogether denied that the Indian Army as it existed was inefficient. No doubt there were young men in it, but it was an efficient army. He objected to the statement that soldiers should be kept in India until they were not fit for service at home. They ought to come back to the country at whose great expense they had been made into soldiers. In regard to this question of expense, though he felt immense pressure was put upon India, he asserted, without fear of contradiction, that the amount paid by England for soldiers that served in India was out of proportion to what she ought to pay. He did not go further into that subject, as we did not object to continue paying that which we now paid. The hon. member for Kirkcaldy wanted a separate army for India; but his proposal would neither secure greater length of service in India nor less illness there, and would certainly not diminish the expense. He was at this moment engaged in every possible investigation into that subject, because the India Office had its views as well as the War Office, and they were endeavouring to bring the subject to a conclusion satisfactory to both parties, and he believed they would do so. When he came into office he found the two departments corresponding, as if they belonged respectively to the Opposition and the Ministry, and they had come to a conclusion that made it impossible they should ever come to terms with respect to the army in India. He had endeavoured to remove these tremendous difficulties. He entirely agreed with the hon. and gallant gentleman who spoke of the character and ability of the non-commissioned officers of the artillery in what he said on that point, and admitted that since the change of 1871, by which adjutants were no longer taken from non-commissioned officers, these latter had lost considerably; but by the restoring of quartermasters to the artillery regiments and militia, and the changes in regard to the commissariat and ordnance staff, these non-commissioned officers would now gain a good deal.—Lord ELCHO mentioned that at a meeting of officers held at the United Service Institution a short time since an almost unanimous opinion was expressed in favour of maintaining the English existing unit of companies.—Sir H. HAVELOCK suggested, as the only practical remedy, that regiments previous to embarking for India should be made up to their full strength, and that a small graduated scale of bounty should be offered to men willing to serve for a period of seven years in that country.—The House then went into Committee of Supply.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, March 8.—MAIL CONTRACTS.—Mr. HORGOOD asked the Postmaster-General whether the department

"ONE HUNDRED NOTES FOR BOMBAY CIRCULATION."—We have received a copy of a beautifully-printed little publication, containing "One Hundred Notes" illustrative of the history of Bombay. The author of the notes exhibits in them the results of much careful and judicious research, and we do not know any work giving in so small a space so much curious and interesting information about Bombay and the celebrities of the island during the last two hundred years. The notes about Sterne's Eliza and Montalembert—the grandson of James Forbes, author of the Oriental Memoirs—may be cited as among the best examples of the compiler's extensive reading and genial tastes. All English and Indian literature seems to have been ransacked by him for references to Bombay; and very quaint some of them are. Whoever wants to get in small compass some knowledge of everybody of note who has visited or lived in the island, from Fryer and Sevaj down to Dr. Wilson, John Cannon, and James Taylor, should buy a copy of this little book. Its price is only two rupees, and the proceeds of the sale will be devoted to an excellent purpose—the aiding of the building fund of the Scottish Education Society's Fort School. Five hundred copies have been printed in Edinburgh, and will be sold at the John Cannon School Bazaar to be held in the Town Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.—Bombay Gazette.

THE PRINCE'S DOCK.—This great work has made another big stride towards completion, says the Bombay Gazette. In addition to the fact that the excavation and the work on the dock and sea walls has been going on rapidly during the last two or three months, the delicate operation of laying the foundations of the entrance has been accomplished. The stone for this work—granite from Cornish quarries—was brought out from England, ready dressed, in pieces varying in weight from sixteen tons to five tons each, and these huge blocks have been, or are being, fitted into their places. When the stonework of the entrances is completed, temporary gates will be fitted in, and the contractors will be able to commence the removal of the immense bund which has had to be raised all round the harbour side of the dock to keep out the water. The removal of this mass of earth and stone, it is expected, will occupy about six months. The walls of the dock and the jetty are now, with a very small exception indeed, all built and coped, and the only other stone-work remaining to be done, in addition to the entrances, is the remainder of the sea wall. The coffer-damming has now been carried along the whole length, and the masons are at work on the greater part of it. The progress being made in the excavations is indicated by the fact that during last month upwards of two millions of cubic feet were removed. On an average about 400 waggons—loads a day—each load weighing from six to seven tons—are carried away to Mody Bay. The extent of ground reclaimed from the bay will be about equal to the area of the dock, which is thirty acres. The number of men and women—stone masons, coolies, engineers, drivers, overseers, &c.—now employed on the work is about 6,200; and all the labourers are paid regularly every evening. The contract time for the completion of the dock expires, we believe, at the end of June, 1879; but the contractors, Messrs. Glover and Co., expect to finish their work by the close of this year.

MEMORIAL IN HONOUR OF LORD
NAPIER OF MAGDALA.

By Public Meeting in Calcutta, 16th March, 1878, a Committee was constituted under the Presidency of Sir RICHARD TEMPLE, to collect Funds for the Erection of a Fitting Memorial of LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA, for which they require about £5,000. About £2,800 has already been raised in India, and an Auxiliary Committee (named below) has been formed in London to collect Subscriptions in this country.

Subscriptions are now invited, and it is requested that they may be paid into the Bank of Messrs. Courts and Co., Strand; or to the Honorary Secretary, Captain R. TAYLOR, late 35th Royal Sussex, Junior Army and Navy Club, who will give any further information.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA

Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.
Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa of the Finest Quality,
with the excess of fat extracted.

The Faculty pronounce it "the most nutritious, perfectly digestible beverage for Breakfast, Luncheon, or Supper, and invaluable for Invalids and Children."

Highly commended by the entire Medical Press.
Being without sugar, spices, or other admixture, it suits all palates, keeps better in all climates, and is four times the strength of Cocoa thickened yet weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and is REALITY CHEAPER than such Mixtures.

Made instantaneously with boiling water, a teaspoonful to a Breakfast Cup costing less than a Halfpenny.
COCOATINA A LA VANILLE is the most delicate, digestible, Cheapest Vanilla Chocolate, and may be taken when richer Chocolate is prohibited.

In tins at 1s. 6d., 3s., &amp;c., by Chemists and Grocers.

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM.

BY THE

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,

C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with. It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Muhammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans or conversing with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most cursory reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him a patient bearing on points the most open to controversy."—Allen's Indian Mail.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligencer.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, February 25; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, February 23; Calcutta, February 22.

A monster meeting of the inhabitants of Bombay was held on Tuesday, the 19th February, in the Circus Tent—the Government of Bombay having refused to lend the Town Hall for such a purpose—to protest against the Viceroy's financial policy as exemplified in the Trades Licence Tax, and to pray the Secretary of State to give the non-official community some voice in the legislation of the country. There were about five thousand people present, among whom were representatives of every section of the Bombay community, and the memorial and resolutions condemning the Government measures were adopted with unanimous acclamation. According to the Bombay Gazette it was the most fervent expression of public opinion that has ever been known in India. In this case public opinion means, we suppose, the opinion of the classes specially interested in the question of a licence tax. The memorial adopted will be presented to Parliament by Mr. Fawcett, and copies of the same, with reports of the proceedings, have been forwarded to a large number of members of Parliament, including Messrs. Bright and Gladstone, "who may be expected to exert themselves in securing for the non-official community a portion, at all events, of that freedom and direct interest in the proceedings of the Legislature which in England are the birthright of the people.

THE Madras Government have called upon Collectors of districts for a return of the estimated cultivation and yield of crops within their circuits, with a view of helping the Government to forecast the prospects of the current year, and determine the expediency of continuing large relief works as the best means of dispensing with regular relief measures. The latest reports from North Arkot describe the improvement in the state of the people as distinct, though gradual, but likely to continue much the same until the price of grain falls. The reports from Ganjam and Vizagapatam showed that there was no present cause for special anxiety, but that their prospects appeared uncertain. Both districts were being carefully watched. Fresh orders have been issued by the Madras Government to insure the greatest care being taken in stopping relief, and to enforce proper control and frequent supervision by European officers, in certain cases where such measures did not seem to have been thoroughly carried out.

THE distress in some of the districts of the North-West Provinces and Oudh appears to be very great. On the 15th February there were 966 persons in the poor-house at Agra, and 10,562 on the relief works. In a warning letter to the Times of India Mr. R. Knight ventures to "affirm plainly that masses of the labouring poor are being slowly starved to death in these provinces," and he greatly fears that "the statement is as true concerning Oudh and Rohilkand as of the districts of which Agra is the centre." He declares that three-fourths of the people, even on relief-works, are "slowly but surely starving to death. Wheat, jowari, and dhall at 10½ to 11 seers the rupee, and a daily wage of 9 pie for women and 1 anna for men coolies! It is simply death by slow torture, and calls for any indignation you may express upon it." In support of this view Mr. Knight quotes a letter, of February 10, from "a very high medical authority," who lately visited Agra. We give the following extract:—

I did not expect to meet with any evidence of famine in this part of India, but on my way to the Taj I stopped and inspected a number of the working gangs on the famine relief works, and this morning I have been into a poor-house where the worst cases are brought in. In regard to the people on relief works they are generally in a worse condition than our working gangs in the South were at this time of year. Their appearance betrays a long course of under-feeding. The dirty, hard dry skins and blue gums indicate a deteriorated state of health that is certain to end in high mortality. At the poor-house, in the few minutes I remained, four miserable creatures were brought in on 'doolies, and the condition of the inmates is generally very bad. I understood the man in charge to say that eighty-seven persons had died there in January, the average daily strength being from 200 to 300. I have seen none of the local magnates, nor do I know what views are entertained in regard to the extent of the distress.

THE young Maharajah of Kuch-Bahar was about to marry the eldest daughter of Keshab Chandar Sen, the great Hindu Reformer. The proposed marriage, says the Indian Mirror, will mark an epoch in the social history of India. It is said that the local authorities have not only sanctioned, but proposed the alliance for their ward, who is only sixteen years old. He succeeded his father in 1863, and in a few years will reign over a province of 1,307 square miles, the remnant of a dominion which once extended over great part of Assam. The young Prince, we are told, will declare himself a Brahmo, or Indian Theist, before the wedding takes place, and no compromise with Hinduism will occur in the marriage rites. He is said to be an eminently amiable and teachable person, and his marriage with Keshab's daughter may give a new impulse to the spread of the purer faith taught by his destined father-in-law.

THE Madras Mail hears that Sir Neville Chamberlain has proposed to Government a scheme for grading officers serving with native regiments, which will come into force without delay. Officers holding the rank of Squadron and Wing Commander will be graded according to length of Regimental Service, except when army rank and the public interests call for special consideration. The cases of those who may hereafter be posted to native corps will be specially dealt with. Officers in regiments will rank according to their regimental grading; and temporary appointments to native regiments will be regulated on the same principle. Officers placed on staff employ for fixed periods will be seconded, but at the end of their tour of staff service will return to their regiments without loss of rank or promotion. The appointments of Commandants and Squadron and Wing Commanders are, as a rule, to be held by officers of or above the rank of captain. The appointments of Adjutant and Quartermaster are only to be held permanently by Subaltern officers, with exception for special cases. Wing and squadron officers on promotion to the substantive rank of major will not in future be required to vacate their regimental appointments. The above rules do not necessarily affect present incumbents holding the appointment of Adjutant and Quartermaster until, the captains vacate on attaining the rank of major on promotion in the regiment, or on completion of the five years' tenure of appointment.

MR. RIVERS THOMPSON, C.S.I., Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, has been appointed to succeed Sir Edward Bayley as member of the Viceroy's Executive Council. Mr. Chapman, the Financial Secretary, has therefore, it seems, been passed over, owing, says the Pioneer, to a disagreement between Lord Lytton and the India Office. According to the Allahabad paper, Mr. Thompson's successor had not yet been named; but if the Bombay papers are well informed, the choice had already fallen on Mr. Aitchison, the new Chief Commissioner of Mysor. If so, there has been a very unusual shuffling of the official cards.

A SATISFACTORY arrangement has been concluded with the Maharajah of Jodhpur, regarding the salt duties. His Highness has consented to make over all the salt-yielding places in his territory to Government, receiving in return an annual sum of Rs. 536,000, and three hundred thousand maunds of salt for the use of the people in Marwar.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL KEYES came to grief while playing cricket the other day at Kohat, his little finger having been broken in two places. He is coming home on furlough, his term of service expiring this month, when Major General Roberts, Quartermaster General, succeeds him in command of the frontier force, as a temporary arrangement, Colonel C. C. Johnson acting as Quartermaster General.

MR. R. DRUMMOND has resigned the Civil Service. Mr. Upton is appointed to officiate as Government Solicitor during the absence of Mr. Sanderson on furlough. The appointments announced in the last Gazette of India, of Mr. Larpent and Mr. Rivett-Carnac to Bombay and Madras respectively, are cancelled. The latter is appointed to officiate as Assistant Deputy Accountant-General, Burmah.

We learn that Colonel Fraser, Public Works Secretary to the Government of the North-Western Provinces, accompanies General Strachey, Mr. Rendell and Mr. Bradford Leslie on their tour of inspection of the East Indian Railway from Benares up to Delhi. The three last-named had already started on their tour of inspection. Among other matters of moment, they have to decide upon the question of doubling the line and other points alluded to in Mr. Crawford's speech to the shareholders at the last meeting of the company.

At the sitting of the Viceroy's Council on Feb. 9 Mr. Thornton, representing the Punjab, thus defended the licence-tax on trades:—

With regard to the Licence Bill, I have little to say, except that there has been, on the part of the district officers of the Punjab, a chorus of consent that, if additional taxation is necessary to provide insurance against famine, no classes can be more justly called on to contribute than the trader and the artisan, for none have benefited more from British rule, and none have paid so little for the advantages they enjoy. The form of the tax has been generally approved, and if, as we are assured by the honourable mover will be the case, though it does not so appear on the face of the Bill, the tax is not to affect persons with incomes of less than Rs. 100 per annum, it certainly cannot be regarded as a tax upon the very poor.

With regard to the new Land-Cess he contended that the agricultural population of the Punjab was, as a rule, eminently prosperous and thriving, and could well bear the slight additional taxation proposed; he traced the history of the land revenue administration of the province from the Sikh times, pointing out the moderation of recent assessments, and proving by statistics the great extension of cultivation, the enormous increase of the selling price of land, and the insignificance of the proposed addition to its burdens. All the Government asks, he said, "is that a body of landowners whose property has been more than sextupled in value during the last twenty years shall contribute a famine insurance rate of one farthing per acre per annum." As to the form of taxation, he urged that it was the least open to objection, and the most satisfactory to the taxpayers of any that could be devised. But, he went on to say:—

While there can be no doubt that the landowners of the Punjab can generally now afford to pay the slightly enhanced local rate it is proposed to levy, it is equally certain that the enhancement will be regarded, like the original rates imposed in 1871, as an addition to the land revenue demand, and practically if not literally an infringement of the engagement made at settlement; and, do what you will, the Punjab landowner will continue of that opinion. Explain to him with all the lucidity a trained intellect can command that the land revenue is the share of the rental taken by the Government, as proprietor in chief, and that the local rate is a tax on rent taken by the Government as Government, and he will reply, in the present instance it is to be hoped with a smile, that this appears to him to be a "distinction without a difference."

At the same time he had no fear but that there would be on the part of the large population of the Punjab any serious discontent:—

But there will be a feeling of dissatisfaction which it seems desirable, if possible, to mitigate, even if it may not be possible to remove it altogether. And here, I think, perhaps we may learn a lesson from the past. In the year 1871 when the local rate was originally imposed, there was considerable dissatisfaction among the landowners, but this has, we are told, completely died away. And why has it died away? Because it was arranged that the local rates should be made over to district committees on which the landowners were to be largely represented, and spent before the eyes of the people in the districts for which it was raised.

Such a course could not, he knew, be exactly followed in the present case. The funds could not be made over to committees and spent in the districts for which they may be levied; but "may not something of the kind be done to show the taxpayers and the public generally, clearly and unmistakably, that 'famine insurance' is not a mere pretext for raising money for general purposes, but that the tax is bona fide expended on the object for which it is raised?"

In the course of his own speech on the same occasion Sir John Strachey explained the manner in which the proceeds of the new taxes were to be applied for providing permanent insurance against famine throughout India. The debt will virtually be reduced by one and a-half million each year. At the end of the next period of ten years the debt would be less by £15,000,000, and that sum could, if necessary, then be borrowed for the actual relief of famine without making the financial position worse than it was ten years before. It would, however, be absurd actually to pay off the debt while borrowing large sums for protective works. The Government will therefore reduce by one and a-half million yearly the sum otherwise to be borrowed; the ultimate financial result being the same as the actual repayment of the debt. Government will persevere in the construction of railways and canals, applying to this purpose the proceeds of the new taxes. If investment of capital be prudently limited, the growing income will more than keep pace with the charge for interest. The actual results obtained from such works during the last six years had been highly satisfactory. The net interest paid on guaranteed railway capital was one and three-quarter millions in 1871, and will in the present year be nothing. The total annual charge for interest on all sorts of debts and railway capital is now less by two millions than it was six years ago, while the net increase of income from public works is half a million, a trough during this period the average annual expenditure on railways and canals has been £4,000,000, and £16,000,000 has been spent for the relief of famine. The local Governments will be made agents for actually levying the new taxes, and for executing works by which the country is to be protected against famine, and responsibility for securing the due development of the income well rest on them. The available funds will, as far as possible, be distributed among the provinces with regard to the amount of their contribution.

In treating of the Licence-Tax, Sir John vindicated the policy of exempting the official and professional classes from the new burdens imposed on the trading and agricultural classes:—

for their own protection. In regard to the commercial and trading classes, there is also this strongest of all justifications for taxing them, that, excepting always that comparatively very small section of them which is composed of Europeans, they now pay almost nothing towards the expenses of the State. There is, moreover, this further reason, that although the trading and agricultural classes are the first to suffer when famine occurs within the limits of their own provinces, they benefit immensely, taking them as a whole, by the occurrence of famine in other parts of the Empire. The misfortune of their neighbours brings to them wealth and prosperity. On the other hand, the professional classes and those who depend on fixed incomes for their support, although they suffer from the high prices caused by famine, are seldom the recipients of actual relief from the State; under no circumstances do they derive any advantage from famine when it occurs, and they have no power of passing on to others the burdens placed on themselves. The small officials and servants receiving wages are in this country very numerous, and there is certainly no class on which it would be less equitable to impose taxation for such a purpose as this.

The objection that the rich would be taxed too little would be to a certain extent removed by the change which raises the maximum fee chargeable from Rs. 200 to Rs. 500. "The change will give us very little more money, and it involves no principle; for whatever sum may be fixed as the maximum fee must be fixed in a purely arbitrary manner." As to the objection that this tax will fall mainly on the poor, Sir John contents himself with simply denying the fact. "It will touch no person whose net earnings are less than Rs. 100 a year; and if anybody asserts that in the provinces to which this Bill refers any man is poor who possesses an income of Rs. 100 a year, he is ignorant of the facts. Such a man is not poor; he is a man far removed above poverty, and well able to pay his contribution towards insuring the country against famine. To say that our new taxation will fall upon the poor is either an error or a calumny."

LORD LYTTON spoke at great length on the same occasion in support of the policy set forth by his Finance Minister. His defence of the measures proposed for equalising the salt-duties led him into a retrospect of the various changes made in those duties since the year 1837, when the duty in Bombay was fixed at eight annas a maund. From that time to the present the duties in Southern India have repeatedly been raised on various pretexts, and the same course has been followed in the North-West Provinces. In Lower Bengal the Salt Duty, which at one time was gradually lowered from Rs. 3-4 to Rs. 2-8 a maund, was raised in 1859 to Rs. 3 and two years later to Rs. 3-4 a maund. It is true that many obnoxious duties were meanwhile abolished, at some loss to the revenue; but the Court of Directors held out for many years against the proposal to raise the salt tax in Madras from one rupee to Rs. 1-8 per maund. It was left for their successors to take fresh turns of the fiscal screw, until the duty in Bombay now stands five times as high as it did forty years ago, while that for Madras has risen in the last ten years from Rs. 1-8 to Rs. 2-8 a maund. The Viceroy of course declares himself unable to accept the dictum of those who assert that the present salt duties are a grievous burden to the long-suffering back of the poor rayat. "It may be in the power of the Government of India, and I hope, indeed, it may be in the power of the present Government of India, to lighten that burden, such as it is; but it is my own belief that it will never be in the power of any Government of India to devise a substitute for it which will weigh less heavily on the poorer classes, or be less sensibly felt by them. A salt tax of Rs. 2-8 per maund is a tax of less than three farthings per pound. It would be absurd to represent the pressure of such a tax as oppressive. The manner in which the tax is levied renders the pressure of it almost inappreciable." No doubt the pressure may seem inappreciable to a gentleman receiving ten thousand a year. But a rayat who has to live somehow on twenty or thirty rupees a year may be excused for thinking otherwise. To him at any rate a tax which, as our correspondent "T." has shown, raises the price of so prime a necessary of life from ten shillings to more than 130 shillings a ton, must make a sensible difference in his means of living. It is certain that for years past the tax has encouraged the illicit manufacture of salt and the sale of cheap salt adulterated with sodium and other hurtful mixtures, that it has caused a great deal of disease and death among men and cattle, and that, as "T." says, "multitudes of men, women and children," have been thrown into common jails on the charge of evading the salt laws. All this may seem very absurd to statesmen looking about for a surplus, but if the facts be as we have stated them, it is obviously absurd to deny their existence in order that the Indian Government may be saved the trouble of cutting down expenditure or trying some less burdensome method of taxation.

ACCORDING to a Calcutta telegram of March 14, the Viceroy's Legislative Council on that day passed a Bill for the better regulation of the vernacular Indian Press, enabling the Government to repress more promptly all seditious writing, extortion, and intimidation by vernacular journalists. The Bill provides that, where necessary, the district magistrate or Commissioner of Police may with the sanction of the local Government require the publisher of vernacular papers to execute a bond undertaking not to allow the future publication of such matter. Instead of a bond the publisher may enter into a written engagement to submit the proofs of his articles to an authorised officer. Sir Alexander Arbuthnot explained that the Bill would merely give power to carry it into effect where necessary. For instance, it would not at present be applied in the Madras Presidency, nor would any publisher come under its operation unless the local Government thought fit. He pointed out that seditious and libellous writing had greatly increased, even to the extent of suggesting open resistance to the Government. The existing law was found to be inadequate and unsuitable. What was needed was preventive and not punitive measures alone. Sir Alexander referred to the opinions expressed by Sir Thomas Munro and the members of Sir Charles Metcalfe's Government in 1835, and especially Mr. Prinsep's prediction respecting the necessity of controlling the native Indian Press. The operation of the Bill, Sir Alexander pointed out, was confined to vernacular papers, which alone appealed to the ignorant classes. It was not intended for papers published in English either by Englishmen or natives, as these were read only by the educated classes, and were mostly local in character. In conclusion, Sir Alexander Arbuthnot expressed his confidence in the loyalty of the great body of the people, but argued that it was unwise to permit seditious writing to excite hatred and distrust against the Government among the ignorant masses. The measure was fully supported by Messrs. Morgan, Paul, Evans, and Thornton, and the Maharaja Jotendra Mohan Thakur, who warmly disavowed, on behalf of the educated classes, any sympathy with such writings as quoted by the preceding speaker. Mr. B. W. Colvin and the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal also supported the Bill. Mr. Ashley Eden denied that the Government objected to fair hostile criticism, but the extracts before him, numbering above 150, were not of that character. He was not concerned at personal attacks, but he showed the utter licentiousness and the false ideas of liberty manifested by the native papers in question. All the better portion of the vernacular Press was quite free from these faults, and would remain unaffected by the measure, while the papers written in English showed a sense of responsibility and a desire for fair discussion.

SIR JOHN STRACHEY held that the Bill was only directed against intolerable licence and the abuse of established institutions, such as would be suffered in no country in the world any more than obscene publications. He proposed a slight verbal amendment to render the Bill specially applicable to intimidation of public officers in the discharge of their duty, and the amendment was adopted unanimously. In closing the debate, Lord Lytton said that whilst all his associations and convictions were on the side of the free utterance of thought, it was his deliberate judgment that the measure was imperatively called for by the supreme law of the safety of the State. In the vernacular Press, articles, mostly written by persons imperfectly educated and inexperienced, often undisguisedly appealed to the most disloyal sentiments and mischievous passions, and were largely read by persons still more ignorant and wholly unable to judge for themselves. His Excellency quoted a large number of the recent utterances of the vernacular Press, openly maligning the English rule and race, and sometimes preaching open sedition and combination for the subversion of the British raj. No Government could possibly tolerate such language circulated amongst its ignorant masses. The present law was so defective that within the last few weeks two applications from local Governments for permission to prosecute seditious articles had been of necessity refused. A distinction was drawn between papers in English and the vernacular. It was not a race distinction—for many excellent papers in English were conducted by natives—but it was a distinction between papers addressed to the educated classes and those addressing the ignorant, just as the English law allowed physiological works to be given to medical students which none would place in the hands of schoolboys, and again denunciations of the lawful Government were permitted at debating societies which would be treason when addressed to an excited mob. An important feature in the measure was the protection of native chiefs and native officials from the publicity of newspaper abuse, which was probably more galling to a native of distinction than to a European; and, moreover, the former would be unwilling to put an end to the annoyance of publicity by suing the libeller in a court of justice. Sir George Campbell had officially stated in a report urging a similar measure that there was probably no deputy magistrate who was not afraid of being attacked in the vernacular newspapers. Whilst this repressive measure was certainly necessary now, the spread of education and enlightenment would probably expedite the possibility of removing the restrictions.

THE DOWAGER MARCHIONESS OF HEADFORT, who died the other day in her eightieth year, was not, as the papers tell us, "the last survivor of those who participated" in the imprisonment to which Pollock's advance on Kabul put a timely end. Among her fellow-prisoners, two at any rate—Sir Vincent Eyre and General Colin Mackenzie—are still alive. Nor was Sir William Macnaghten her first husband. She was the widow of Colonel McClintock when she married Mr. Macnaghten, in those days a rising young Bengal Civilian, who had not long exchanged the sword for the pen. Under Lord William Bentinck Mr. Macnaghten made his mark in the Political Department; and in 1838 Lord Auckland sent him to conclude with Ranjit Singh, at Lahor, that famous treaty which was for a time to replace Shah Sujah on the throne of Dost Mohammad. At Kabul Sir W. Macnaghten remained as Political Agent after Shah Sujah had entered the Bala Hissar, and General Elphinstone had quartered his troops in the neighbouring cantonments. He was on the point of starting for Bombay as its future Governor, when the rebellion broke out which led to the disastrous retreat from Kabul and the massacre of Jaddalak. Macnaghten himself fell a victim to the treachery or the sudden rage of Mohammad Akbar, and among the small remnant of our countrymen who fell into the hands of that chief was Lady Macnaghten. For many months of 1842 twenty officers, nine ladies, and seventeen privates, remained close prisoners in charge of Akbar's officers, first in one fort and then in another, until they were rescued and brought safely back to Pollock, at Kabul, by Sir Richmond Shakespear. In 1853 Lady Macnaghten married her third husband, the Marquis of Headfort.

ERRATUM.—In extract from "Route Book of a Subaltern 4th Troop 3rd Brigade Bengal Horse Artillery," published in our last issue, last line: "April 27th.—Cavalry and Rifle Brigade arrived;" read: "April 27th.—Cavalry and first Brigade arrived."

Odds and Ends.

MR. A. RATTRAY, Deputy Magistrate of Howrah, was going on furlough for a year from the 1st of March; and Mr. J. Posford, Joint Magistrate of Faridpur, for eighteen months from May 2.

THE REV. G. F. POPHAM-BLYTH, Chaplain of Fort William, goes on furlough for two years from the 19th February; and the Rev. B. Morrell, Chaplain of Berhampur, comes to Fort William.

MR. G. M. RICKETTS, C.B., a member of the Board of Revenue, North-West Provinces, has been granted furlough on medical certificate for seven months and a-half, from the 1st of March.

DR. R. G. MATHEW, Civil Surgeon of Midnapore, succeeds Dr. C. J. Jackson as Civil Surgeon of Muzaffarpur, Dr. W. A. Gilligan, who has been in charge of the Establishment of the Northern Bengal State Railway, going to Midnapur.

CAPTAIN S. D. BARROW, Squadron Officer of the 10th Bengal Lancers, officiates as Aide-de-Camp to General Sir J. Brind, commanding the Sirhind Division, as a special case, in addition to his regimental duties.

WE hear that Mr. H. F. Blanford, Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India, now on one month's leave, intends to apply for furlough to Europe in April next; and that Mr. John Elliott, Professor of Natural Science and Geology in the Presidency College, Calcutta, is spoken of as likely to officiate.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR was to leave Calcutta about the 25th February for a fortnight's tour in Orissa.

MANCHESTER AND THE INDIA-OFFICE.

MANCHESTER'S latest appeal to the India Office with regard to the import duties on cotton goods differed markedly for the better from the one preceding. On the former occasion the advocates of free trade showed their consistency by begging Lord George Hamilton to order Lord Lytton to make his choice between abolishing the cotton duties altogether and levying an export duty on Indian cotton goods, by way of counterpoise to the particular impost denounced by Manchester. The gentlemen who interviewed Lord Salisbury last Friday week were more reasonable in their demands. They urged that "whatever might be the exigencies of trade, there should be no divergence from the principles of free trade." They are alive, in short, to the folly of neutralising one blunder by another. They have discovered that two wrongs will never make one right; that a sound principle is better than revenge. Perhaps it occurred to them that their interests would be better served by not asking for that which no Indian Government could ever grant.

Be that as it may, they have not yet learned the whole of their lesson. They express a fear that Lord Lytton, in his coming Budget, will take off the import duty on cotton yarns, the trade in which has already been lost to Manchester, while the duty on the finer sorts of piece goods will remain untouched, to the great discouragement of English manufacturers. Lord Salisbury was therefore entreated "to decide finally against making any change in the duties, unless it be such as should be spread over all productions." In this part of their pleading our Manchester friends are hardly as wise in their generation as we could wish. If the Viceroy could see his way to get rid of all the cotton duties at one stroke, the friends of free trade and of fair play to all manufacturers would have nothing more to desire. But at this moment of recovery from a widespread famine, India cannot spare the whole of the revenue derived from these duties. Their removal would involve increased taxation, and Lord Salisbury bids us pause before adding to the burdens of an impoverished peasantry. "For example, when you increase the salt tax in India, you run the chance of making salt so dear that the peasant cannot have that which is absolutely essential for his health; or if you go to the source to which Indian legislators are naturally tempted—though they generally have the wisdom to resist the temptation where they can—if you impose an increase of burdens upon land, you run the risk of making tens of thousands of poor rayats lose that wretched margin of profit which to them now constitutes the difference between existence and starvation." The repeal of duties which yield £800,000 a year is therefore at present out of the question. "It cannot be done," says the Secretary for India. But the duty on yarns and coarse goods brings in only £40,000 or £50,000, and its repeal might benefit Lancashire without harming the Indian revenues. Why, then, should Manchester object to a small measure of reform which would clear the way for some larger measure by-and-by? Even if she were to gain nothing by the removal of the duties on one class of goods, the fact of their removal would furnish her with a powerful lever for the final overthrow of all fiscal barriers to the progress of her Indian trade. The Indian Government are already pledged to free-trade in cotton as soon as their financial prospects will enable them to redeem the pledge. From the Manchester point of view it seems to us a mistake to oppose a half-measure which would certainly bring her many degrees nearer to the attainment of her own desires.

In urging the repeal of the Cotton Frauds Act, the Manchester deputation have better reason on their side. The Act in question is an obvious interference with freedom of trade, and the frauds against which it was levelled might have been dealt with under ordinary laws. Lord Salisbury himself admits that the Indian Government "have a distinct leaning" against the Act, and it is to be hoped that the opposite views of Mr. Andrew Cassels will not avail to cause any difference of opinion between the Viceroy and the Secretary of State.

NATIVE CHRISTIANS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I wish to ask the Right Honourable the Secretary of State what measures have been adopted for the protection of native Christians in the event of a rebellion.

It is quite possible that the lives, if not the property, of the majority of the Europeans and East Indians may be saved by timely retreats to fortified centres, such as Allahabad, Agra, Simla, Burachi, Bombay, Poonah, Madras, Bangalore, and Calcutta; but the lives of native Christians will be very precarious unless they be assisted in protecting themselves and their families.

Many of your readers are probably not aware that the numbers of native Christians have within the past few years greatly increased. In the Blue-book for 1872-73 they were said by Government to number 318,363 souls, exclusive of Roman Catholics, of whom there were 600,000 in South India alone.

The Protestant Missions of India, Burmah and Ceylon are carried on by thirty-five missionary societies, in addition to local agencies, and now employ the services of 606 foreign missionaries, of whom 551 are ordained. They are widely and rather evenly distributed over the different presidencies, and they occupy at the present time 522 principal stations, and 2,500 subordinate stations. The entire presidency of Bengal, from Calcutta to Peshawur, is well supplied with missionaries, and they are numerous in the southern portion of the Madras Presidency. The various missions in Calcutta, Bombay and Madras are strong in labourers, and almost all the principal towns of the Empire have at least one missionary.

But my chief object is to call attention to the unprotected state of the native Christians in Tinnivelli and Travancore. In page 156 of the Blue-book for 1872-73 (in the succeeding Blue-books but little notice has been taken of them) I find:—

But it is in the southern portion of the Madras Presidency that Christianity has most largely affected the rural populations. The Province of Tanjor, first instructed by the Danish missionaries, amongst them by the respected missionary Schwartz, has long possessed a large number of Christian congregations. These continue under the care of the Lutheran and the English Episcopal missions, and are reported to be in a prosperous condition.

The Christians now number 11,000 persons in the Tanjor and Trichinapalli districts. In the neighbouring district of Madura the Americans have a flourishing mission, with 7,000 converts and a normal school.

The Tinnivelli and Travancor missions are well known, and are reported to be in every way in a higher position, and exerting greater influence than ever before. . . . Three missions have been carried on among them by the Church Missionary Society, the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, and the London Missionary Society, and a large and influential English staff has conducted the affairs of these missions. The result is reported to be highly satisfactory. At the present time 90,000 persons of all ages are professing Christians among the Shannar people; the districts are dotted over with flourishing villages and Christian Churches; there are hundreds of native teachers employed among them, of whom fifty-six are ordained, and are supported to a great extent by their congregations. Order and peace rule these simple communities, which give the Government little trouble, whether in the Madras Presidency or under his Highness the Maharajah of Travancor, while large tracts of country have been brought under cultivation, and the peasantry generally enjoy a larger share of material comfort than in days gone by.

Such being the prosperous state of native Christians in South India, it behoves the English nation to provide against their being massacred in the event of a rebellion; if Government itself cannot protect them, why not assist them with arms, advice and discipline to protect themselves and their families?

When the mutiny broke out in May, 1857, the European missionary at my station fled to another station thirty miles distant; the adult male members of his flock came to me and asked for instructions, and stated their willingness to fight for Government. As they were accustomed to the use of firearms, I suggested that they should follow their pastor, which they did; subsequently, in the following January, thirty native Christians did good service with the military levy under Captain Catania.

The native Christians are loyal; why should they not be organised so as to be able to defend successfully their wives and families from insult and spoliation?

The Christians of Tinneveli are upwards of 2,200 miles distant from Herat. Sir Henry Rawlinson, the Political Member of the Indian Council, has suggested that 5,000 of our soldiers should go to Herat, 1,000 be stationed between Girishk and Furrah, 3,000 take post at Kandahar, and 1,000 at Quetta, and in the Pisheen valley (see page 360 of "England and Russia in the East.") Now in the event of a rebellion these places would require an army of six times the strength, if it could be fed. If 60,000 troops be withdrawn from India, how are unwarlike Christians living at a distance of 2,000 miles to be protected? I ask your readers to look at the map of Asia, and judge what miracles our army is expected to perform; it is only the blindest infatuation or the most poetical idea that can here induce the Viceroy to suppose that he can conquer Herat as well as provide for the protection of 200 millions of her Majesty's subjects in India. A fearful responsibility will fall upon this nation if massacres of native converts and of their wives and children should take place. May Lord Lytton never suffer the mental agony which the Governor General must have endured on hearing the news of the total destruction of the British Army in January, 1812.

The following extract from the Minute addressed to the Court of Directors at the commencement of the first Afghan war indicates the danger of sending a portion of our army to Kandahar and Herat, in spite of the protests and resistance of the Afghan nation:—

But waiving these considerations, let us look at home. Can we safely send forth the flower of our army to a point which cannot be reached in less than three months, at a distance from its magazines and supplies, and with its line of communication liable at any time to be interrupted? What if this army should sustain a check? Can we rely with confidence on the allies whom we leave in the rear? Would they not take advantage of any disaster to our arms? Is it as easy to retreat as to advance? and is not our military reputation too precious to be hazarded unnecessarily in the prosecution of an object which presents such formidable difficulties?—Written on the 29th of January, 1839. See page 279 of "Memorials of Indian Government."

INDIAN TAXATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Lord Salisbury must be well aware that it is by England that the grasp has been tightened, and that the power of the money lender for mischief is great only in the districts under English rule.—Times.

SIR,—Usury is the great scourge of India, and usury is sure to be rampant if the Government persists in levying taxation in silver rupees or gold mohurs on the most miserable population on the earth. This infatuated policy makes the Hindoos the victims of the usurious exactions of the Soukars and Shroffs, the most pitiless of exactors.

The remedy is, as James Wilson began to see just before his death, an issue of taxation paper money recognised by the Government as legal tender of quittance of taxation.*

* This paper document must declare on the face of it that it is issued by the State, and that it is legal tender for debts and taxes; the amount of issue to be fixed by Parliament. It is evident that this does away with the formula we are all familiar with, "I promise to pay."

This want of money explains the frequency of famines, the ruin of tanks, and the general depression of the population.—
Yours,

JAMES HARVEY.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

The Pioneer holds that the first step towards the establishment of a better system would be to lay down distinctly the services for which provision must be made out of local rates. This is quite a distinct question from that regarding the heads of income and expenditure to be made over to the Provincial Governments. The Civil Service may be paid by the local Government, a certain grant being assigned to it by the Government of India for that purpose; and so with prisons, education, and so on. But the primary question to be settled is, what are those services with which the Imperial Government shall have no concern, and which shall be supported entirely out of local rates? When this has been settled, the sums required to be raised by local rates can be estimated, and the taxation apportioned accordingly. Thus, it may be said that the expenditure on jails, schools, public buildings (excluding those connected with the army), communications (excepting the main railways), and police are local charges, which must be met entirely from local rates. So also as to the famine fund, which is in the nature of a poor rate. The provision of funds for these purposes must be made compulsory on each province. But here we are met by the question—Can it be made compulsory? For instance, as has been said above, on Sir John Strachey's authority, in parts of Bombay the agricultural classes are unable to pay anything more than they now give to the Imperial Government as land revenue. If the people who are in this case could read the former part of Sir John's speech, in which he explains that the land revenue is not taxation, and that the agricultural classes are not unduly burdened, they would probably think the Finance Minister somewhat inconsistent. That the Government of India owns a share of the rent, and that it is not taxation to take that share, is true enough. But then the Government should not not take more than their share. When, as in Bombay, they proceed to absorb the landowner's share also, if it is not taxation, it is spoliation. It is not to be supposed, however, that such cases are the rule. Nor does it appear hard to remedy the mistake where it has been made. If, however, the Imperial Government refuses to modify its demand, it must at least assign a portion of it to local rates. It will thus be easy to put all the provinces of India on the same footing. Each will pay in its land revenue to the Imperial Treasury. Each will support by local rates its own schools, police, jails, and communications. The local rates should be assessed, not on the land revenue, but on the gross annual rental, as we have before suggested, and on the value of the land after deducting the land revenue. Great importance attaches to the complete separation of the rates from the land revenue. The rates ought to be variable with the necessities of the time, and they ought to be separated in the minds of the ratepayers from the land revenue. Such separation is impossible under the present system. Added to which, the plan of assessing taxes by a percentage on the share of the rent taken by Government is radically unsound. It lightens the rate where the value of the land to the owner is highest, and intensifies the pressure of the land revenue when it is already heavy. Hence we had the anomaly of estates in Banda and elsewhere being released from the local rates because they were pressed so heavily by the land revenue.

FRONTIER REORGANISATION.

The Friend of India thinks that, notwithstanding the high terms in which Lord Lytton has written of the loyalty and obedience of the Punjab Government, it is evident that he has not found that Government so ready and pliable an instrument for the execution of his policy as he desires, and as he expects his proposed Frontier Commissioner to be. Though the Punjab Government has theoretically no frontier policy of its own, yet practically it acquires certain habits and principles of action in dealing with frontier and trans-frontier tribes which cannot be completely changed without a good deal of time spent in discussion and correspondence. And we can well believe that a strong ruler at the head of a Government like that of the Punjab might be able to retard very considerably the development of a new policy by a new Viceroy, whose knowledge of our frontier relations would necessarily be for a time far inferior to his own. We can also very well understand that this might be a source of some annoyance to an energetic Viceroy, and we need not be surprised that Lord Lytton found the necessity of acting through the Punjab Government a source of "grievous embarrassment." At the same time, if this very source of embarrassment to a new Viceroy in the initiation of a new policy, be the best safeguard of the empire from the danger of a too sudden change of policy, it may be desirable to retain it even at the expense of some personal annoyance to the head of the Government. In short, we are of opinion that while sufficient "unity of action" on the frontier would be attained by handing the whole frontier line over to the care of the Punjab Government, the continuance of that Government in the charge of the frontier is the best guarantee we could have for continuity of frontier policy, without which mere unity of action at any particular time would be but a small advantage. We have not left ourselves space to do more than mention another reason for objecting to the severance of the frontier from the Punjab Government. It is stated by Lord Lytton himself as follows—"That the proposed separation would deprive the Government of India, quoad its administration of the western border, of the assistance of a Government which has cordially carried out our policy, and is best fitted by position and experience to conduct under our orders the relations of the British Government with its Belooch and Afghan neighbours." We cannot but think that this is an important consideration, in spite of the arguments by which he meets it. It is true that, if the Foreign Secretary were always a Punjab official, as far as mere knowledge of the frontier is concerned, the Supreme Government might be on a level with the Punjab Government. But the Foreign Secretary may not always be a Punjab official; and even if he were, he is but one man, and from his position more likely to be a mere tool in the hands of an able Viceroy than the head of the Punjab Government. But there is another consideration. We have long been of opinion that the Supreme Government has devoted too much, rather than too little, of its immediate attention to frontier policy, and that what we call a policy of "fretting the frontier" has been the result. This evil will probably be increased if Lord Lytton's scheme of creating a special frontier administration be carried out. We should prefer to see our frontier policy left even more than it has been in the hands of a powerful Punjab Government, acting loyally, but not blindly under the orders of the Viceroy.

PUBLIC WORKS OUTLAY.

The Friend of India comments on Sir John Strachey's explanation of the way in which the annual  $1\frac{1}{2}$  million of increased taxation is to be spent. It is calculated that that sum represents about the average annual cost of famine, and it has therefore been felt necessary to secure a permanent increase to the revenue to that amount. The Finance Minister seems to say that we shall thus be able to diminish our annual borrowings for public works by  $1\frac{1}{2}$  million, so that what is spent on famine will be saved on public works. It will of course be always easy, whatever amount we may borrow in any year for public works, to say that it would have been  $1\frac{1}{2}$  million greater, but for these new measures of taxation. But Sir John Strachey's own observations, as well as the course of recent events and the progress of opinion on the subject, justify us in expecting that we shall increase instead of diminishing our borrowings under this head. And as we are to borrow for future famines, as for past ones, it does not clearly appear why it should be professed that the proceeds of the new taxes will be devoted to the reduction of debt. As a matter of fact, Government wanted a good annual surplus, and this is how it is to obtain it. We are glad to see that the authorities are becoming convinced that borrowing for reproductive public works is as safe as it is necessary. Some works fail to repay their cost and expenses; and it must always be some years before a new work begins to pay; yet it is found that, taken all together, these works are remunerative. They will certainly become much more so in the future; and the cautious policy now in favour with the authorities here is that we should borrow from year to year just so much money for new works as the profits of old works will pay the interest of. As these profits go on increasing, so would our borrowings increase, while no charge for interest under this head would be thrown on the general Exchequer. This, it will be observed, involves the separation of the Public Works accounts from the general accounts of the State, a measure which we have persistently advocated. It seems also that famine charges should be included under Public Works expenditure, at least that large portion of them which are spent on works.

MOHAMMEDAN BACKWARDNESS.

The Pioneer asks, if Mohammedans are to continue ignorant and backward for ever? No; for the remedy is in their own hands. They must cease to be poor, and they will cease to be poor when they remove the causes which have made them poor. These causes are—the extravagance of the upper classes of the Mohammedan community compared with the mode in which Hindus of the same social position are content to live; their lack of energy and love of repose; the theological prejudices which prevent them from lending money at interest, and which condemn the whole system of banking; and their laws of inheritance, both testate and intestate. As to the general inertness of the Mohammedan population, which the writer in the Aliqarh Gazette makes the first ground of complaint against them, little need be said. The fact has been remarked by every one who knows anything of the conditions of Mohammedan society. The amount of exertion which a Hindu gentleman is capable of undergoing is in general much greater than the amount a Mohammedan gentleman can undergo. It is also true that "the Mussulman gentleman eats better, and wears better clothes; the furniture of his house is more varied, his servants are more numerous, and his amusements more costly." The origin of these extravagant and luxurious habits may no doubt be traced in part to the dominant position which the Mohammedan classes once held in India. They owed their wealth to political services, and they looked on riches as an adjunct to power, not as an end in itself. But besides this, there is the natural tendency to ease and self-indulgence among Mussulmans all the world over. It is bound up with their religion; and, as long as their moralists and theologians hold up economy and abstinence to contempt, the lay classes can hardly be expected to cultivate these salutary social virtues. Still more direct is the effect which the Mohammedan religion has exerted on the economical beliefs of the Mussulman. The prohibition of usury by the Koran has barred to Mohammedans the more lucrative pursuits of modern life. In the early age of a society, the money-lender is always an object of popular dislike. Mohammed in this, as in other respects, was not above the prejudices of his time, and they were faithfully reproduced in what has been called "the order book" of Islam. In Europe we have grown so accustomed to the dissociation of theology, that it is hard to believe that millions of intelligent men are still withheld by the letter of a creed from banking and money-lending. The writer in the Aliqarh Gazette expresses his conviction that "the prohibition of interest has decidedly injured the moral as well as the material prospects of the entire Mohammedan community." The science of political economy is, he mournfully says, a sealed book to his countrymen. He has therefore had to explain at length the elementary principles of the science. Religious prejudices may and do prevent Mohammedans from lending, and thus from becoming richer; but they cannot prevent them from being obliged to borrow. The only conclusion is, that "the prohibitions about interest which exist in the Koran must be explained away as meaning something entirely different, or as applicable only to a particular society in a particular state of development and civilisation."

THE ROLE OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

One whom, without offence to any other Pressman now in India, we may term the Chief of Indian journalists, at the Calcutta Trades' dinner last week, most ably and correctly defined the position of the Press in this country. Mr. Robert Knight, of the Statesman, in responding to the toast of the Press, worthily proposed by Mr. F. Wyman, said:—"The Press of India, gentlemen, cannot healthfully assume any other functions than those of a well-informed loyal opposition to the Government. I have sometimes tried to make my meaning clear by describing our functions as those of her Majesty's Opposition. The Press of India must be well-informed and loyal, but we must not forget that its proper functions are still those of an Opposition. The Government of the country has no other check upon it whatever. It is answerable to no one for its acts, and nothing like 'representation' being possible in India, it is the first and constant duty of the Press to criticise, and, where necessary, oppose both Government measures and men. The fact that this is our proper function should make official men look, I think, with some allowance and with generosity upon the Press. You official gentlemen are always the 'ins,' we the 'outs,' and there should be a generous remembrance of this fact. The Fourth Estate is not a very strong body in India; we are in fact very weak, and official men should not be too hasty to resent our criticisms. One thing is certainly very desirable, namely, that there should be no hostile feeling between the Government and the Press. I do not know well how it came about, but it unfortunately is the fact, that down to Lord Lytton's arrival amongst us, there was a growing alienation of feeling between the Press and the Government. And I do not think it was our fault. Somehow or other, the Government had come to look upon us as enemies to the State, whom it was compelled to tolerate, but who were to be made as little influential as possible upon the course of affairs. If there were time to do so, I could give you some curious incidents illustrating the complaint. We owe much in this matter to Lord Lytton. From the day almost of his arrival amongst us there has been a steady change, and the old hostility is everywhere giving place to friendly relations. The Government generously gives us all we ask for, and I am most glad to be able to associate Mr. Eden's name with that of Lord Lytton in this respect, and to acknowledge warmly that he also gives us generously whatever information we ask for. Nothing could be more complete than the change of attitude towards us in the present administrations, both Imperial and Local, as compared with that of its predecessors. I feel that we owe much to Lord Lytton personally in the matter, and my own strong desire is that we should give both the Imperial and Local Governments all the support we can, consistently with our offices as an Opposition. If I say a word, Sir, upon politics before I sit down, I may excuse myself by the example of his Lordship the Chief Justice, and trust you will forgive me. In looking down these tables, and in presence of so many members of the Government, will you forgive my saying, that I think the line is far too sharply drawn in India between the official and non-official bodies. It is not healthy that that should be so broadly and markedly drawn as it is. Everyone must be impressed with the great power of many of the gentlemen we see here to-night. Well, we take one gentleman from the mercantile community and put him into the Imperial Council; and we take one tradesman, and put him into the Local Council, and there we stop. Surely, Sir, it would be wise to go a good deal further. Why should we not have three or four merchants, and three or four of the great tradesmen of Calcutta in these Councils? That they want strengthening numerically, everyone feels. The exclusion of her Majesty's judges from these Councils I have always regarded as a calamity; but what seems to me very desirable is that the sharp line that is now drawn between the official and non-official bodies should give place to wiser arrangements. I suppose we all come from pretty much the same classes at home, and I cannot think it healthy that there should be the wide separation there now is between the official and non-official bodies in India, and we might do something to lessen it, I think, by opening the Councils more widely than now to the great class of non-official men such as we see here at this table.

Miscellaneous.

FAMINE COMMISSION.—A Calcutta paper states that Mr. Justice Cunningham will probably be put upon the Famine Commission.

BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—Mr. J. Okinealy, Officiating Home Secretary, has been offered and has accepted a seat in the Bengal Legislative Council vacated by Mr. Princep's going to the High Court.

PUBLIC WORKS.—The foundation-stone of the Albert Edward Breakwater at Mandvi was laid on the 30th January, by his Highness the Maharajah of Mandvi. The Dhond and Munmar Railway is progressing. It will work from Dhond to Nuggur with ballast from the 15th March.

SKETCHES OF THE JAWAKIS' COUNTRY.—Numerous clever landscape sketches of the country of the Jawakis have been executed by Lieutenant Bartram, R.E., for the Quartermaster-General's office, and they will be photozincographed. They will add materially to the interest of the report of the expedition.

CAPTURE OF A ROBBER CHIEF.—The recent capture of Abas Khan, with fifteen of his gang, is a matter for congratulation so far as the Border is concerned. He was the boldest and most successful of all the robber chiefs on the Hazara frontier, and his capture has been for years desired. The success has been due to the energy of the Extra Assistant Commissioner in Hazara, Kazi Meer Alum.

MILITARY EXPENDITURE.—It is reported that the Government of India is preparing a strong protest to the Secretary of State on the extravagance of the Military expenditure in England charged against India. We understand also that the British Indian Association proposes to call a public meeting to memorialize Parliament on the above subject, as well as the necessity for a general reduction in expenditure.

THE ANGLO-MOHAMMEDAN COLLEGE.—The Viceroy has presented Mr. Syed Ahmed Khan with a silver salver bearing the following inscription:—"From Robert, Lord Lytton, G.C.B., G.M.S.I., Viceroy and Governor-General of India, to Moulvi Syed Ahmed, Khan Bahadoor, C.S.I., President of the Mohammedan Anglo-Oriental College at Aligurh, in remembrance of the laying of the foundation stone of the College by his Excellency on the 8th of January, 1877, and as a token of esteem and friendship.—Calcutta, 1st January, 1878."

ACCIDENT TO BRIGADIER-GENERAL KEYES.—Brigadier-General Keyes has met with an accident whilst playing cricket at Kohat, his little finger having been broken in two places. He is at present at Peshawur, but is going on furlough. His term of service will expire next month, when Major-General Roberts, at present Quartermaster General, will succeed him in command of the frontier force, as a temporary arrangement, Colonel C. C. Johnson acting as Quartermaster General.

BRITISH BURMAH.—Mr. J. Jardine's appointment to the Judicial Commissionership of British Burmah, and Lieutenant-Colonel Tweedie's to officiate as Resident at Mandalay, has been gazetted. Both appointments had been previously announced.—The Letters Patent erecting the Bishopric of Rangoon, and appointing the Right Rev. Jonathan Holt Titcomb to be the first Bishop, have been published. The creation of the Right Rev. Thomas Valpy French to be Bishop of Lahor is also officially announced. Both Prelates become additional Senior Chaplains on the Bengal establishment.

THE TIRHOOT RAILWAY.—We understand that the Secretary of State has sanctioned the revised estimates for the Tirhoot Railway. The total of these estimates amounts to Rs. 55,96,882, but from this has been deducted a sum of nearly Rs. 13,00,000, as representing that portion of the outlay on the temporary famine line, which was subsequently found to be incapable of being permanently utilised, and Rs. 3,00,000 as the cost of the ferry over the Ganges. The balance representing the cost of the permanent railway itself is about Rs. 39,90,000. The cost per mile, therefore, is about £5,000.—Times of India.

FRONTIER POLICE.—During the stay of the Lieutenant Governor at Peshawar, it is stated by the Civil and Military Gazette, that a committee, composed of the Civil and Military Secretaries to the Local Government, the Inspector General of Police and the Commissioner of Peshawar with his district and police assistants, will be appointed to discuss the question of police organisation of the Peshawar, Hazara, and Kohat districts, the subject of border defence and disarmament, and the enrolment of new levies.

THE INDIAN PRESS.—The little local paper, the Indian Spectator, has more modesty than most of its class. Wishing to be very emphatic, it exclaimed yesterday, "Here we must beg our one reader's candid attention."—The Statesman understands that the editorship of the Calcutta Review has been temporarily entrusted to Mr. Digby, of the Madras Times.—The editor of the Calcutta Review requests us—Times of India—to state that he has deemed it right to tender to the Calcutta Bar an apology for certain unwarrantable imputations against the Indian Bar, which were unwittingly allowed to appear in an article in the last number of the Review.

SINDIA'S ALLEGED DISCOURTESY.—The Decca Prakash says:—"We cannot comprehend why Maharajah Sindia should be obliged to visit the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. The Native Princes have constantly to come in contact with the Governor-General who, as representative of her Majesty the Empress of India, has an undeniable claim to the respect of the Native Princes. But, therefore, it does not follow that they are also bound to visit and pay their respects to the Lieutenant-Governor. To compel them to do this by playing upon their fears would be exasperating them. Now that there are various difficulties looking us in the face from outside, it would not be reasonable to offend the Native Princes, and thereby produce internal discord. On the contrary, the British Government should do all it can to promote their good feeling."

RAILWAYS AND THE GRAIN TRAFFIC.—Apropos of the grain trade, it is a matter to be regretted, that the broad gauge portion of the Punjab Northern State Railway has not been completed. The evils of break of gauge are now being keenly felt and forcibly demonstrated. It is well known that for months past the rolling-stock on the line between Lahor and Jhelum has been totally inadequate for the ordinary traffic of the line. The consequence will be, that a vast quantity of the grain now being exported to Jummo, will be sent by road rather than by the railway, which has not sufficient carriage to convey it. Native dealers, sending in their produce from Ferozepore and its vicinity in native bullock carts, will naturally prefer sending those carts on, to breaking bulk at Lahor, especially as their doing so will involve the detention of their grain for a considerable time at Lahor, and the risks attendant upon such a delay, namely, damage by wet, &c.—Civil and Military Gazette.

MISMANAGEMENT OF GRASS LANDS.—Major C. McIntroy, the officer in charge of Amrut Mahal, or cattle breeding establishment at Hoonsoor in Mysor remarks that Mr. Robertson's belief regarding the mismanagement of grass lands by ryots tallies completely with his own experience. "It is lamentable to observe the wanton destruction of pasture on the one hand, and on the other the apathy displayed by the natives in securing the enormous quantities of excellent jungle grass which is annually burnt or otherwise lost. I cannot even get surplus kawal grass cut and stacked on the condition of giving the workers half of it for their own use. With a gang of Tamil coolies at my disposal and the use of the Government elephants I could stack any quantity. No doubt the increase of cultivation has diminished the waste lands formerly used for grazing, and eventually this will become a very serious question; but in the meantime, and for many a year to come, there ought, with the most common care and forethought, to be ample grass for the present needs of five times the number of cattle in the country, and to provide a reserve of hay for such seasons as the one through which we have just passed."

NEWS FROM THE DUARS.—A correspondent writes to the Darjeeling News:—"There is but little news to chronicle from this side of the Teesta. Major Money, the Deputy Commissioner, is at present 'starring it' amongst the planters; and has been received very well considering his seeming hostility to the planters' interests. Jungle fires are very prevalent just now. I know of one garden on which every coolie hut was burnt down except one. There are very few gardens which have not suffered somewhat in this respect. Is there no law by which the 'gentle Mechi' can get in a row for firing jungle? For really the amount of damage these senseless fires cause is beyond belief. The coolies have turned out somewhat truculent on one garden, and proceeded to go for the manager, a youth just out from home. With 'smiles that were child-like and bland' the interesting (if somewhat dirty) Paharians, with that pluck so common to them, came on the unfortunate youth, like the wolf on the fold, in a close phalanx of some sixty or eighty men. The result of all this is that the unfortunate Saheb is still in the Doctor's hands, and is, I hear, ordered home,—as he has been injured very seriously internally. Let us hope that justice will come down heavily on the offending parties. It is quite time, too, that notice was taken of these rows, as this is the third one within eighteen months; no notice having been taken of the other two.

NEWS FROM KABUL.—Further advices from Kabul state that some of the Khans of the tribes residing on the Kandahar frontier have shown symptoms of disaffection to the Cabul Government, and it is reported that they have opened communications with British officers at Quettah, both by letter and in person. This, it is said, having been made known to the Ameer, stringent orders have been issued by him to his father-in-law, Meer Afzul Khan, Governor of Kandahar, to prohibit any such intercourse, and to endeavour to conciliate the disaffected tribes. Very heavy snow fell in the neighbourhood of Cabul in January, and the march of two cavalry regiments from that city to Jellalabad was postponed in consequence of the roads being blocked up. Disturbances are reported at Herat. It is believed that one of the Khans, the father-in-law of the imprisoned Sirdar Yakub Khan, is fomenting them with a view of hastening the release of the latter. On the other hand, it is said that Russia has a hand in the raising of disturbances on the Afghan frontier, and has stationed a force in the neighbourhood in the hope of being able to employ them to put down any rising at a convenient opportunity. Chetan Shah, the physician in attendance on the Amir, reports the Amir to be suffering from cough and spitting of blood. His Highness will not permit Chetan Shah to leave him to return to the Punjab, as he wishes, and has offered him the charge of a hospital at Cabul, with the sanitary supervision of the town, on a thousand rupees a month. A tax was recently imposed on the Hindu inhabitants of Cabul of eight rupees per house, in lieu of military service, to which the Hindus demur.—Civil and Military Gazette.

A NEW USE FOR TOUGHENED GLASS.—Inventions come upon us thick and fast in these days, and many are of a very practical and useful nature. The latest we hear of is one that all who use "types" as the principal instruments of their business will assuredly welcome, and from which the reading public will no doubt indirectly largely benefit. The following notice of this invention we extract from the Paris letter of the Pioneer:—"In the course of the evening, in a short interval of the music, our host came up to me and put a little French brochure of sixteen pages in my hand, saying—'That's curious, isn't?' and then, some music beginning again, he went away. At first I could see nothing curious in it; it seemed only an advertising circular of some Parisian typefounders. On looking into it, however, more carefully I found that it was indeed very curious. It certainly was only a prospectus or specimen book of types, but the types referred to were not the ordinary ones, of metal, but glass types of the new 'toughened glass.' The brochure itself was throughout printed with these glass-types, and no printing, with metal type fresh from the foundries, was ever more beautifully clear. My host assured me subsequently that the invention would infallibly supersede all metal-type casting, inasmuch as the toughened glass-types would be found incomparably cheaper as being almost everlasting, and everlasting too in the sense that they would never deteriorate, never get dull and blunt at the edges, but remain sharp and clear while successive sets of metal types were worn out and melted down."

CALCUTTA GOSSIP.—My official friends may be interested to know that Mr. A. C. Lyall will probably rejoin the Home Office about the middle of March, and hold it until Mr. Stewart Bayley's hands are free from special work, in June, perhaps, when Mr. Lyall will become Foreign Secretary. But between that date and the date of Mr. Aitchison's departure from Calcutta—he is due in Mysor to relieve Mr. Saunders before March 31—there will be a hiatus, which some more or less distinguished dummy will be elected to fill; Lord Lytton himself pulling the strings and accepting all the responsibility. Mr. Howell will take up his substantive appointment as Commissioner of Jubbulpore immediately on his return from England. Of course you would like to know who is to follow Mr. Lyall in Rajpootana. So should I. It is, I believe, a matter about which even the great Jove himself is at this moment as ignorant as mortals. But I should say that Sir Richard Pollock is no longer "in it;" and that a new man, Major E. R. C. Bradford, decidedly is. He has all the tact and patience, all the knowledge of native character, the energy and firmness, the model agent, should possess: he is also well beloved of the leading chiefs in Rajpootana, especially of Jeypore: whether these qualifications will weigh successfully against his want of years, remains to be seen. The Telegraph Department still wants a Chief vice Robinson, but I think that a reply by wire to the despatch which has been sent home on the subject is almost full due. The arrangement proposed is that Colonel Champain, R.E., shall become Director-General in India; and Mr. Albert Cappel, who has more than once officiated here, succeeds Colonel Champain as Director-in-Chief of the Indo-European Department at home. Lieutenant-General Sam Browne, head of our Indian Studs, goes home on leave at the end of April, and Colonel B. Parrot, of the Haupper Depot, takes his place. So that your announcement of this some months ago was merely discounting history. There is every prospect of Sir Stuart Hogg returning to Calcutta en garcon for a time next winter; in what capacity I do not know. Lieutenant-General Daly retires in September next, when his time is up. I shall be curious to see if Colonel Watson steps into his shoes again: as though it were lawful to spoil a splendid soldier in order to make an indifferent political. It is rumoured that Colonel Keatinge intends vacating Assam very shortly, but as this has been "rumoured" any time the last two years, one need not hasten to speculate about his successor. Perhaps the planters don't know when they are well off: but they want a change. Should that change come about, then the mistake of wasting a good administration in the Financial Secretariat will be the more apparent. It may almost be said that in the choice of the next Chief Commissioner lies the making or marring of a great province. The labour question is fast becoming a critical one; so is that of improved communications. Mr. Bernard would suit both the planters and the situation. Then, too, Mr. Batten could be allowed to follow his unnatural bent for figures, as Mr. Chapman's successor. And that reminds me that no reply has as yet been received to the Viceroy's recommendations about the impending vacancy in Council. Is it possible that my Lord Salisbury is meditating a surprise? Mr. Allan Hume will resume his appointment as Secretary to Government in the Etcetera Department before long, Mr. Batten reverting to Salt, I suppose. Colonel W. M. Lees, the Deputy Secretary in the Military Department, takes furlough shortly, and of course Captain Crookshank, the 1st Assistant, officiates for him. I assume that they will continue to separate the Deputy from his chief; you may safely back custom against common-sense, as a rule. Mr. G. W. Kellner, the Military Accountant-General, retires next month, after a life-time in harness, his mantle falling upon Major O. R. Newmarch, who will soon be on his way out. When Mr. O'Kinealy ends his brief and brilliant reign in the Home Office, which will be shortly, he becomes Legal Remembrancer in Bengal, a post which ought to be well paid if the work is as dry as it sounds. I should not wonder if they put a judge on the Famine Commission, nor, in that case, if the judge were Mr. Cunningham; but I believe that the despatch which deals with the constitution of the Commission is rather a foggy one. Among big moves it seems quite on the cards, as I once before hinted, that Sir John Strachey may take six months' leave from about August next, in order to seek further advice about that ever-present trouble, his eyesight. I should not wonder, too, if there proved to be some truth in that rumour which you published about Sir Richard Temple meditating retirement at no distant date; especially when it is known that he only bound himself to his present appointment for two years. He has ample means, a sick wife at home, and soaring ambitions which Bombay will never satisfy. Sir Richard's presence of mind in providing for two members of his personal staff out of Bombay, has been generally admired.—Pioneer.

STATION TALK.

MADRAS, Feb. 9.—Sir Andrew Clarke has come and gone without causing much stir amongst us. His opinions, however, of the Alpha gold works at Devalah, and of gold mining in the Wainad generally, will be valuable, for, as an old Australian, his ideas on the subject will be of importance to those who believe firmly in the success of the enterprise in question. The Managing Director, in his report to the shareholders of the Prince of Wales' Gold Prospecting Company, writing from Devalah on the 16th January, states how well matters are progressing, and after entering into details, adds:—"We have now convinced the public of the paying capabilities of the Alpha Reef, which if worked on a large scale, as it will probably be soon, the expenditure of raising stone, crushing and amalgamating, will be only one-third of what we have expended. Capital, skilled labour, and proper management are the three requirements to make the Wainad gold-fields one of the safest investments ever started in India,"—a statement which ought to be very satisfactory to the shareholders, who have certainly had firm faith in their bold enterprise turning out well. Time, however, will prove whether there is any real foundation for hope as regards Wainad gold-digging; but the late reports are certainly very satisfactory. Sir Andrew Clarke returns here on the 15th instant; he does not seem thoroughly opposed to the harbour works, and indeed appears to entertain some hopes of their being ultimately of use to the Presidency. His visit will encourage those who have had good cause to doubt of the success of the design, and although Sir Andrew has never approved of the works, he is by no means anxious to put a stop to them. A second train is being run daily by the South Indian Railway Company from the Palaveram quarries with stone for the harbour works, it being infinitely better suited for this purpose than the stone procured from Umbatoor. All kinds of hard things have been said about committees, especially of late, when committees have had an important part to play in the history of the famine year. It is on record that a committee often simply signifies a certain number of people "of different temperaments, different ideas, and different educations," who will infallibly do nothing, or almost nothing, with excessive rapidity. The age has been contemptuously called "an age of committees," and of committees which do nothing, and whose energy evaporates in talk. But to this bitterness and satire there is a certain limit. The men who lose valuable time, who expend energy and breath in trying to support what they suppose to be a good cause, are willing enough to bear their burden, and so be called "weak and inefficient." They are familiar with the word "palaver," applied to their lengthy discourses, and are inclined to forgive something and overlook a good deal more in the shape of playful banter aimed at committees in general and members of certain committees in particular. But even the patience and endurance of committees, as I have said, have a limit. At a small station not a hundred miles from Madras there exists a local relief committee (composed entirely of English gentlemen), against which several petitions had been sent. One of the petitions was by a native schoolmaster who, after stating what complaints he had to make, calmly added that "there being no native gentleman on the committee it cannot be trustworthy!"—Englishman Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

REFORMS IN HAIDARABAD.—It is reported that Sir Salar Jung contemplates introducing important reforms in the Nizam's dominions. He intends to have the judicial department thoroughly reorganised. A Criminal and an Appellate Court are to be established at Haidarabad, having the powers of the High Courts of the British Government; they will hear appeals from all the districts in the Nizam's territories. A committee, headed by Syud Feda Hussain Khan, is formed to draw up and consider the necessary reforms to be introduced in the judicial department of the Nizam's Government.

A PLUCKY ACT.—Mr. G. P. Clerk, Assistant Director, Revenue Settlement, did a plucky thing the other day, at Punganoor, when he plunged twice into a deep and narrow circular well in the endeavour to save the life of a girl named Seethammal, aged about ten years, who had accidentally fallen in while engaged in drawing water. The diameter of the well is not stated, but Mr. Clerk's feat must have been acrobatic as well as brave. We are glad to see the thanks of Government will be conveyed to him for his humane exertions, though he did not succeed in saving the poor girl's life.—Madras Mail.

CHILD MURDER.—At the last Sessions, held at South Arcot, a woman named Virammal was put upon her trial for having murdered her child by burying it alive. The prisoner, a poor famine-stricken woman, owned to the crime, and stated that the father of the child had deserted her at the time of the infant's birth, and that, being unable to support herself and the baby, she resolved to bury it. For this purpose she took the infant to the tank of the Palar river, where, having dug a hole, she placed the little one in it and covered it over with sand. The Court convicted the prisoner and sentenced her to transportation for life.

THE BANGALORE BANK.—The report of the inspectors appointed to inquire into the status of the Bangalore Bank lays bare a systematic course of irregularities, on the part of the officials of the bank, which must rather astonish the shareholders. The inspectors conclude their report by saying:—"We have to remark that the shareholders are in some measure to blame for having permitted Mr. Bain to remain in office so long. They ought to have insisted upon his resignation some two years ago. They knew him to be an old man, and that he had a severe attack of illness early in 1876, which must have weakened him in body and mind, and this was followed by a family bereavement in the death of his wife. His carelessness and neglect of duty can doubtless be traced to these causes, and ever since the 29th June, 1877, he did not even initial the register of 'Cash with the Agent.' To his credit, however, we are bound to state, that during the eleven years he was Agent of the Bank the shareholders have received Rs. 5,78,004-1-5 in dividends, which amounts to eighty-seven per cent. on the present capital, and nearly 100 per cent. on the average capital for the last eleven years. Had the loss been in due course of business, the shareholders would not have much room for complaint in now being called upon to lose nine per cent. of their capital; but the loss could not have occurred had closer supervision been exercised by the directors, and had the president and cashier attended to their legitimate duties instead of to their own interests, and had Mr. Bain not embarked in the tannery business, against the rules of the Bank."

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN SIR S. JUNG AND THE GOVERNMENT.—The Sekandarabad correspondent of the Bombay Gazette writes:—"The dispute between the British and the Nizam's Government is not of a political nature, it is simply a difference of opinion on a point of law as to who is to succeed to a Maharajaship, the last incumbent of which died about five years ago, and even if Sir Salar Jung had taken the action which he is said to have done by your 'Bellary Correspondent,' the matter is not of such importance as to cause a collision between the two Governments. I can, however, now state on good authority that your 'Bellary Correspondent' was entirely misinformed on the matter—unfortunately so, as his telegram has caused a good deal of mischief. The Nizam's Government, though holding that the nominee of the British Government is not the rightful heir, has hitherto taken no steps to dispossess him; and, in fact, nothing whatever has occurred which could give any colour to the telegram published in the Gazette of the 10th December, which has evoked comment not only in India, but also in England. Sir Salar Jung some time ago informed the Resident what were the views of his law officers on the case, and that the very precedents cited by the Board of Revenue in support of their decision confirmed the correctness of the opinions expressed by the Nizam's Government. The papers in connection with this case were ultimately submitted by the Government of Madras to the High Court of the Presidency; and the judges, I believe, have expressed themselves more in favour of the decision of Sir Salar Jung than of that of the Board of Revenue. But yet the Madras Government has taken no steps to withdraw from the position it had originally assumed, and which clearly appears to be untenable. It would not be at all derogatory to the dignity of the British Government to cancel its previous order, and carry out the decision of Sir Salar Jung should that be found to be correct; I hope, therefore, this course will soon be adopted."

LOCUSTS IN TINNEVELLY.—We have received the following letter from the Rev. R. C. Macdonald, C.M.S.:—"As no mention has been made in your paper of the appearance of locusts in Tinnevely, I venture to send you some particulars, having this week been an eye witness of the mischief caused by these ravenous creatures. I was travelling by the South Indian Railway on Monday from Palamcotta to Madura, and when about five miles from Maniachi, observed a swarm of what seemed at first sight to be dragon flies. I was informed that they were locusts, and had been destroying the crops south of Madura, and were wending their way towards Tuticorin, I watched with eagerness for the termination of this cloud of intruders; but alas! they seemed to increase mile by mile as we travelled on, and in the neighbourhood of Sattoor were so numerous that they literally darkened the air, and formed a thick cloud. The appearance on looking upwards was similar to that of a heavy snow storm. On the ground were myriads of small ones of a brown colour without wings skipping about like tiny frogs. These, I have since heard, are locusts in an earlier stage of development. Onward we wended our way, but rapidly flew the destroyers, sometimes apparently with us, sometimes as if meeting us. Occasionally they seemed to be stopped by a broad river, and we thought that their course was impeded, but at a little distance they again appeared, nor did we lose sight of them until, within about thirty miles of Madura, the darkness hid them from our sight. On inquiry at one of the stations I learned that they only touch the dry crops, but that whole fields of cholam have been destroyed, and the bare husk alone remains on the stalk to tell the tale. In some fields the poor ryots were cutting down the straw, and now and then they stopped, lifted up their eyes, and stretched out their hands as if lost in wonder. One of the villagers remarked that the like had never been seen before, and the appearance of locusts in these parts seem to be unprecedented. The swarm extended on each side of the line of rail as far as the eye could reach, with little intermission, and the mischief caused by such millions of destroyers must greatly increase the distress of the natives, so that I much fear the sad effects of the famine will be considerably prolonged even should a strong wind arise, to send them to sea."—Madras Mail.

RELEASE OF MOHAMMAD BIN KALIFA.

Some time in 1869 there had been certain disturbances in and near the island of Bahrein amongst the chiefs who have a claim to joint sovereignty over that principality. Colonel Lewis Pelly, the then Resident in the Gulf, acting in his usual peremptory fashion, came down on the disputants, seizing some vessels and other property belonging to them, laid hands on the oldest members of the family of the reigning Sheik Mohammad bin Kalifa and deported him through to Bombay. Mohammad bin Kalifa is a dangerous political character, to be dealt with as such by the authorities. Along with the Sheik, we believe, two or three of his sons or nephews were brought away into banishment, also certain attendants as retainers. Some of the other prominent belligerents were put in possession of the gadi or mansab of Bahrein, according to some rhyme or reason of which we know nothing. The plea for this "Jedburgh justice" appears to have been that one Sheik Muhammad's opponents had been slain in some tumult that had arisen during or pending a conference between the disputants. It was alleged, we understand, on the part of the Sheik that the scrimmage and resulting casualty was a merely accidental or inadvertent occurrence for which Mohammad bin Kalifa was in no way responsible. It is impossible to say now what the merits of the affair may have been, as Colonel Pelly is not a man who would be likely to expend much judicial inquiry on the matter. Probably, while really acting as a dictator with full powers, the resident had used expressions of "friendly neutrality;" for it seems the Sheik and his relatives came away to India quietly enough, they being under the impression that they were being taken on a trip to Bombay to talk the whole matter over with the Government there. This anticipation was consistent enough with the policy formerly pursued in arranging the affairs of the Gulf. Whilst the British officers there had been accustomed to exercise all due firmness in suppressing disorder and in enforcing the conditions of that excellent arrangement, the maritime truce, they had always reserved to the Bombay Government the ultimate decision on contested rights. Hence that Government had in its hands all the threads of the apparently tangled politics of the Gulf and of Eastern Arabia, so that substantial justice was generally done. It was on this understanding that Sheik Mohammad bin Kalifa was willing to submit himself and the sovereign rights of his family to the arbitrament of the Bombay Governor and Council. But the old Sheik had not kept pace with the times. The regime of telegraphic orders and peremptory, therefore superficial, decisions was setting in. It does not appear that Colonel Pelly's captives—for as such they found themselves treated—had the least opportunity of stating their case before the Bombay authorities. In consequence, it must be presumed, of the reports made by the resident to the remote Foreign Office at Simla, the aged Sheik and his associates were speedily sent off to the fortress of Asirgarh. How long they remained there we do not know; but they were afterwards transferred to Chunar, where for years they have been interned. Being prisoners whose case was decided, and cut off from all communication with friends or advisers, they were left to pine away in captivity, "to dull forgetfulness a prey." At last, however, one of the old chief's sons, Sheik Ali bin Mohammad, plucked up courage to come to India, to ascertain the fate of his father and see if anything could be done towards the relief of him and his fellow captives. The grievance was brought to the notice of his Excellency Lord Lytton, and after due inquiry orders have been issued for the conditional liberation of the aged Sheik and his companions. The chief condition is that they are not to return to the Gulf, but are to reside at or near Aden under some surveillance by the resident there. We shall scarcely err in tracing the intervention in the case of these friendless exiles to the considerate attention of Colonel O. T. Burne.—Englishman.

Miscellaneous.

THE NEW BISHOP OF LAHOR.—The Right Rev. Dr. French, Bishop of Lahor, preached in Byculla Church on Sunday, Feb. 10.

NAVAL.—Admiral Corbett, in the Undaunted, set out from Bombay for Aden, where a new crew will be taken on board the flagship.

ASTRONOMICAL.—A partial eclipse of the moon was visible in Calcutta on Sunday, beginning at about six o'clock, and lasting for half-an-hour.

SIR ANDREW CLARKE.—On Monday, January 30, Sir Andrew Clarke returned to Bombay from Madras by the Raichore mail train under a salute of fifteen guns. Sir Andrew is staying at present at Government House, Malabar Point.

MILITARY.—A large number of invalids from the various corps in garrison left Lucknow on the evening of the 12th February, by train, en route to Bombay, whence they would embark on the troop-ship to sail about the 1st of March. The Sitapur and Fyzabad detachments of invalids left on Wednesday, February 13, for the same destination.

IMMIGRATION.—The report of the Immigration Commission has not yet passed out of the printer's hands, but we are enabled to state that the notice of its contents as previously given was strictly accurate. A large number of witnesses were examined, and their opinions have been carefully kept in view by the framers of the report.

GIRL UNDERGRADUATES.—The first girls who have been permitted to present themselves at the Bombay University Entrance Examination have by their success amply vindicated the justice of the step taken by the University. Two of the three presented have passed. One, Miss Conway, from the John Connon Scottish School, Fort, has taken a very distinguished place, being sixth in the order of merit amongst a thousand and thirty candidates. The other girl, Miss Graham, was educated in the Scottish School, Byculla. It reflects much credit on the Scottish day schools that they have been the first to send girls to the examination, and that their success has been so signal.

DEATH OF A MISSIONARY.—The Bombay Guardian hears with much regret of the death of the Rev. Mr. Beynon, of Belgaum. Mr. Beynon was one of the oldest missionaries in India, having come out in 1825. Nor was it till he had been in the country forty-eight years that he re-visited his native land. He has been a resident of Belgaum for nearly the whole of his Indian career. Mr. Beynon was born in the principality. He was connected with the London Missionary Society. Since his return from Europe in 1875 he has not been actively engaged in mission work. In the last few years Mr. Beynon has suffered from failure of sight and other infirmities. Mrs. Beynon, his partner and helpmeet in his long missionary course, survives him.

THE GOVERNOR.—Mhow, Feb. 16.—The mail train, carrying H.E. Sir R. Temple and staff, arrived at the Mhow Station on the 14th inst. A few military officers and some of the leading Parsee gentlemen were present to receive his Excellency. An address had been prepared for presentation to his Excellency by the Parsee inhabitants of the station, but as he was not to break his journey here but go straight to Indor first, and then to come back on the next day as a guest of the 3rd Hussars, the address was not read. His Excellency alighted from the saloon, when Colonel Bates, Major van Heythusen, Major Temple, Dr. Manifold, Colonel Keays, and others were introduced to his Excellency. A deputation from the Parsees waited upon his Excellency with a congratulatory address. It was read out by Mr. A. Dadabhoy, and then presented to his Excellency in a rich velvet cover.

THE GOVERNOR'S BREAKFASTS.—From the Volunteers to their honorary Colonel is but a short step, and that is to remark that Sir Richard, being determined to crown the edifice of his personal popularity, has done so by announcing that he will restore the dynasty of public breakfasts. These occasional matutinal ceremonies were an institution in Bombay from time immemorial until towards the close of Sir Bartle Frere's régime, when, on some plea or other not announced, they fell into disuse. Many and broad were the hints given to Sir Seymour Fitzgerald that his reign would come to a bad end if he did not revive the dejeuner custom; but he refused to be charmed with the breakfast idea, though he was not illiberal in the matter of evening parties and balls. Only in Sir Philip Wodehouse's time faith had well nigh died out, and though he was an hospitable-looking seigneur, and a genial host, no one seemed to have the courage to tell him to try public breakfasts in times when his popularity was at ebb. But the pleasant custom of older times has never been forgotten; and now, in a happy moment, the Baronet of Behar has hit upon its restoration. Sir Richard will give a good breakfast, and how long he will endure patiently the much button-holding to which he will afterwards be subjected remains to be noticed. But this process is the final cause and salutary purpose of the pleasant meal, so his Excellency must school himself to suffer and be civil. Since writing the above, I see the Bombay Gazette condemns the revival of the Governor's breakfast parties, and avers that they are institutions suited only to the sleepy hollows of mofussil stations. The dissentient, not content with liberty to stay away himself, proceeds to warn Sir Richard that he may expect on those occasions to be mobbed by the large percentage of persons which out of a European community of 15,000 must be men with a grievance. Probably, however, his Excellency is too well acquainted with our local census to allow himself to be scared by that Falstaffian estimate of our social forces.—Englishman Correspondent.

THE COTTON FRAUDS ACT.—Mr. Donald Graham, moved by the receipt from an anonymous source of Colonel Moore's pamphlet, and by your statement that the Secretary of State was still hesitating as to the repeal of the Cotton Frauds Act, has done the public the service of examining the pamphlet in a long letter contributed to the Gazette. Mr. Graham points out how fallacious it is to argue from the fact, if it be a fact, that cotton at New Orleans has improved since the merchants, in their own interest, set up an inspecting agency, to the conclusion that Government can interfere to the advantage of the whole country in a trade which is one between experts; and then proceeds to examine Colonel Moore's treatment of the points in the public memorial, which, in Colonel Moore's opinion, are so "easily disposed of." A cavalry charge is not always as destructive as it is imposing; and the points in the memorial seem mostly to have survived the pamphlet. Let me give two instances. The merchants say that it is principally from the districts where the Act is not in force that the best cotton comes, and that, on the other hand, the worst cotton comes from the districts where the Act is most in force. Colonel Moore disposes of this opinion of experts by quoting some cases of adulteration in districts which do not enjoy the Act—as Mr. Graham says, he might just as fitly quote some murder cases from the Bombay police reports to prove that the inhabitants of Bombay are in the habit of murdering each other by elaborating a theory that good cotton is the best and sufficient proof that the Act, or something similar, is in operation; and by treating the awkward circumstance that the Act-ridden districts turn out the worst cotton, much as the clergyman did the knotty passage in Job. "Brethren," said the worthy man, "this is a difficult passage; but let us look look the difficulty boldly in the face, and pass on." Mr. Graham asserts confidently that the Cotton Frauds Department is responsible for the decay of the cotton trade of the Southern Mahratta Country. Again, the memorial says that the working of the Act has, in the opinion of the memorialists, been harsh and vexatious. This is disposed of by the assertion that it has been so to those who have offended against its provisions, or to those who have acted dishonestly, but not to others. Mr. Graham appeals to the records of the department. He wants to know why there were so many prosecutions without convictions; and why—a more pregnant question—so many of the convictions that were obtained were revised on appeal. The merchants here have been taunted before in open Council, and in the person of one of their most distinguished members, with the argument that their objections to an Act so harsh and vexatious only proved that it was serving its purpose as a terror to evil-doers. If Government wait till disinterested persons come forward to exclaim against the Act, they will wait for ever; and in the meantime they ought in fairness to shut their ears to the representations of the officers of the department. But if the merchants are to be listened to, what is to be said of an instance like this:—Broach lies between Kattiawar and Bombay, and the route via Broach for Kattiawar cotton is therefore the quickest, and presumably the cheapest. But the Broach Inspector (and from him there seems to be practically no appeal that is worth anything) will not allow Kattiawar cotton to come into Broach, on the ground that he supposes the object must be to pass it off as Broach cotton. Is it any wonder that the cotton trade of Western India cries out to be saved from a friend who dissembles his love so effectually as this Inspector, and the Act which gives him such arbitrary powers?

Ceylon.

MR. MORPHEW.—The appointment of Mr. Morpew as Manager of the Oriental Banking Corporation in Colombo has been confirmed.

CIVIL.—Mr. Templer has left Galle for Kandy, and is succeeded by Mr. Hume. Numerous addresses presented to Mr. Templer previous to his departure testified to the high respect entertained for him by all classes of society.

PLANTERS' ASSOCIATION.—It is generally understood that Mr. J. L. Shand will be brought forward in opposition to Mr. Gibbon for the Chairmanship of the Planters' Association, at the annual meeting at Kandy on Saturday. The name of Mr. Wall has also been mentioned as likely to be proposed.—Ceylon Times.

DEPARTURES.—The outgoing steamer will take away two well-known residents, Messrs. J. R. Hedges and T. Wright. Mr. Hedges was formerly senior partner in the firm of Lee, Hedges and Co., established many years ago by the late Mr. Lee. Mr. Hedges has been recently interested solely in coffee, the Great Western belonging to him. Mr. Thomas Wright, of the firm of Carson and Co., is the owner of a fine property in Happutella. By the s.s. Pultala, leaving this day for Bombay, another well-known Ceylon resident leaves the island. Mr. Downall, the planting member of Council, has done good service to the body of which he is a prominent member, and he will be remembered pleasantly by very many as an excellent sportsman, an experienced planter, and a very useful public character.—Ceylon Times, Feb. 14.

PROFESSOR ROSS, of the Maharaja's College at Trevandrum, is to be appointed Director of English education in Travankor.

LOCAL rumour has it that the Viceroy will probably visit Darjiling this year. Most likely the wish is father to the thought.

NEW RULES FOR APPOINTMENTS IN THE MINTS.

The following appears in the Gazette of India :—With the approval of the Secretary of State for India, the Governor General in Council is pleased to determine that the selection of officers for employment in the Assay Department shall be made in the following manner :—

I. As declared in Resolution No. 124, dated May 12, 1876, commissioned or covenanted officers only shall, as a general rule, be appointed substantively to the Assay Department.

II. No officer shall be appointed substantively to the Assay Department without having passed an examination in practical and inorganic chemistry at the Royal College of Chemistry and without a certificate from the Royal School of Mines of qualification in metallurgy, specially with reference to the precious metals and their alloys, and of his ability to assay the precious metals and their alloys.

III. Whenever a want of candidates eligible for admission to the Assay Department is foreseen, the Government will permit a selected officer to attend at the laboratory of the Assay Master at Bombay or Calcutta for a period not exceeding six months, in order to prepare himself for a prescribed examination. During this period of probation the full salary of his office will be granted to the officer, on condition that he passes the examination at the end of his probation. An officer who has passed the prescribed examination may be employed in the Assay Department, temporarily, for a period not exceeding twelve months, without having passed the examination and without the certificates of qualification described in Clause II. Save with the special sanction of the Secretary of State for India, no officer may be retained in the Department for a period exceeding twelve months without passing the said examination and obtaining the said certificate.

COLONEL IMPEY, Political Agent at Udaipur, has, on behalf of the Viceroy, presented the Maharawal of Dumganpur with a Delhi imperial banner.

Miscellaneous.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Thibet has left for Bombay with only £25,000 in bar gold. There is no silver whatever taken by the vessel, and this fact is sufficient to prove that the Indian Council finds that the amount of bills sold each week lately has been quite up to its requirements, without having to remit silver as well.

INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.—As if the authorities had not enough of work on hand in the Army Medical Department at home, they are about to introduce great changes into the Service in India, and to absorb the Indian Medical Service in a general, civil, and military establishment, each with its surgeon-general and staff, the officers being taken from the candidates for the army with the option of choosing which branch they will enter. Without expressing any opinion on the merits of the proposed change, we may say that the Lancet will gain a large assent to its opinion that it is a mistake to keep up the distinction between the Sanitary and the Medical Department in India, and that they ought to be amalgamated.—Army and Navy Gazette.

EAST INDIA PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.—The Select Committee appointed by the House of Commons met again on Thursday at Westminster. Mr. H. E. Childers, M.P., occupied the chair. General Dickens was further examined. He said that there were many irrigation works in the Madras Presidency, and they were generally of the nature of "tanks." He knew of two tanks being made. They cost £173,000; in both cases the expenditure was greater than had been expected, and the works had not proved profitable. The debt for productive public works was £17,000,000 for irrigation; and £15,000,000 for State railways, making a total of £32,000,000; that was the estimated amount in 1874. In the future the accounts would represent only actual cash transactions. The new system of accounts lately adopted was a great improvement. General Dickens then replied to a few questions from Sir George Campbell on early failures sustained by Government in public works. This brought the sitting to a conclusion.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for Rs. 50,00,000 (say, £500,000) in bills on India were received on March 13 at the Bank of England, and the amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £300,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8½d.; and to Bombay, £200,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8½d. Tenders on Calcutta at 1s. 8½d. will receive about 11 per cent., and on Bombay at 1s. 8½d. about 85 per cent.; all above in full. Applicants for bills on the former Presidency receive about twice the amount they did last week at the above rate, while for those drawn on Bombay on that occasion of the applications only 6 per cent. were allotted at the same rate, so that in this respect the present allotment is somewhat weaker. There is, however, no change in the price of allotment, although the average rate is fractionally lower. The India Council has again notified its intention of receiving on March 20 tenders for 50 lakhs of rupees (nominally £500,000) in bills on India. The Council will most probably follow the same policy till the close of the financial year, which ends with this month.

AGRARIAN DISORDERS IN INDIA.—A meeting of officers and gentlemen interested in the affairs of the British Government in India was held on Wednesday, under the presidency of Sir George Campbell, M.P., in the Rooms of the East India Association, Great George-street, Westminster, under whose auspices the conference had been called. The subject for consideration was the causes of and remedies for agrarian disorders in India. In an elaborate opening address, Mr. W. Wedderburn, of the Bombay Civil Service, pointed to the fact that the ryot of India is not only without accumulated resources, but is commonly sunk in debt to the money-lender; and the means by which he can be restored to independence and content necessarily formed a problem of the gravest importance to the Indian Government. Mr. Wedderburn urged that the leading remedies for the existing anarchy and pauperism were—conciliation, to heal the quarrel between the classes; improved credit, to lower the rate of interest; and a law of insolvency, to provide a means of escape in extreme cases. The main object, that of conciliation, would be best attained by the development of the ancient panchayat, or village council, so as to constitute it both a permanent board of conciliation for the settlement of class disputes, and also a court of arbitration for the prompt, inexpensive, and satisfactory disposal of suits between individuals. This proposal had the great recommendation to a State burdened with debt and taxation—it need not cost anything. At the conclusion of Mr. Wedderburn's address a brief discussion took place, in which his views were generally commended; and a vote of thanks to him and to the Hon. Chairman closed the proceedings.

THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH COMPANY (LIMITED).—The directors of this company recommend the payment of a dividend for the year 1877 of three per cent., free of income-tax. The report states as follows:—The shareholders are aware that this company's line of telegraph along the Black Sea Coast was destroyed on the 12th of May last, owing to the operations consequent upon the late Russo-Turkish war, thus depriving this company of through communication with the East. The period within which the restoration of the wires could be effected was entirely unknown, as it depended upon the result of the campaign in the Caucasus, and the directors consequently forthwith applied to the Russian Government for permission to erect a wire on the Government line from Kertch, by Mineralni-Wodi to Tiflis, thus forming an alternative route. This permission was granted, and assistance afforded. The Board entered into a contract with Messrs. Siemens to do the work, and the whole 520 miles were completed, the necessary stations opened, and the company's through communication with India restored on the 22nd of August. One wire of the interrupted line along the Black Sea coast was temporarily repaired by the contractors on the 12th of January last, and it will consequently be seen that, but for the prompt steps taken by the board, the company would have been deprived of revenue for just eight months, instead of for three months only, as was actually the case. Communication by a second wire of the Black Sea coast line was secured on the 4th of February, and the repairs are being proceeded with. The company has made a claim upon the Russian Government for expenses occasioned and the loss of revenue sustained, owing to the circumstances above described. The joint-purse agreement authorised by the shareholders between this company and the Eastern Telegraph Company came into operation on the 1st of September, and has continued to work to the satisfaction of both companies.

THE INDIAN FAMINE.—On Monday afternoon a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Indian Famine Fund was held at the Mansion House for the despatch of business. Alderman Sir Thomas White presided; and there were present—General Sir Henry Norman, Mr. C. G. Arbuthnot, Mr. S. P. Low, Mr. Thomas Gray, Mr. William Scott, Mr. Arthur T. Hewitt, Mr. George Parbury, Mr. J. H. Crossman, Mr. Macfadyen, Mr. W. R. Arbuthnot, Mr. Charles Teede, Mr. W. J. Soulsby, (the secretary), and Mr. Winzar (the cashier). The Fund was reported to amount in all to £513,522, of which there was a balance in hand of £4,596, including £2,540, a fourth contribution from New South Wales, per the Mayor of Sydney, and £1,743, being the balance of the fund at Leeds. It was stated that the Melbourne donations, amounting to £30,000, had been sent direct to Madras. In view of the very serious accounts of the increased distress in the famine districts, the Secretary had telegraphed to the Governor of Madras and the Madras Committee, asking whether any fresh appeal was contemplated, and the following replies had been received—namely, from the Duke of Buckingham, Governor of Madras:—"Distress exists, and will increase for some weeks in parts while excessive prices last, but should be completely met by Government arrangements. Do not contemplate fresh appeal;" and from the Madras Relief Committee:—"Distress continues in special areas, and will probably intensify for a few weeks, and last altogether some months, owing to high prices. Governor does not think there is any ground for a renewed appeal, and the committee concur in this opinion; 3½ lakhs of rupees still in hand. Committee here cannot refrain from further expressing their grateful thanks for the noble aid rendered, and especially for the efforts of the Mansion-house Committee." On the motion of Mr. S. P. Low, seconded by Mr. Parbury, a further remittance of £4,000, making £504,000, was directed to be made to the Committee in India. It was stated that during the collection and remittance of the fund the Eastern Telegraph Company had gratuitously sent the messages of the Committee to India and the Colonies, their contribution in this respect being equal to £250; and at the instance of Mr. C. G. Arbuthnot the thanks of the Committee were tendered to the company for their generous courtesy. The Committee then adjourned.

INDIAN APPEALS.—SHEO SINGH RAI v. MUSSUMAT DUKHO AND ANOTHER.—This was an appeal from a decision of the High Court of Judicature for the North-West Provinces at Allahabad of Nov. 27, 1874, affirming in part a prior decree of the Subordinate Judge at Meerut. The questions involved in the suit were as to the laws of adoption among the Indian sect of Jains. Ishk Lall, a Jain, died in 1867, leaving a widow and grandson, who are the two respondents, and a brother, the appellant. After his death the widow took out a certificate of administration to his estate, and obtained possession of a very large amount of movable property which had been acquired by the deceased, including Government notes to the value of over £50,000. The deceased, Ishk Lall, had been an army contractor, and having rendered good service to the Government during the Mutiny received, as a reward, a grant for his life of a Zemindari village in the district of Meerut. The estate reverting on his death to the Government, it was offered for sale to his widow, who purchased it. She then intimated to the authorities that she had adopted her grandson, and that she desired his name to be recorded as her successor. To that the appellant (her husband's brother) objected, contending that according to the custom of the Jains a widow could not adopt without the consent of the near relations of her deceased husband; that Jain law, as he alleged, was identical with Hindoo law, and that a daughter's son could not be adopted. At the suggestion of the High Court the leading members of the Jain community in Delhi, Benares, and Muttara were examined on these points. These proved that, by the custom of the Jains, a widow succeeds to the movable and immovable property of her husband in such absolute right that she can deal with at pleasure and without restriction; that she can adopt her daughter's son without receiving any authority from her husband or his relatives; and that such adopted son would succeed to her husband's estate in the same manner as her own son would have done. The Subordinate Judge at Meerut accordingly passed a decree to this effect, and that decision was afterwards substantially upheld by the High Court. From these judgments the present appeal was instituted. Their lordships intimated that they would take time to consider their judgment.

SETH GOKULDASS GOPALDASS v. MURLI AND ZALIM.—This was an appeal from a decree of the Judicial Committee of the Central Provinces of India, in a suit originally instituted by the appellant against the respondents in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner of Jubbulpore, for the foreclosure of a mortgage. Their lordships intimated that they would humbly advise Her Majesty to reverse the decree of the Courts below, and to order that, in the event of the respondents paying the appellants Rs. 4,320, together with the costs of the proceedings in the Indian Courts within a year, the village in question should be freed and the mortgage discharged. If not, the mortgage would become absolute, and the rights and interests of the respondents in the village would be transferred to and vested in the appellant. No costs of that appeal would be ordered.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, March 11.—NOTICE OF MOTION.—Colonel MURE: After Easter to call attention to the importance, strategically, of establishing telegraphic communication between the mother-country and the Cape of Good Hope; and to the value of the Cape of Good Hope as a station for a large body of troops as a reserve for reinforcements for the army in India; and move a resolution.

INDIAN ARTILLERY.—Mr. HARDY, in answer to Major NOLAN, said that the officers on the lists of the late Bombay, Bengal, and Madras regiments of artillery had the same facilities as those in England for obtaining pensions; indeed, they had rather more, because they had the choice of the Indian pension also. The compulsory clause did not extend to them at present, except in the case of general officers over seventy years of age. The question of extending it to other officers was now under careful consideration.

THE CHURCH IN CEYLON.—In answer to Mr. Alderman M'ARTHUR Sir M. HICKS-BEACH said he believed a memorial was received nearly a year ago from the inhabitants of Ceylon to the Queen, praying for the cessation of ecclesiastical subsidies from the revenues of the colony, but he could not find that any reply was sent to it. Probably a reply was deemed unnecessary, as the public were informed of Lord Carnarvon's decision from the despatches on the subject, and also by the reply given in the House by the present Chief Secretary for Ireland.

SILVER CURRENCY IN INDIA.—Sir GEORGE CAMPBELL gave notice that he would that day fortnight ask the Under-Secretary of State for India whether—now the United States had definitively made silver a legal tender—he would consider if it were possible to establish a common standard of value by the great silver-using countries; and if, by putting more silver into the rupee, the financial and other disturbances caused by the late depreciation in silver might be remedied.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, March 16.—THE INDIAN PRESS.—Mr. SULLIVAN gave notice that on Tuesday he would ask the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the new law relating to the liberty of the Press in India was correctly described in the newspapers of this morning, and whether he would lay a copy of the proposed regulations on the table.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA

Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.
Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa of the Finest Quality,
with the excess of fat extracted.
The Faculty pronounce it "the most nutritious, perfectly digestible beverage for Breakfast, Luncheon, or Supper, and invaluable for Invalids and Children."
Highly commended by the entire Medical Press.
Being without sugar, spice, or other admixture, it suits all palates, keeps better in all climates, and is four times the strength of Cocoa thickened yet weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and is IN REALITY CHEAPER than such Mixtures.
Made instantaneously with boiling water, a teaspoonful to a Breakfast Cup costing less than a Halfpenny.
COCOATINA A LA VANILLE is the most delicate, digestible, Cheapest Vanilla Chocolate, and may be taken when richer Chocolate is prohibited.

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,

C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with. It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. . . . The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Muhammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most cursory reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him a patient hearing on points the most open to controversy."—Allen's Indian Mail.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligencer.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, March 4; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, March 3; Calcutta, March 2.

THE news of the public meeting held in Calcutta on March 2 against the Licence-Tax has for the most part been forestalled by the telegraph. It appears however that the numbers at the meeting were more than twice 700, all natives. The speakers urged that great reductions were feasible in the Home Military Charges, in the Local Army Expenditure, and in the cost of the Public Works Establishment, without injuring the efficiency of these services. One of them even advocated the abolition of Cooper's Hill College, and urged that the Department should in future be recruited from Rurki, and other Engineering Colleges in India. A petition in the spirit of these recommendations was adopted by the meeting for presentation to both Houses of Parliament, and a Committee was formed to carry out the resolutions.

A PUBLIC meeting was held in Bombay on Friday, March 1, at which a memorial was adopted for despatch to the Postmaster-General of England, asking that the Overland Mail contract from 1880, when the present contract with the Peninsula and Oriental Company will have expired, should be thrown open to competition. It is pretty generally thought that the mails ought to be conveyed between Bombay and England in much less time than is occupied at present. The memorial, indeed, contends that it should not be more than sixteen days, which would necessitate an average speed of rather more than twelve and a-half knots an hour between Bombay and Suez, and thirteen knots an hour between Alexandria and Brindisi. Mr. Kittredge and Mr. Donald Graham argued with much force that the speed required to accomplish the distance between Bombay and Brindisi in the time demanded was by no means excessive or unusual. Nearly thirty years ago the P. and O. Company ran very inferior boats at nine nautical miles an hour, and their present speed is only nine and a-half—actually less than it was before the last contract came into force.

THE latest reports from Madras show that the numbers on relief works continued to increase, whilst the prices both of rice and dry grains were slightly rising and the import trade was inactive. This inactivity is ascribed to the uncertainty of the trade as to where the chief demand will come from, whether from the south, the north, or the west. It is the general belief that high prices will prevail over large areas in the Madras Presidency, at all events until the next harvest, and it is likely that imports will be more active as soon as this is fully appreciated by the trade. The Famine Commissioner for Mysor, after a tour through the worse part of Tumkur, reports that the crops have been better than is generally believed, and that there are hardly any signs of panic or wandering or of emaciation. In fact, considering that even if the crop had been a bumper one there must still have been severe distress amongst the poorest classes, there seems to be no ground for dissatisfaction. The country is believed to be well in hand, and fairly secured against further serious suffering.

WE are sorry to learn that severe distress is coming upon the poorer classes in the Punjab, owing to the dearth of grain and the influx of large numbers of immigrants from Kashmir and Punch, where it is reported a regular famine prevails. To alleviate the sufferings of those who are willing and able to work, the local Government have started relief works in most of the districts, besides which the Punjab Northern State Railway will undertake as much earthwork as the additional grant sanctioned will admit of. This, it is thought, will for the present suffice. In a few weeks harvesting would commence, which might afford employment for all, and bring down the price also, as a plentiful harvest is expected.

A GENTLEMAN who has been travelling through Rohilkand, writes very strongly to a local paper on the distress prevailing throughout the North-Western Provinces. In Shahjahanpur, he says, there were 5,400 wretched men and women in the poor-house, besides children; and although the deaths averaged ten per day, the Collector was at his "wit's end" to feed the survivors until the Commissioner promptly decided to extend the relief works. At Bijnaur there is "the same cry, though relief works are now being opened out there." Relief works were also being carried on at Philibhit under the superintendence of Mr. Hardy, C.S. In Bareilly, the scenes of distress are described as "heartrending. The poor-house is literally a gipsy camp in a grove of trees, where there have been upwards of 4,000 half-starved creatures, with a death-rate of twenty per day."

AN elaborate scheme for the reduction and reorganisation of the Public Works Department has been drawn out by Sir Andrew Clarke, who proposes to begin with the retirement of one hundred persons by means of a bonus and better pensions. The maximum is £1,000 per annum for first-class chief engineers, and the minimum £100, which will be paid to assist engineers on retirement. "For superintending engineers the maximum is fixed at £600, and for executive engineers at £400 per annum." Other details are given of a scheme which being still "under consideration" has somehow been divulged without official sanction. The Government, of course, is very angry at the breach of confidence of which somebody has been guilty, but it is to be hoped that official resentment will not extend to the objects of Sir Andrew's beneficent proposals.

WITH regard to the terms accepted by the Jawakis, namely, a fine of Rs. £5,000; the surrender of twenty-five English and twenty-five native rifles; and the banishment, during pleasure of Government, of the four outlaws named in the recent proclamation; the Pioneer asserts that Government has been compelled to forego a great portion of its original demand. "The compensation required for the recent raids on British territory, which, together with the blood money, was estimated at about Rs. 70,000, has been abandoned. The fine has been reduced to one-half, and the surrender of the outlaws has been withdrawn. Yet, even after this wholesale abatement, the political officers are said to have found it very difficult to enforce the remaining stipulations; and up to a late moment it seemed questionable whether the negotiation would not fall through. There is no doubt about it that Government commenced by asking too much. If, however, they have ended by accepting too little, better that than the indefinite prolongation of a troublesome, costly, and not very creditable business."

THE Madras papers record the death at forty-six years of age, of Mr. John Miller, Administrator-General of Madras, District Grand Master of Freemasons, and Director of the Bank of Madras. He was "much respected by all classes," and his death leaves a serious vacancy in the Local Bar.

IT is announced that Colonel Johnson, C.B., will officiate as Quartermaster-General, in the room of General Roberts; Colonel Macgregor as Deputy Quartermaster-General, and Captain F. R. Chapman as First Assistant. Major Collett, Second in Command of the 23rd Pioneers, will officiate as Assistant Quartermaster-General.—Major P. D. Henderson, Resident in Kashmir, will succeed Major E. R. C. Bradford as Superintendent of Thuggee and Dacoity, his own place being taken by Mr. Henvey, now Resident in Nepal.—Lieutenant-Colonel Impey, Political Agent at Meywar, Rajputana, will succeed Mr. Henvey, and Major Euan Smith, C.S.I., First Assistant at the Haidarabad Residency, will succeed Lieutenant-Colonel Impey.

MR. JAMES WESTLAND, C.S., of the Financial Department, has been offered the acting appointment of Financial Secretary to the Bengal Government, vice the Hon. A. Mackenzie, who will shortly officiate as one of the Secretaries to that Government.

MR. AITCHISON having elected for Burmah, it appears that Mr. J. D. Gordon is after all to be Chief Commissioner of Mysor.

COLONEL C. H. BYERS, of the Bengal Staff Corps, has retired from the service.

EVIDENCES of suffering from scarcity in the North-Western Provinces meet us in many of the local papers. A Lucknow correspondent, writing on Feb. 4, complains that "the price of food-grains has greatly risen, and consequently the number of the indigent and the needy. Hundreds of people are starving to death. The number of beggars has increased tenfold. Only the other day I heard a woman and two children were taken up dead on the road to the railway station. Before the October rains, which did great good to the then standing crops, and prepared the ground for those that were to be sown, came down, all sorts of charitable operations were in full swing; but as soon as an abundant harvest begun to be anticipated, relief-works that had been started were stopped and the poor were left utterly helpless. Wheat, which had begun to be sold at thirteen seers for the rupee, the rascal banniahs have raised to ten seers. There is nothing else to fall back upon, as all other crops have been destroyed. In the streets, people are going about reduced to skeletons, fasting for days together. These are facts." The Pioneer declares that "nothing gives such a clear idea of the scarcity of fodder in the North-Western Provinces as seeing all the commoner trees far and wide stripped of their leaves and bark as if from a hailstorm. The peepal and the babul trees have been cleared of every leaf, and in many instances mangroves have not escaped. Every conceivable thing that can be utilised as fodder is brought into market—even the dead leaves of the frost-bitten arhar, and the cultivator carefully thins his field of all the plants likely to be unproductive of grain, even if he stays his hand at these. Grass is at famine prices, a miserable handful fetching two annas, and at Makanpur Horse Fair a bundle ordinarily obtainable for the same sum could not be purchased under eight annas. And the Statesman receives daily accounts of the scarcity and consequent suffering in Rohilkand. It mentions among other things that "when the 73rd Regiment was marching down from the hills to Lucknow last month, the men of the corps were so horrified by the misery they saw that they constantly gave aid to the unfortunate wretches; and that in one village near which they halted, the soldiers bought up all the food in the shops (value about Rs. 150) and served it out to the miserable starving people who flocked round them." The Budaon correspondent of the same journal tells of numerous deaths from starvation in that part of Rohilkand.

ACCORDING to the Bombay Gazette, a curious question has lately arisen as to the legality of emigration from India to the Australian Colonies. An engineer who formerly had great experience on Indian railways, and now has a contract for two hundred miles of the Transcontinental line running across Australia to Port Darwin, is anxious to engage the services of several thousand Indian labourers, whom he proposes to take down to South Australia, where labour is scarce and the climate suitable to natives of India. The Government of Bombay, however, has declined to sanction the proposed emigration, on the ground that the Emigration Act makes contracts with natives of India for labour to be performed out of that country illegal, unless the emigrants are going to the English West Indies, to Mauritius, the French Colonies of Reunion, Martinique, Guadeloupe, and Guiana, or the Danish Colony of St. Croix. The Governor General in Council has power, however, to sanction emigration to any other place so soon as he has satisfied himself that a good opening for emigrants really exists. That such an opening may be found in Australia is beyond a doubt, and it is to be regretted that any difficulties should be thrown in the way of a measure which would tend to foster intercourse between India and the English Colonies in the Southern Seas. There is no reason to doubt that in many parts of Australia Chinese might easily be supplanted by Indian labour. As the Bombay Gazette remarks, "It is a hardship on individual employers of labour to force them to undertake, on their own responsibility, in each case that arises, the herculean task of setting two Governments in motion, one here and one in Australia, before they can get permission to hire Indian labourers who are perfectly willing to emigrate. Let the Governments concerned take the initiative and frame general regulations which all contractors for native labour must respect; and the rest may be left to private enterprise."

THE Punjab Administration Report for last year reckons the fighting strength of the various independent tribes on the Panjab frontier adjoining Hazara at 7,200 men, of those adjoining Peshawar, at 27,000, of those adjoining Kohat and Peshawar 23,500, of those adjoining Kohat, Bannu and Dera Ismail Khan 93,000, of those adjoining Dera Ghazi Khan 22,100, making a total of 170,200 men. A note tells us that the "numbers here given differ in many cases, and in the total from those furnished in the Administration Reports of this Government; but the present statement has been carefully compiled, and is believed to give as near an approximation of the numbers as can be attained. No census of these tribes is of course possible, and the figures must be accepted as a mere approximation. They comprise all the adult males in the tribes capable of bearing arms, and in the case of no single tribe would it be possible to bring into the field much more than half the numbers here entered, even were it not that, with the Afghans, feuds of the most deadly description between the numerous sections of a particular tribe prevent them from coalescing as a whole, except in the presence of extreme danger threatening the safety of the whole tribe."

THE Calcutta Chamber of Commerce, pointing to the hindrance caused to the progress of the Indian Mails homewards by the need of waiting at Suez for the China and Australia mails, urges that in the new contract, if it should include the conveyance of the Southampton, China, or Australian Mails, no such delay shall be allowed, "but that when these do not arrive in Egypt before, or at the same time, as the Indian and Brindisi Mails, the latter shall be forwarded without delay and without reference to the others, which the contractors should be bound to forward by other steamers." Another question which came up for discussion was that of speed. Under the present contract the speed is nine and a-half knots from Suez to Bombay, but the speed which the Bombay Chamber requires is thirteen knots. The Calcutta Chamber are not quite of the opinion of the Bombay Chamber in this respect, but they represent that "The speeds stipulated for in the present contract are admittedly now under those which present times warrant and demand. The Chamber, however, is not prepared to name any speeds which should be stipulated for, but would recommend, as a test of what can be had, that tenders should be called for, and that tender selected which gave the highest speed combined with a subsidy which would not make enhanced postage a necessity, and which also could give the fullest assurance of ability to carry out the contract in its integrity." The duration of the contract was the next subject which engaged their attention. The Bombay Chamber are of opinion that the contract should be for five years only, but the Calcutta committee are of opinion that it is impossible to provide for a high rate of speed unless the contract is for a longer term, more particularly, if the vessels are not to be cargo vessels; because the contractors, at the end of the five years, would, if the contract was annulled, find themselves burdened with a class of vessels for which they had no further use. On this subject, therefore, the Committee proposes that "Duration of contract should similarly be made matter of tender, as contractors would doubtless accept a long contract on more favourable terms to the public than a short one."

ACCORDING to a Times telegram of March 17, the provisions of the Act for the control of the vernacular Press have since, according to gazetted notice, been extended to Bombay, Bengal, the North-Western Provinces, Oudh, and the Punjab. The immediate passing of this measure into law was deemed by the Government to be of such grave and paramount importance that the Bill was introduced without the customary notice. The standing orders were also suspended, and the Bill was carried through all its stages at a single sitting of the Council. The fact of such urgent necessity for this reactionary measure must—says the correspondent—"be a subject of grave concern to all those who take an enlightened interest in the welfare of India under English administration. With the exception of a short suspension during the Mutiny, the whole of the Indian Press has now for a period of forty-three years enjoyed absolute freedom from State control. The result is that, while the English Press has developed into a powerful auxiliary to good government, the vernacular Press has so far abused its privileges as to call forth from the Government this peremptory act of restraint. The object of the Government in allowing full liberty to the Press—namely, to promote the education of the people—has been perverted into an organ for the dissemination of sedition and exciting general discontent among the ignorant and unreasoning masses, and so endeavouring to goad them into rebellion against British rule." The Advocate-General, in the course of a remarkably able speech in support of the Bill, stated that he had in his hand a translation of upwards of 1,500 extracts from vernacular papers which he had carefully read, and that he had satisfied himself that these publications contained matter which fell under one or other of the following heads:—1, Seditious libels comprising malicious and calumnious attacks on the Government, accusations of robbery, oppression, and dishonesty, and imputations of bad faith, injustice, and partiality; 2, libels on Government officers; 3, contemptuous observations on the administration of justice; 4, libels on the character of Europeans; 5, libels on Christians and mischievous tendencies to excite race and religious antipathies; 6, suggestions and insinuations which their authors contrived should fall short of seditious libels, by reason of the absence of positive declarations. In addition to these, he found that misstatements, exaggerations, and allegorical tales, intended as sketches of real events, but having little basis of fact, had been published in support of the varied and inexhaustible calumnies. Praise lavished on the late Mohammedan rule at the expense of British rule and representations that the dominant race were debased and demoralised were also written with the same end in view—namely, to render the Government, its officers, and Europeans generally hateful to the people. These are the evil purposes which must be promptly defeated, and their contrivers must be restrained from all further attempts to administer their subtle poison to the lower orders of the people. The moral atmosphere, at present tainted by these vicious productions, must be cleansed and restored to its normal purity. It might be alleged that the provisions of the Bill were stringent, but the means to be used for checking the evil courses to which these vernacular papers had resorted should be as powerful and effective as if the Government were called upon to deal with a plague, a pestilence, or other grievous calamity.

AFTER giving some extracts from the native papers to prove the necessity of a new Press Law, the Times correspondent points out that some of the most seditious of these attacks are published in Maratha papers, and that the most disloyal of all the papers is published at Holkar's capital, Indor. If this be so, surely Holkar has the remedy in his own hands, supposing that he has the will to apply one.

THE Times telegram quotes the following peroration of Lord Lytton's speech in support of the new Gagging Act:—

I am unwilling to hamper the diffusion of honest thought; but I recognise in the present circumstances of this country, and in the present condition of the populations committed to our charge, the clear and obvious duty of checking the propagation of sedition, and preventing ignorant, foolish, and irresponsible persons from recklessly destroying the noble edifice which still generously shelters even its viledetractors. That edifice has been slowly reared by the genius of British statesmanship utilising the achievements of British valour. It was founded by English enterprise and cemented by English blood, and is adorned with the brightest memorials of English character. The preservation of this great Imperial heirloom is the first and highest duty of those to whose charge the inheritance is entrusted—a duty owed to the memory of our fathers, as well as to the interest of our children, to the honour of our Sovereign no less than to the welfare of all her subjects in India.

All this is very fine talking, quite up to Owen Meredith's mark. But a little less haste in overthrowing that other "noble edifice" founded by Lord Metcalfe forty years ago, and left untouched, except for an exceptional twelvemonth, by all his successors until now, would have better harmonised with the present Viceroy's alleged sense of the duty he owes to the memory of our fathers, &c.

WE learn by telegram that the Viceroy on Monday evening unveiled a statue of Lord Canning at Calcutta. He and Lady Lytton afterwards left for Simla, where they were expected to arrive on April 1.

A CALCUTTA telegram of March 16, gives the following news:—

The Indian Budget is officially published to-day. The accounts for 1876-1877 show the revenue to have been £56,022,277, and the ordinary expenditure £58,205,055. The loss entailed by the famine was £3,450,000, and the deficit amounted to £2,182,778, exclusive of £3,809,288 expended in productive works. In the regular estimates for 1877-78 the revenue is stated at £56,310,900, the ordinary expenditure at £62,113,000, and the loss by the famine, virtually a deficit, at £3,431,000, excluding £4,877,000 expended in productive works. The surplus on the ordinary account, excluding famine expenditure, is £3,069,000. The net amount borrowed for 1877-78 is £8,620,000. £500,000 have been sent to Mysor, and £500,000 to Gwalior. The closing balances in India amount to £14,750,000. The Budget estimate for 1878-79 include £2,750,000 for provincial rates and taxes hitherto shown separately, thus giving the whole. The new famine taxation appears for a gross amount of £1,200,000, arrears of land revenue £671,000, ordinary expenditure £61,094,000, including £500,000, famine expenditure in Madras. The surplus is estimated at £2,156,000, exclusive of £4,555,000 expended in productive works. £600,000 are required for loans to native States. The balances in India are reduced by £1,500,000, closing at £13,000,000. It will probably be necessary to borrow £2,500,000. The loss on exchange is estimated at £3,000,000, on an amount of £17,000,000 remitted. The opium revenue is estimated at £6,000,000 net, the Malwa crop being a short one. No additional taxation is proposed beyond the measures announced in January last, which are calculated to yield to the Imperial Treasury in 1878-79 a net amount of £1,160,000. The Budget shows that the condition of the guaranteed railways has greatly improved. The net earnings for 1877-78 cover all the interest on capital. The policy of extending provincial responsibility is reaffirmed, and its results are declared to be highly satisfactory. The Budget is accompanied by an important minute from the Viceroy relative to the active prosecution of railway and irrigation works, and the prevention of famine, through the agency of the local governments, with ample precautionary measures to secure economy and financial regularity. The following articles are freed from duty:—Brushes, building and engineering materials, cabinet ware, furniture, candles, canes and rattans, and all articles made of cane and rattan, basket-work carriages, and all component parts thereof, chemical products and preparations, coir and all articles made of coir, cordage and rope and all articles made thereof, vegetable fibre, raw cotton, and the following cotton goods:—grey piece goods, if containing no yarn finer than thirties—namely, T-cloths under 18 reeds, jeans, domestics, sheetings, drills, mule twist No. 32 and all lower numbers, water twist No. 20 and lower, flax and all articles made of flax, fruits, vegetables, hemp, and articles made of hemp, hides, skins, instruments and apparatus, except musical, leather, and all articles made of leather, including boots, shoes, harness, and saddlery, mats, military and other uniforms and accoutrements, naval stores not otherwise included, oils, oil floor cloth, wall-paper, piece goods made of jutes pipes and other implements used for consumption, tobacco, pitch, tar, damar, railway materials, seeds, soap and toilet requisites not otherwise included.

A Times telegram of yesterday's date, from Calcutta, informs us that the passing of the Vernacular Press Bill has created considerable sensation, and will probably give rise to agitation meetings in most of the principal cities of India. The committee of the East Indian Association have already taken the initiative, and have passed a resolution disapproving the Act. The resolution states that the Committee, while strongly condemning such vernacular papers as disseminate seditious writings, are yet of opinion that the Act is unnecessary and is calculated to restrain the legitimate freedom of discussion hitherto enjoyed by the Press. It also expresses regret at the precipitancy with which the measure was passed. The native Press, as was to be expected, has indulged in strong comment. The following passage from an article contained in the Puna Sunbeam exhibits both native opinion and the curious effects of prematurely grafting upon the native mind a high-class English education. After stating that a severe censorship of the Native Press established on the dawn of terror in India was the grim news flashed by the wire from Calcutta, sending a thrill of dismay through the hearts of millions, and that certain persons had sounded in England their alarming trumpets, the writer continues, in Cambyes' strain:—

Nevertheless, we could not then give credence to the reality of the danger that was fast coming upon us, for it appeared to us that such a thing could not possibly come into existence so long as the British Parliament cared to sail the Indian gubernative ironclad on the same principles, legal and constitutional, as have been proved, by the scouring and crucial test of hard and even hurricane times, to have the efficacy of securing peace and happiness to England and her colonies, and perpetuating their connecting ties.

Odds and Ends.

MR. W. J. HAM, late Mail Agent between Bombay and Suez, and at present on special duty with the Director-General of Post-Offices, is to be sent to Europe on matters connected with the Postal Union arrangements.

THE amount of cash in the Reserve Treasury of the Government of India on the 6th February was Rs. 1,50,49,948.

It is reported that, under the orders of the Secretary of State for India, another Commission is to be appointed on the very important subject of loss by exchange.

MR. G. N. BARLOW, C.S.I., is appointed Commissioner of the Patna Division in the place of Mr. E. W. Molony, who retires; but Mr. F. M. Halliday officiates whilst Mr. Barlow acts as Commissioner of Bhagalpur.

A FRONTIER report mentions the death of the Akhund of Kohatta in the Yusufzai Subdivision of the Peshawar District. This man was the head of the Wahabis, and his loss is said to be greatly lamented by his religious followers.

MAJOR A. VIVIAN officiates as Commandant of the 3rd Panjab Cavalry during the absence of Col. L. B. Jones on furlough, and Major W. C. Anderson as Second in Command.

MR. J. JARDINE is gazetted as Judicial Commissioner of British Burma.

MR. W. CORNELL, from Bankura, succeeds Mr. Tottenham as Judge of Midnapur.

THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS was expected to start on a tour in the Kistna District in the middle of February.

THE HON. F. R. COCKERELL has been reappointed a Member of the Viceregal Legislative Council.

MAJOR T. O. UNDERWOOD officiates as Commandant of the 4th Panjab Cavalry when Colonel C. J. Godby goes on furlough.

THE salt merchants at Karachi have taken advantage of the passing of the new Salt Act to raise the retail price of salt from two to five pice per seer; so the merchants will benefit more by the increased duty than the Government.

THE nett amount of the Indian Sea Customs Revenue (exclusive of Salt Revenue) for the first ten months of the current financial year was Rs. 1,85,20,886, as compared with Rs. 1,67,54,258 during the corresponding period of last year.

According to the Lahor paper, if the Amir of Kabul is not dead he is sick nigh unto death, for he is said to be suffering from disease of the liver and kidneys, together with gout.

THE Reformatory Schools Act came into force in Bengal, Behar, and Orissa from the 1st of March.

SIMLA was visited by a slight shock of earthquake, the second this year, about one o'clock in the morning of the 15th February.

MR. E. B. EASTWICK, C.B., has been on a visit to the Duke of Buckingham at Madras.

MR. D. NORTON, Assistant Magistrate of Contai, has been granted leave for six months.

MR. J. M. LOWIS, Judge of Bhagalpur, goes on furlough for eight months, from the 17th of March.

MAJOR G. G. YOUNG, Additional Commissioner of Jalandhar, has been appointed an Additional Sessions Judge in the Ambala Division, in addition to his other duties; and Mr. J. D. Tremlett, Additional Commissioner of Amritsar, is similarly appointed an Additional Judge in the Lahor Division.

THE Medical Officers selected to do duty at the Hill depots during the ensuing hot season are:—Surgeon J. F. Supple at Marri; Surgeon-Major W. Temple at Dalhousie; Surgeon-Major G. Whitla at Naini Tal; Surgeon-Major H. Harrison at Landour; and Surgeon-Major H. J. O'Brien at Kasauli.

ONE of the local papers tells us that, owing to large purchases of rice by both Europeans and natives in the Dhaka market, prices are approaching famine rates.

MR. H. W. WARDEN, Executive Engineer, with his staff, has completed the survey of the proposed new line of railway in Eastern Bengal from Archia, opposite Goalando, to Mirpur.

THE Bellari-Hubli Railway, which was undertaken as a Famine Relief Work in Madras, has advanced to the stage of being ready for the rails to be laid from Bellari to Hospett.

MAJOR R. S. ROBERTSON, of the Staff Corps, officiates as Second in Command of the 4th Native Infantry, while Lieutenant-Colonel Mitchel acts as Commandant.

THE HON. D. F. CARMICHAEL and the Hon. Mir Humayun Jah Bahadur have been reappointed Members of the Madras Legislative Council.

BABU MOHINI MOHAN ROY, a Vakil of the High Court, has been appointed a Member of the Bengal Legislative Council in the place of the Hon. Ramsankar Sen; and Mr. Amir Ali, Barrister, a Member in the place of Nawab Mir Muhammad Ali.

GENERAL KEDAR NAR SINGH BAHADUR, of Nepal, had the honour of a private interview with the Viceroy on Friday, Feb. 15.

It is stated that no more members, besides General Strachey, will be appointed to the Famine Commission till April next.

MR. W. O. LAW has been appointed Government Prosecutor at Maulmain during the absence on leave, for twelve months, of Mr. C. W. Law.

DR. MURRAY, Civil Surgeon, Ajmir, will, in all probability, continue in the discharge of his present duties for a further period of two years.

THE Government of Bombay has published a resolution, thanking a long list of officials and some non-officials for "efforts and exertions, rendered ably and zealously," during the Famine period.

THE Bank of Bengal has had to cash notes to the amount of a lac and a-half of rupees (£15,000), which had been kept for forty years locked up in the box of an old up-country zemindar, lately deceased.

MR. DALGLEISH, of the Central Asian Trading Company, was still at Leh; his journey onward to Lahor was being delayed by the almost unprecedented severity of the weather.

COLONEL CLEMENT BROWNE, R.E., Superintending Engineer, Rawal Pindi, was about to take furlough to Europe.

CAPTAIN WILLIAMSON makes over charge of the Naga Hills Political Agency to Mr. Maxwell, who acts temporarily until a successor to Mr. Carnegie is selected.

NEWS of the fall of Kashghar has reached India, but apparently from St. Petersburg. The city is said to have been taken on the 7th of December.

CASUALTIES BY DEATH IN THE INDIAN SERVICES, &c., REPORTED SINCE LAST PUBLICATION.

H.M.'s BRITISH FORCES IN INDIA.—H. M. Ford, Esq., late of the 20th Regt., at Jermyn-street, March 19. Capt. R. A. L. Furneaux, late 14th Regt., at Stoke, March 13. Lieut. col. ## THE NEW INDIAN PRESS LAW.

The discussion which took place last Tuesday in the House of Commons, on the new Indian Press Law, shows the temper in which that startling piece of headlong legislation has been received by thoughtful Englishmen in this country. Even Sir George Campbell, with his long training in the ways of Indian officialism and his inborn love of high-handed measures, avowed his astonishment at the summary methods employed by the Indian Government in dealing with a subject which he had always rather shirked, as "involving, in fact, our very position in India." Mr. Gladstone, while declining to prejudge the Indian Government on a question of such "extreme gravity," declared that the reasons must be "very strong indeed" which could induce him to believe that the Government had acted wisely in hurrying through a measure which it had given him the greatest pain to hear of. Mr. O'Donnell, who started the discussion, described the new law as having for its apparent object "the suppression or the official editing of all the newspapers published in any native language," and asserted that no such engine for the suppression of free speech had ever been set up even in France. Lord G. Hamilton himself could only plead that the new law was intended to mitigate the severity of one already embodied in the Indian Penal Code, and that further discussion was premature, while the India-office had still to learn the full particulars of what had happened in Calcutta.

For the present therefore public opinion is requested to hold itself in suspense. But it seems hard to believe that the further information for which we are asked to wait will reconcile us to a measure which offends against every instinct of free-born Englishmen, and seems to recal the worst days of French or Russian despotism. It appears from the telegrams that a new and arbitrary control over the vernacular press of India is to be placed in the hands of the District officers, subject only to the sanction of the Provincial Governments. The publisher of an article which the Collector may deem seditious or scandalous is to bind himself under a penalty fixed by the Collector to refrain from repeating the offence; or else he must lay the proofs of each number of his journal before a censor appointed by the Government. It is obvious that such a law will tend to make the District officers complete masters of the native vernacular press. It is hardly in human nature, still less in the nature of Anglo-Indian officialism, to withstand the temptation to abuse a power which will virtually rest on the individual discretion of him who wields it. The reasons given for this amazing inroad on the freedom secured to Indian journals by Lord Metcalfe forty-three years ago seem to be that the vernacular papers indulge in libellous attacks on native officials and men of rank, and in highly seditious language towards the masters of India, and that no other means of checking the mischief thus engendered can be put in force. It is true that the Penal Code provides for the punishment of slanderers and utterers of sedition, but the natives, we are told, decline to avail themselves on various grounds of the redress afforded them in a court of law, while the Government are loath to prosecute offenders without some sure prospect of ultimate success. Meanwhile the seditious journals are said to have become a serious danger to the Indian Empire; and the only way of meeting that danger is to bring them under the reign of a stronger despotism than was ever wielded by any of Lord Metcalfe's predecessors, or even by Lord Canning in the darkest days of 1857.

In support of such reasons for a measure which could only be justified by the presence of a danger as great as that which India's rulers had to confront in 1857, a few choice samples of so-called sedition have been set before us from the papers quoted in the Viceroy's Council. "The English," says one paper, who "live at a distance of 5,000 miles, have, by their smooth, deceitful policy dragged us into the mire and reduced us to poverty." Another complains that "England has reduced India to poverty, and has assisted America, Russia, Turkey and Egypt with money which there is no hope of her getting back. England in this war has acted the part of a timid soldier." "What," asks a third, "has become of the friends and well-wishers of natives? Englishmen of these days, with few exceptions, are selfish, rough-tempered, mean-spirited, and hostile to natives." The Mohammedans, we learn, "did not squeeze the people as sugar-cane is squeezed in a press; but now the whole of India is squeezed, and the rayats have been made spiritless." Elsewhere we are told that the Indian Government is "not a just but a monstrous Government. As monsters are said to eat their own children, the English Government is destroying its own children—namely, its subjects." It is also "hypocritical and deceitful; the people have discovered this now." The Hindus, according to a Bengali paper, "have borne, and do still bear, the hardships and misery which follow the downfall of the prestige of a nation. In every bone, vein, and pore of our bodies this sense of national degradation works as a slow consuming fire. God forbid that even our deadliest enemy should suffer as we do!" The Government is accused of "continually breaking its promises." One writer points to the "significant fact that the reputation of the British nation for valour has steadily declined of late years, especially from the time of the Franco-Prussian War, both in Germany and Asia. England now possesses but little influence in the politics of Europe." Another journal ascribes the increase of intemperance to the encouragement given to drinking by the Abkari duties. "A foreign nation," says another journal,

Has thought it worth while to conquer the country, though with enormous bloodshed. Even if thousands of our countrymen are starved to death, any attempt on our part to write on their behalf will be imputed to partiality. The rule of our country has passed into the hands of foreigners, and we have lost all our independence. All this must be quietly acquiesced in as the decree of Heaven. However, we must buoy ourselves up with hope under present calamity and not despair. Seeing that such mighty Kings as Vikramaditya, Ramchandra, and Rawapa have passed away, the short-lived Kings of the present time can have no stability. All the authorities, from the highest Viceroy to the lowest peon, evince a love for arbitrariness.

A paper published at Indor states that "Nana Sahib is about to invade India with a Russian army, and will establish once more, through the auspices of the Czar, the dominion of the Peshwa; Sattara, Baroda, Nagpur, and Jhansi being formed into feudatory kingdoms, acknowledging the Suzerainty of the Peshwa." And a Delhi journal congratulates the Turks on their "good luck in having been so long able to maintain their position amidst such cunning and deceitful tribes. As the times change and the Christian Powers are reduced to a state of helplessness, let all the world bear in mind their frauds and deceits; let none pity them, but let all exult over their misfortune and ruin."

No doubt there is much "objectionable matter" in these distempered tirades against an alien Government. But even at the worst they are little more than echoes of the language sometimes used by Englishmen about themselves, and the wildest of them could be matched by many an outburst from the other side of St. George's Channel. Every blessing has its drawbacks, and the freedom of the Press is prone to run into licence in other countries besides India. But in England we have learned to tolerate much of evil for the sake of the outweighing good, and we are slow to believe that the same principle will not hold good for India also. And yet, after forty-three years' experience of the working of a free Press, the Indian Government shows its zeal for the political and social well-being of its native subjects by dealing a heavy, if not a fatal blow at the liberties it professed to guard. In aiming to repress the licence of native journals, it can think of nothing better than a policy which would uproot the wheat together with the tares. The boon of free speech granted by Lord Metcalfe, and confirmed by the wise policy of successive Viceroy, has suddenly been taken away, because the rhetorical extravagance of a few silly journalists was supposed to endanger the existence of an empire which had just been secured afresh by the visit of a Royal Prince and the proclamation of a special Empress of India. The haste with which the new law has been swept through the Viceroy's Council can be justified only on the plea of some dire necessity which either does not exist or is known only to the Indian Government. Under any circumstances it is hard to see why any distinction should have been made between the vernacular journals and those printed in English for native readers. Some at least of these, as Mr. O'Donnell pointed out, indulge in language quite as intemperate as their vernacular rivals. He might have added that some of the journals edited by Englishmen ought to be included under the new censorship as being given to abusing the natives when they are not employed in abusing the Government. It would almost seem, indeed, as if the Government were resolved to show its vigour, like some policemen, by raiding only against the weak. It is probable that anyone of the London dailies could show a larger circulation than all the vernacular Indian journals put together. And it is certain that any mischief which these latter can do will not cease with their outward suppression. They will simply reappear in new forms, and be circulated as letters through the post. The nuisance will have been put out of sight, but it will continue its old work in secret; and one means of gauging the flow of native opinion, and thus forearming itself against future dangers, will have been lost to the Government by its own act. It is not generally considered a wise proceeding to sit upon the safety-valve when the engines are in full play.

ASTRONOMICAL.—We understand that Mr. Pogson, Government Astronomer, Madras, has lately completed a laborious series of observations of the planet Mars in opposition, made with a view of determining the true mean distance of the sun from the earth. The Secretary of State, to whom the report has been submitted, considers that the investigation, reduction, and publication of these and other kindred researches form a work of obvious importance and magnitude, and desires to know how Mr. Pogson proposes to provide for them.

NATIVE CHRISTIANS.—No. II.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Throughout my service in India I always found it easier to deal with an open antagonist than with a secret enemy. In his efforts to gag the vernacular Press the Viceroy must be prepared to see the country disquieted by the secret diffusion of seditious printed papers. If the Viceroy had had a little experience of native life he would have known that seditious writing cannot be prevented except by exemplary punishment; the Penal Code has for many years past legalised a severe punishment, namely, two years' imprisonment with hard labour, in addition to a heavy fine.

What Sir A. Arbuthnot means by declaring that the existing law is unsuitable I know not; it may be inadequate; if so, give the British Courts power to sentence to ten years' transportation to the Andaman Islands, with confiscation of all of the offender's property. No punishment can be too severe for those who, while inciting others to treason and to a shameful death, take good care with cowardly craft to avoid putting their own heads into the noose.

It was only in October last that Government published a Blue-book, in page 63 of which your readers will find the official opinion on the conduct of the vernacular Press in India. The Bengal vernacular Press had for two years been decidedly loyal and favourable to British rule; confidence was felt in the good intentions of the Government, and the gratitude of the natives was expressed with the greatest warmth and impressiveness for external security, religious freedom, material prosperity, and English education. Sir Richard Temple observed that the increasing querulousness noticed in many cases must not be mistaken for disloyalty, as at heart the Bengalees were thoroughly loyal, and show under all circumstances a steady law-abiding spirit.

In Bombay the general tone of the publications was reported to be unobjectionable as regards morality and loyalty, but they contained criticisms on the action of the police courts, and on the faults of the railway and municipal authorities, and on the merits of the Deccan riots.

I beg you to present to the English public an article showing what a high opinion Government has had of the vernacular Press, and referring especially to page 77 of the Blue-book for 1874-75 and to page 63 of the Blue-book for 1875-76.

How is it that in four months all this is changed, and that high officials appear to have been suddenly agitated by wild alarms? Do they remember the inability of Government to trace the circulation of the chuppatties in March and April 1857? If so, how do they propose to check the secret dissemination of seditious rumours?

No time should be lost in providing for the security of native Christians, numbering nearly one million of souls. Any massacre, say of only one thousand, of them would raise such a storm of indignation in England as would make the position of a negligent Government very unpleasant. Russia has put her foot into Bulgaria and Rumelia on the pretence that the Christians have not been sufficiently protected; let her not have such a plea for interference in India.

When Lord Lytton sent a military force out of India to Quetta the seditious in India saw their opportunity. Our greatest danger in India arises from internal commotions. To prevent them we must always have a force at hand sufficient to crush and to punish in an exemplary manner all treasonable practices against H.M.'s Government.

Lord Salisbury has not informed the English public on whom the responsibility rests of stretching our military forces over land upwards of 2,000 miles in length. This extension movement reminds one of a cloth manufacturer who stretches his cloth to increase its length, and then fills up the interstices with paste. The ill-used threads are the Indian army, and the paste represents the raw levies made by Civilians, the worthlessness of which is proved by the first washing.

It is noticeable that the new law to gag the Press is directed chiefly against the Hindoos; the anger of Government is excited against their subtle arguments and ingenious insinuations, so that the present Government of India has succeeded in alienating the respect formerly displayed towards her Majesty's Government both by Hindoos and Mohammedans.

In the Church Missionary Intelligencer for this month discontent is expressed by Sir William Hill and others, interested in the prosperity of India, at the withdrawal of annual grants-in-aid by Government for the education of the middle and lower classes (see page 149). That discontent will not be allayed by the knowledge that no sufficient measures have been adopted for the safety of nearly one million of native Christians :—

Our fear is that, in the present emergency, there will be retrenchment at the wrong end, and that primary, not the higher, education will suffer. There are already some evidences of this. The schools of the Church Missionary Society in the North-Western Provinces have already suffered by the withdrawal of the grants-in-aid, and we have already adduced evidence from the Report of the Director of Public Instruction to show the retrogression in elementary education exhibited in that important part of India. There is a fear lest other Local Governments, on which retrenchment has been pressed, should follow the same course.—Page 148.

—Your obedient servant,
March 19.

THE INDIAN PRESS LAW.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The Press Law which has just been passed at Calcutta, enabling the authorities to gag the vernacular Press, will, doubtless, dispel the dreams hitherto indulged in by many about the inestimable benefits by which our paternal Government won the affection of our Indian fellow-subjects. Few have taken the trouble to become acquainted with the actual condition of things in India, and are, therefore, aware that the financial difficulties of the Indian Government have, for a number of years, led it to impose taxation of the most oppressive kind; that vast tracts of land lie uncultivated in India, because the cultivators have been unable to satisfy the increasing demands of the Collector; that the mass of the agricultural population in Madras, Bombay, and a great part of the North-Western Provinces, harassed by the tax-gatherer, constantly threatened with new taxes, and most cruelly oppressed by a corrupt police, are well nigh driven to despair.

In justification of the enactment, it is stated that fifteen hundred extracts from vernacular papers were translated and submitted to the Advocate-General, who found that their publication fell under one or other of certain heads, such as seditious libel, calumnious attacks on the Government, accusations of robbery and oppression, and imputations of bad faith, injustice and partiality. The state of things in India would therefore certainly appear to be alarming: at the same time there is every reason to doubt that the remedial measure which has been adopted will improve matters.

In the course of the short debate which took place last night on the subject of the Press Law in question, Lord G. Hamilton read a passage from the Indian Penal Code showing that the Government had already full powers for dealing not only with cases of seditious libel but with any attempt to excite dissatisfaction with the Government; and his Lordship stated that the new law had been passed because the Indian Government were anxious to mitigate the severity of the Penal Code, while putting down the growth of seditious libel in India. But it must be borne in mind that the Code only fixes the maximum punishment which may be awarded for seditious libel, and that the judge may mitigate its severity by making the sentence lighter, according to the circumstances of the case, and that, to leave the existing law inoperative and to resort to the extraordinary expedient of placing the vernacular Press of the country under censorship, is not only to do a grievous wrong to the people, but also, by stifling the expression of popular feeling and opinion, to deprive the Government of the only safe guide it possesses for steering clear of surprises and danger.

Some of the extracts which were read in the Legislative Council at Calcutta, in justification of the proposed law, run thus:—"It is as bad for a Government to oppress the people as it is for a shepherd to slaughter his flock or for a cultivator to set fire to his crops." "The apathy of our rulers towards the sufferers arises from the fact that they are foreigners professing a different creed. The Government loves the money more than the lives of its subjects." It is obviously an error to treat such writings as endeavours to goad the people into rebellion; they only reflect the popular feeling which already pervades the country; and a careful and impartial inquiry will show that the complaints, although expressed in exaggerated language, are by no means groundless. The new Press law may, in a measure, prevent the publication of similar writings but it will certainly not lessen the intensity of the popular feeling expressed in them; while repression may add to the intensity of that feeling and induce its expression in other and more undesirable forms.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

J. DACOSTA.

PERILS TO BRITISH INDIA AND COMMERCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In the present critical aspect of public affairs, and whilst many of our countrymen appear to be not unwilling to incur the risks of war, on account of supposed British "interests" in the East, or elsewhere, it would be well if a few of the more certain dangers of war were generally considered, and irrespective of mere party questions. The remark is often heard, "If we fight Russia we can obtain thousands of troops from India," whereas the very reverse would pretty certainly occur. India would be a chief point of Russian assault and intrigue. A Russian officer said to a friend of mine, "If England goes to war with us we shall chiefly look to injure her in two directions—through India, and through privateering everywhere on the ocean." At the present time it is admitted that Afghanistan, with her large army (50,000 to 100,000), well supplied (through English money) with modern weapons, is hostile to us and very friendly to Russia. Further, it is known in usually well-informed quarters that in case of war between England and Russia the latter will not only supply hundreds of able officers to Afghanistan, but by her agents, already and long ago at work in India, will devise means for mischievous uprisings, especially in the Punjab and the Northern Provinces, the repossession of which by native rulers will be held out as a powerful inducement to the latter. In short, there can be little doubt that in India alone Russia would be able to give immense trouble to England, involving a heavy strain upon her resources. Thus war would incalculably add to the perils of our interests in that country. Even as to the Suez Canal, although the Russian navy would be powerless for direct mischief, yet at some most inopportune moment a liberal commission to some neutral ship might suffice to procure, by "accident," a stoppage of the Canal, by the sinking of a vessel or two, long enough, at least, to secure mischievous delays. On the ocean, again, the Russian war fleet would probably disappear, but widespread damage to British commerce and navigation could be effected by privateers fitted out under the auspices of certain powerful "neutral" rivals. The influence of the Alabama on America shipping (though American sailors are no chickens) is not yet forgotten. As to English warfare on European territory with Russia, it is obvious that the practically inexhaustible hosts of Russia's legions, aided by the sympathies and help of millions of Oriental fellow religionists, would be most formidable if not invincible obstacles, and on their own soil, to the little armies at best which non-military and commercial England might, at vast expense, bring in dribblets from a distance of thousands of miles. Wise men should look before they leap.—Yours truly, London.

WILLIAM TALLACK.

ROYALTY AND ORPHANS.

On the outskirts of Richmond Park is situated the little village of Ham, a quiet nook, apart, as it were, from the world, and forming a contrast to the comparatively gay and busy neighbouring suburb, which is rightly considered one of the sights of England; indeed, of the many who stroll on the terrace at Richmond, and scan the winding river as it rolls sluggishly along through field and meadow, how few are aware even of the existence of the hamlet, concealed by trees, which contribute in no small degree to the beauty of the scene. Yet, in spite of its comparative obscurity, Ham, in one respect, is entitled to high rank amongst the villages of this land, for it is the home of one of the noblest of England's charities—the honoured spot where an effort has been made, and with considerable success, to foster and nurture those orphan girls in the humbler spheres of life, who, added to the misery of poverty, possess a claim which appeals to the sympathies of every Englishman. The National Orphan Home at Ham is evidence that the cause of the "fatherless and widow" touches chords of the heart, ever ready to vibrate when misery and suffering can be alleviated. This institution, originally called the Cholera Orphan Home, was established in 1849, under somewhat peculiar circumstances. In that year a fearful epidemic for the first time visited our land, and raged with dire severity; as a consequence, there were many orphans left in complete destitution. To meet so pressing a crisis a certain philanthropic clergyman, who had long been anxious to found a home for the orphan children of domestic servants, as well as for the working classes generally, in co-operation with another gentleman, well known for his benevolence, made a humble beginning, and thirty-six girls, whose parents had died from cholera, were admitted to the Home thus started. Such was the commencement of the noble society which now receives within its walls, from 100 to 140 children.

Of the many benevolent institutions which are honoured by the patronage and support of Royalty not one possibly is more privileged than the National Orphan Home; not only are their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Cambridge and the Princess Christian patrons of the Society, but other members of the Royal Family have from time to time graced this village home with their presence when meetings have been held in aid of the funds, and now no less a distinction has fallen to its lot than the presence of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to preside at the twenty-eighth anniversary dinner, supported by his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge. That under such circumstances a goodly array of friends should be present was inevitable; in fact, the room was filled to overflowing. The company, too, was no less select than numerous, including persons of considerable note.

Invariably felicitous in his remarks, the Prince of Wales has seldom, perhaps, been more happy in this respect than on the present occasion; nor is the cause difficult to divine. It may be gathered, indeed, from his Royal Highness's own words:—"It has always been the wish and endeavour of myself, no less than of other members of our family, to aid and assist the benevolent institutions of which this country has just reason to be proud." Noble words, and the hearty sincerity with which they were uttered, betokened how deeply they were felt. The Prince, in proceeding to lay before his hearers the claims of the society to public support, urged that on mere selfish grounds the National Orphan Home, as educating and training girls for domestic service, was entitled to the gratitude of each member of the community. "Moreover," added his Royal Highness, "if domestic servants serve us faithfully, is it not a pleasure, nay, more, is it not a duty for us to do something for them in return, when misfortune befalls them; and what better, what more charitable and kind than that at a period when death renders them widows, we should befriend the fatherless children and bring them up as intelligent, useful members of society?" Even so minute a detail as toys did not escape notice, and, in a few expressive words, H.R.H. suggested that playthings might be sent from home, where in all probability they would not be missed, to a home where many little hearts would be rendered happy by such toys, albeit broken, damaged, and may be, discarded as worthless. Then followed a few words by the respected Treasurer, Mr. Kingscote, who, connected with the Society from its foundation, has done more than anyone to promote its success; in a few earnest and singularly impressive sentences he thanked the Prince of Wales for the honour he had done the Home in presiding at the anniversary dinner. "You have sown," said he, "the seeds of loyalty in the hearts of many a young orphan now present in this room, and not improbably—nay, most probably, they will carry to their grave the recollection of this evening, and of your Royal Highness's kind words."

As a finale to this most interesting evening came the all important question of finance. It was announced that his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales had given the handsome contribution of one hundred guineas; equally gratifying were the subscriptions obtained through the instrumentality of the treasurer and stewards; the efforts of the former were unusually successful, he himself heading his own list with a very considerable donation; but he was well seconded by the indefatigable organising member of the Committee, Mr. S. P. Low, who may be said, in a measure, to represent the Indian element, and who was enabled to hand over a list of subscriptions which well sustained the character of our Anglo-Indians for liberality and generosity. The contributions were understood to have reached a total of little less than £2,000, and right merrily was the worthy secretary, Mr. Taylor, cheered when he proclaimed the result; handsome as is such a sum, and much as it will contribute towards the income of the society, it could be wished that even a few out of the many thousands who, at any rate during the summer months, ramble so near the village of Ham would avail themselves of the opportunity which the Committee so freely invite of a personal inspection of the arrangements of the Home; in such case, so admirable is the institution managed, so carefully are the interests and welfare of the children consulted, and so bright and cheerful are their merry little faces, that without doubt the income of the charity would be increased to overflowing, and a still further impetus be given to a society which contains within its walls many a happy heart, many a happy home.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE NEW ORDER FOR LADIES.

The Pioneer remarks that the text of the warrant establishing the Ladies' Order, as published in the Gazette of India, is curiously ill-worded, if the original idea of the Order is to be acquitted of absurdity, while if the wording is to be excused, the original idea is indefensible. We read that the Order is to "be enjoyed by the Princesses of our Royal House, and the wives or other female relatives of Indian princes and others." This idea about wives is repeated in two other passages, one of which runs:—"It shall be competent for the Sovereign of this Order to confer the decoration thereof upon the wives or other female relatives of any of the persons who have held, now hold, or may hereafter hold the high offices of Viceroy and Governor-General of India, Governors of Madras or Bombay, or of Principal Secretary of State for India." Such a distortion of what ought to be the idea of a Ladies' Order renders it ridiculous. It is glaringly obvious that the wives of eminent men of rank already enjoy, as such, the titles and honours properly accruing to them on account of their husbands, but since titles, as a rule, can only be given primarily to men, a special Order for Ladies would be an admirable idea if it had been exclusively reserved for such ladies as are not mentioned in the warrant, and expressly denied to those who are there marked out as its recipients. Ladies of high rank in their own right, and ladies who play a prominent part in ceremonial life in such a way that the special grace with which they play it comes to be noticed, and ladies who show fine qualities in a great crisis, like the mutiny, for example (and are of adequate social rank to receive a decoration), those would be the proper recipients of a genuine Ladies' Order. How this can have been overlooked in connection with the present Order is quite unintelligible. Excuses could easily have been invented for giving the Order to any lady on whom the Government might wish to confer it, for of all imaginable qualifications, there is only one which it should have been absolutely inadmissible. But that is the one which has been paraded in the warrant as the qualification which is to rule the gift in the majority of cases.

THE NEW FINANCE MEASURES.

The Pioneer, referring to the meeting held at Bombay to oppose the licence-tax on trades, thinks it is not pleasant to see the subject dealt with in this sectional spirit. There is a great deal to be said against the financial measures in question, but so far as these endeavour to obtain some contribution from the commercial classes, in mitigation of the burden which presses with unfair weight on agriculture, they can only be applauded. In little details the design of the licence-tax may be open to criticism, but in principle it is unassailable. Nor is the dignity of the position taken up by the Bombay meeting enhanced by its protest against what it calls the exemption of the official and professional classes. That the independent professional class ought to be made to pay taxes just as much as the trading community may perhaps be reasonably urged. As well as the traders, professional men who come to India come here to exploit the country, and it would be right enough to tax them. But the form the Bombay meeting gives to its protest makes this analogous to a plea for the income-tax, and that is a singularly unwise line to take up, besides being unsympathetic. The income-tax is chiefly to be condemned because it is an engine of cruel oppression in the hands of subordinate native agents. But the Bombay meeting seems to treat the whole question as one of rivalry between the selfish interests of different classes of Europeans. This is a debased and ignoble view to take. Again, as regards the so-called "exemptions" of the official class, the complaint is inherently absurd. The European official is a man who may or may not be paid too highly, but he is brought out to this country on certain pay to do certain work for Government. Government has no right to cut that pay on the pretence of equalising taxation. The official when making his original bargain did not undertake to come out to this country to contribute to its revenue, but merely to give it service in return for defined sums of money that cannot fairly be curtailed in the way proposed. On the whole, the proceedings at the meeting, as far as the rough epitome given by the telegraph enables us to judge, do not inspire one with a conviction that Indian affairs would be managed more wisely or more justly if the great commercial cities sent to the Legislative Council those representative members they so kindly offer to supply.

STATION TALK.

LAHOR, Feb. 18.—In the course of these letters I have incidentally mentioned the Punjab Sugar Company, but I have an idea that the project is not so well-known as it deserves to be, both from its economic importance as introducing a vital change in the production of a staple article of food and the opportunity it offers for remunerative investment. The works of this nature in operation up to this time, of which those at Shahjehanpore and Cossipore are types, are rather sugar refineries than manufactories on a large scale, and the new project may be said to leave off where they begin. In the centre of a sugar-cane-growing area of some 150,000 acres, extending over four districts, occupied by a dense population eager to dispose of its crops, where labour is abundant and cheap, and communications are good, and where unlimited water power is available, machinery is being set up, the cane-crushing power of which is equal to producing sufficient juice to make ten tons of sugar per diem. This, it will be seen, is not a project for supplying the European community with refined loaf sugar for its afternoon tea, but for the supply of the native market on a large and comprehensive scale. The native consumption of sugar, there is good reason for believing, is limited only by the supply, and when the sugar duties in Rajpootana are removed, it is probable that the demand, already practically unlimited, will be largely increased. No contrast could be more complete than that between the creaking little belna or kolū, and the feeble trickling that results from the bullocks slowly pacing their monotonous round, and the new company's cane-mills driven by a water wheel of a hundred-horse power, transmitted from the Bari Doab Canal. The machinery, by Messrs. Mirrlees, Tait and Watson, of Glasgow, is the most perfect that has yet been exported from the United Kingdom, and the arrangements generally, especially those which concern the rapidity of the processes of granulation and separation from molasses, &c., are unlike anything yet seen in India. The cane-juice, after expression in the mills just mentioned, is pumped into clarifiers heated by steam, in which it is defecated; and from these it passes into a series of open boilers, where its watery particles are partially evaporated; thence into a receptacle called an Aspinwall pan, where the already concentrated juice is deprived of such water as may remain by a final course of steaming, whence it travels into coolers continually surrounded by cold water, which causes rapid granulation. Twenty-four hours afterwards the sugar is dug out and passed through machines with a centrifugal motion, which expel the molasses and leave the sugar fit for the market. The molasses are run into tanks, and presently, in the still, undergo a transformation, rich and rare, into rum. I fear I have not with any precision explained the action of the Aspinwall pan and the centrifugal machines on which so much turns, but the whole process is so rapid in its operation that the sugar-cane may be one day waving its green spears of foliage in the sun, and thirty-six hours afterwards its juice will be ready for despatch to market as firm, dry sugar, while the fibrous refuse is drying to feed the boiler fires withal. So surely as the Briton will not be robbed of his beer will the native eat as much sugar as he can get, nor can he find a better food. And it is the certain and ever-increasing demand for sugar which puts the Punjab Sugar Works Company in such a safe position. The whole of its machinery has arrived, and is being fixed, and work will be begun next October. At present I believe some of the larger kinds of cane are not crushed at all, and it was only the other day that a cultivator banking up his stock with earth to keep it fresh and safe from frost till he found a market for it told me he thought the railway works, where they had all sorts of "injins," might crush it for him. The action of the company upon the cultivators cannot but be beneficial, for there is great room for improvement in sugar-cane cultivation.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

ARRIVALS AT CALCUTTA.—Sir Andrew and Lady Clarke arrived in Calcutta on Sunday morning, Feb. 24.

ACCIDENT TO AN OFFICER.—Major Malcolm, H.M.'s 34th Regiment, has met with an accident at Ferozepore. His horse put his foot into a hole and came down, Major Malcolm dislocating his shoulder in the fall; it is added that he is progressing very favourably.

FRONTIER NEWS.—Our Lahor contemporary tells us that Muhammad Akbar Khan and Muhammad Hassan Khan, sons of the late Chief of Lalpura, have come into British territory with about 100 Mohmand followers, dissatisfied at the non-payment of their allowance, and with the position assigned to their half brother, Muhammad Sadik Khan, by the Amir of Kabul.

THE BOZDARS.—Another frontier tribe is showing signs of hostility, and we are informed that the Deputy Commissioner at Dera Ghazi Khan has been obliged to blockade the Bozdars. The cavalry portion of the Mungrota outpost has therefore been slightly increased, to guard against any raids which may be attempted, though little apprehension of them is entertained.

GEOLOGICAL EXPEDITION TO SIKKIM.—Count Bela Szechanvi's expedition arrived in Darjeeling on Feb. 9th and started for Sikkim on the 14th. This gentleman's principal object is the investigation of the glaciers and glacial formations to be found in such abundance in Independent Sikkim.

RETIREMENT OF AN OLD CIVILIAN.—We understand that in consideration of his long and meritorious services to Government, extending over a period of forty-two years, the Government of India have concurred in the recommendation of the Financial Department that Mr. Twaling, the Registrar of that Department, be allowed to retire on a pension of Rs. 400 a month.

REGIMENTAL RELIEF.—H.M.'s 18th (Royal Irish) Regiment, under command of Colonel Dillon, arrived at Ferozepore on Sunday, the 24th February, and relieved H.M.'s 34th (Cumberland) Regiment, which marched away from that station, under command of Colonel Paget, for Loodhiana on the 26th, en route for Shahjehanpore and Ranikhet.

CIVIL AND MILITARY BALL.—A ball was given in the Ferozepore Station Library and Institute building, on February 10, by the officers of the Civil Service, the Royal Artillery, the Staff, and the 34th (Cumberland) Regiment, to the 30th Punjab Native Infantry, who are very popular in the station, by reason of their extensive hospitality. About eighty sat down to supper, and dancing was kept up till near four A.M. The ball was a brilliant one.

SALT FROM TIBET.—The salt tax is to be abolished—in the case of salt coming from Tibet. Probably the revenue will not suffer from vast importations. The Secretary of State has sanctioned the arrangement to encourage the trade with Tibet. It is curious to see how modern English Government will bow to the ground before any idea which promises an advantage in the way of business, however small. For the higher good that is barren of profit it will seldom stir a finger. Is the instinct of the people really as base as this sort of prudence would assume?—Pioneer.

KABUL.—A report from the frontier states that some of the independent tribes, such as the people of Terah and Khyber, lately addressed the Amir of Kabul, attributing the ruin of the Jawakis to him, as it was through his instigation and promises of aid that they commenced hostilities against the British Government. They are further reported as having said that if the Amir does not now assist the Jawakis he need not expect aid from them in maintaining the fort at Ali Masjid.

THE NAGA HILLS.—Samaguting is, after all, to be abandoned as the head-quarters of the Naga Hills. Kohima is likely to be the future head-quarters station, and Wokha the sub-divisional head-quarters. While at Wokha the Chief Commissioner has been prospecting for a good site, and has pitched upon one which seems to satisfy all requirements; height about 4,600 feet; water supply, capital; good aspect—in fact an eligible site in every way. On the 12th the Chief Commissioner and party were to have left Wokha for Golaghat and Shillong.—Pioneer, Feb. 23.

INDIGO CULTIVATION.—A correspondent writes to the Englishman from Tirhoot:—"One of the first fruits of the late reforms in indigo planting in Tirhoot is that it is to cease in some places altogether. A planter holds an agreement from a ryot, in which the latter agrees to cultivate a beegah of indigo at the old rate of, say, Rs. 6. The planter comes forward voluntarily, and raises the rate to Rs. 12. The ryot (not being a member of the Association) does not understand why this should be done, immediately suspects something below the surface, and forthwith refuses to cultivate the indigo at all. The Lieutenant-Governor promised to meet the planter halfway in his reforms, and in this case certainly some measures might be adopted to ensure the planter fair play.

A CRIMINAL APPEAL.—A sepoy belonging to the 3rd N.I., who shot a bugler at Dinapore in October last, was placed on his trial at the Patna Sessions Court a few days ago, on a charge of having committed wilful murder. He was found guilty, and sentenced to undergo the extreme penalty of the law. A subscription has been raised by his friends in the regiment, to the extent of Rs. 125, with the object of submitting an appeal on his behalf to the High Court, Calcutta. The unfortunate man for some time attempted to pass himself off as a lunatic, and it will be on these grounds that an application for a remission of the sentence will be made to the High Court.

ATTEMPT TO POISON BY A NATIVE.—An account has reached the Civil and Military Gazette of an outrage perpetrated at Palampur, in the Kangra district, of which the Civil Surgeon of Dharmasala was the victim. Noticing an unusual and unpleasant flavour about the first spoonful of pudding, the doctor was led to examine the dish more carefully, and perceived that it had been dusted over with a white powder, not unlike arsenic—for which, however, as well as for other familiar poisons, the pudding was tested in vain. The obnoxious matter at last turned out to be sulphate of quinine. It appears that the cook had adopted this somewhat unusual flavouring, in consequence of a certain want of appreciation of his culinary skill, which the doctor had of late displayed in a somewhat marked degree.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY.—The resolutions regarding the contract for the conveyance of the Overland Mails passed by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce on Saturday last contrast most favourably, as regards moderation, with the representations made by the Bombay Chamber on the same subject. As regards both speed and duration of contract, indeed, these resolutions are entirely in accord with the views we ourselves some time since expressed on the same questions. For tropical seas, and under all the circumstances of the voyage, thirteen knots was, we pointed out, an unreasonable average speed to demand, while the proposition of the Bombay Chamber to limit the contract for five years does not allow sufficiently for the costliness of the arrangements which any new Company would have to make for the purpose of conducting the service, or even of the alterations in their fleet which reasonable conditions as to speed would entail upon the P. and O. Company. The effect of limiting the contract to five years would simply be to prevent effective competition for the contract, and leave us entirely in the hands of the present contractors, while it would at the same time justify them in asking higher terms than they could otherwise hope for. As regards the separation of the Indian service from the China and Australian services, on which the Bombay Chamber insisted, the Bengal Chamber pronounces no opinion, merely stipulating that, in case the proposed separation should not take place, conditions should be inserted to protect the Indian service from delays on account of the late arrival of China and Australian mails. We ourselves incline to the separation of the services, on the ground that, apart from any other advantages that might result from it, it would so far reduce the magnitude of the undertaking as greatly to favour competition. There are probably very few existing companies,—if there is any existing company—that could undertake the vast responsibilities involved in the performance of all these services, while there are several who might undertake the Indian branch alone.

Madras.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE.—All Government House entertainments at Madras have been cancelled, owing to the news received by telegram of the death of Lady Elizabeth Pringle, aunt to his Grace the Duke of Buckingham.

MANUFACTURE OF PAPER IN INDIA.—The Secretary of State has expressed to the Government of Madras a desire to be informed of the results of the experiments which the Collectors of certain districts in that presidency were some time back directed to make in the manufacture of paper from the prickly pear; and also that the results of experiments which, it is understood, have recently been made for the utilisation of this plant as fodder for cattle may be reported to him.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL SILVER.—Brig-Gen. Silver, M.N.I., Commanding the Northern District, is likely to be promoted to Major if not Lieutenant-General under the new warrant, and will in that event have to resign the command of his Brigade. He succeeded Sir Alfred Wilde in the Military Secretaryship of the Madras Government; and Sir Alfred Wilde was summoned to the Council of India to represent the Madras Army, to which he belonged. The death of that distinguished General has created a vacancy, which, it is possible, General Silver will be invited to fill.

GOLD IN WYNAD.—The gold mines in Wynad appear to have turned out lately an average of 3 dwts. of gold per ton. Larger returns than seven dwts. have been obtained at times, but without regularity. It is considered that three dwts. per ton should be sufficient to make the works pay while the cost of working is small and water-power employed. The companies are at present working nearly at the surface, where native workers have been before them, and the machinery is inefficient and poor. The question is whether the richness of the "underlie" is sufficient to cover the expenses of working, by skilled hands, valuable and expensive machinery for deeper mining.

CHINGALPAT.—Surgeon-General Van Someren reports on the Chingalpat Relief Camp that the total admissions have amounted to about 10,000, but there have never been more than 2,000 inmates at any one time. On the 23rd January there were only 258 in camp, and of them fifty under treatment in hospital. The number treated in hospital since May 1877 was 1,688, among whom 347 deaths occurred, showing a mortality of 25.5 per cent. Thirty-nine deaths took place out of hospital, bringing the total up to 386 among about 10,000 admissions into the relief camp, which gives a mortality rate of 3.86 per cent. He states that a large expanse of the district looks green with promising crops, but still large tracts of arable land are uncultivated even where water seems abundant.

THE INDIAN MAILS.—We see that the Secretary to the Post Master-General has replied to the memorial of the Madras Chamber of Commerce on the P. and O. Mail contract as follows:—"I am directed by his Lordship to state to you, for the information of the Chamber of Commerce at Madras, that he has already given notice to the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company of his intention to terminate, on the 1st February, 1880, their contract for the conveyance of East India and other mails. His Lordship desires me to add that no time shall be lost in considering the conditions under which tenders for a new service shall be invited, and that, at the proper time, due consideration shall be given to the suggestions made by the Madras Chamber of Commerce."

A VICEREGAL PRESENTATION GIFT STOLEN.—Sir Madhava Rao's watch and chain, presented to him by Lord Northbrook, were stolen from him on the third day of his arrival at Trevandrum. It seems that he was invited by his brother-in-law and son-in-law to supper, and before the meal was ready the wakil engaged the service of a few songsters to wile away the time. The knight spent some time at this diversion, and when the hour arrived for supper he placed the watch, &c., in a private room. A goldsmith who was close by, and who was one of the songsters, had an eye on the watch, and before the meal was over he ingeniously stole the trinket and made off. The goldsmith was afterwards arrested, when he made a full confession. The offender was sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment, and two dozen lashes at the time of his liberation.

THE KOTAGIRI MASSACRE CASE.—This case will be fresh in the memory of our readers, says the Ootacamund paper. There were two factions of Coorumbars at Keel Kotagiri, one headed by Chenna and the other by Sella. These two headmen, as was shown, were reputed to have been at enmity for a long time. The object of the massacre, it was proved, was to destroy Chenna Coorumber's brood, and the bloody crime was planned and carried out on Oct. 27, 1875. About this time Chenna was murdered, and simultaneously Sella Coorumber's brood committed a frightful massacre of the inhabitants of three Coorumber villages, in which the lives of several men, women, and children, were ruthlessly taken by the cowardly murderers. Most of the culprits were captured at the time, and received their just punishment. Since Dec. 18, 1875, Government has been offering rewards for the apprehension of Sella, the ring-leader, and four of his accomplices. Mr. Shortt, Chief Inspector of Police, succeeded in capturing him a few days ago, after a sharp resistance, in which two constables were wounded.

PROSPECTS IN MADRAS.—From the latest published district reports from Madras, it appears that in almost every district in the presidency, except Tanjor, Malabar, South Canara and the Nilgiris, the crops have been more or less damaged by insects, blight, or locusts. Grain continues to be imported into Ganjam; pasture and water supply are diminishing in Vizagapatnam; the crops are generally good in the Godavery district, though suffering from blight in some places. Public health is indifferent in the Kistna district, and the crops are still suffering from insects. In Nellor the crops are doing well, but insects and blight are doing their work of destruction. The standing crops in Bellari are generally promising, but white cholera, the chief article of food in the district, has been damaged by insects; and of oil-seeds, horse gram and korra, the outturn has been less than anticipated. Fever is abating in Karnul, where the harvest is progressing. In North Arkot the outturn of crops is poor, and blight and insects are doing much mischief. The crops in the northern taluqs of Tinnevely have been attacked by an extraordinary number of locusts, and in some taluqs have been damaged by flies. The result is a poor harvest. In seven taluqs the crops have been damaged by insects in Coimbatore, and the yield has been poor. In Salem there is still a want of work for labourers, and employment will have to be afforded the poor people for at least the next three months. In Malabar the yield of the grain crops has been above the average, and in South Canara a good second crop of rice has been obtained. In the Chingleput district the crops are fairly good, except in places where they have been damaged by insects.

THE BANGALOR BANK.—The report of the inspectors appointed to inquire into the state of the Bangalor Bank lays bare a systematic course of irregularities on the part of the officials of the bank which must astonish the shareholders and confound honest folk in general. The inspectors conclude their report by saying—"We have to remark that the shareholders are in some measure to blame for having permitted Mr. Bain to remain in office so long. They ought to have insisted upon his resignation some two years ago. They knew him to be an old man, and that he had a severe attack of illness early in 1876 which must have weakened him in body and mind, and this was followed by a family bereavement in the death of his wife. His carelessness and neglect of duty can doubtless be traced to these causes, and ever since June 29, 1877, he did not even initial the register of 'Cash with the Agent.' To his credit, however, we are bound to state that during the eleven years he was agent of the bank the shareholders have received Rs. 5,72,004-1-5 in dividends, which amounts to 87 per cent. on the present capital, and nearly 100 per cent. on the average capital for the last eleven years. Had the loss been in due course of business the shareholders would not have much room for complaint in now being called upon to lose 9 per cent. of their capital; but the loss could not have occurred had closer supervision been exercised by the directors, and had the president and cashier attended to their legitimate duties instead of to their own interests, and had Mr. Bain not embarked in the tannery business against the rules of the bank.

THE OFFICE OF GOVERNMENT ADVOCATE.—The appointment by the Punjab Government of Mr. Henderson, a Junior Assistant Commissioner of the Third Class, to officiate as Government Advocate during Mr. Rattigan's absence on leave, has called forth a strong and not unreasonable remonstrance from the members of the local Bar. Of course the barristers have no claim to the appointment, as civilians, under the existing system, have a claim to the appointments reserved for them by their covenant. A barrister is a free lance to whom Government is under no obligations. But as a matter of public policy, it is a mistake for any Government to try and do without a trained legal adviser; and the Punjab barristers are thus entitled to feel that a prize has been taken from them for no good reason. It is true Mr. Henderson is himself a barrister, but he has never practised, and has therefore no experience of the Courts in the capacity of an advocate. Although the Punjab bar is a small one, yet it cannot be said that it has hitherto failed in turning out good material. One of the former Government advocates, Mr. H. S. Cunningham, is now a Judge of the High Court, Calcutta; and another, Mr. H. M. Plowden, has recently been raised to the bench of the Chief Court with the approval of all who know him. There still remain among the ranks of the Bar gentlemen who are in the enjoyment of a practice and an income which a Commissioner might envy. Surely the Punjab Government might have been able to make a worthy selection from among these, instead of passing them all over for a civilian absolutely unversed in the practice of the Courts.—Pioneer.

STATION TALK.

BOMBAY, Feb. 18.—I ought to have taken notice in my last letter of the Volunteer Ball given in the Town-hall. Sir Richard Temple, the honorary colonel, led off the first dance with the commandant's wife at half-past nine, and the last was, I believe, danced between four and five next morning. The old hall, which holds its place well with the best of the rooms in any of our new buildings, was tastefully draped—organ and all—with flags, and the scene from the small balcony at the end was a very pretty one. On the following day there was a large and fashionable gathering in the afternoon at the Sassoon Mechanics' Institute, attracted by the intimation that Mr. Cooke, of the Poona College, would deliver a lecture on "Useful Applications of Electricity," and that the Governor would introduce the lecturer. One of the useful applications which formed the subject of the lecture struck me as being excessively ingenious; and, in the hope that it may be new to your readers, I should like to describe it at some length. It is well known that one of the chief difficulties in coining operations is that of turning out blanks or bits—as the round silver plates are called, before they receive the impression that makes rupees of them—of the exact weight required. True there is an allowance for error or remedy, as it is technically called, and blanks which fall short of or exceed the proper weight, but keep within the remedy, are not rejected. But, notwithstanding, there are generally a good many pieces which are definitely either too light or too heavy to be made into rupees. Hitherto the latter have been sent to be filed, a process which necessarily involves some loss and no small amount of time and trouble, while in the case of the light coins there has been no remedy but to send them back to the melting-pot, thus sacrificing all the labour previously spent upon them. Now, it sounds like magic, but the authorities at the Bombay Mint—the credit of the idea is due to Mr. G. L. Hynes, who, however, warmly praises the way in which its execution has been furthered by Mr. Peterson—have actually in operation an arrangement by which a sufficient quantity of silver is taken off a heavy blank and deposited on a light one, leaving both ready to receive the stamp, and all without the intervention of a workman's hand. The ordinary galvanic bath used in electro-plating is the means employed. As you know, in that process, by electrical action silver is carried from a plate of that metal suspended in the bath and deposited equally over the surface of the article to be electro-plated. Mr. Hynes puts the heavy rupees where the manufacturer puts his plate of silver, and the light rupees where he puts the article to be plated, passes the current through, and in half-an-hour it is found that ninety-five out of one hundred of the rejected blanks have mutually righted each other. I think you will admit that this is a very neat "application of electricity;" while of its usefulness there can be little doubt if it be true, as I hear it is, that the practical result will be to increase the output of the Mint by about five per cent.—Dr. Wilson's book on "Indian Caste," of whose forthcoming appearance I advised you some weeks ago, was published here last week, and will, I suppose, have a ready sale in India with the scientific reader. It must suffer from the lapse of the twenty years that have passed since Dr. Wilson laid down the lines of what he intended to be his magnum opus. But the volume that treats of caste generally contains a great deal of interest to those who, with no pretensions to be scholars, desire to have, in an accessible shape, all that is known or believed about the knotty but important question which is its theme; while the enumeration and description of the Brahminical castes throughout India, which is all that the author lived to write of the second volume, will have permanent value. It seems a pity, however, that the contributions Dr. Wilson made to the permanent section of the administration report and the Gazetteer of Bombay, and which were really studies for his own work, were not incorporated with this second volume.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DEPARTURE OF H.M.'s TROOP-SHIP "CROCODILE".—Her Majesty's Indian troop-ship Crocodile, 4,173 tons, Captain P. R. Sharpe, sailed on Feb. 28 for England with 55 officers, 10 ladies, 17 children, 946 men, 88 women, and 185 children.

LEGAL.—Mr. A. D. Pollen, LL.D., who was called to the Bar a year or two ago, is to act for Mr. Naylor, the present Legal Remembrancer to the Bombay Government, when Mr. Naylor goes home next month.

ACCIDENT TO DR. DOOLITTLE.—On Feb. 14, at the Bombay races, one of Dr. Doolittle's horses became very restive, and that gentleman, while trying to pacify the animal, was struck on the right jaw by its head. The blow broke a bone and disunited some teeth. The doctor is laid up, being unable to converse, but it is hoped that he will soon recover.

NEW SILVER MINE IN PERSIA.—M. Hubel, the mining engineer employed by the Persian Government, has made an important discovery of silver near Zingan. He reports that he has found a vein of Galena of unusual thickness, containing in many places three per cent., and in all parts more than 1½ per cent., of pure silver. It is asserted that at a comparatively small outlay these mines may be made to produce an enormous revenue.

ESTATE OF THE LATE COLONEL BAIGRIE.—An application made a short time since by Mr. Newcome Fox, the Officiating Administrator General of Bombay to the Ecclesiastical Registrar of the High Court, for a grant of letters of administration of the estate of the late Colonel Robert Baigrie, C.B., Acting Quartermaster General of the Bombay Army, and honorary aide-de-camp to the Governor-General. Colonel Baigrie died at Poona in September last. On the 20th instant letters of administration were granted to the Administrator General of Bombay, the estate being sworn under Rs.12,250.

DEATH OF THE REV. MR. BEYNON.—The Bombay Guardian announces the death of Rev. Mr. Beynon, of Belgaum. Mr. Beynon was one of the oldest missionaries in India, having come out in 1825.

Nor was it till he had been in the country forty-eight years that he revisited his native land. He has been a resident of Belgaum for nearly the whole of his Indian career. Mr. Beynon was born in the principality. He was connected with the London Missionary Society. Since his return from Europe in 1875 he has not been actively engaged in mission work. In the last few years Mr. Beynon has suffered from failure of sight and other infirmities. Mrs. Beynon, his partner and helpmeet in his long missionary course, survives him.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN GOSLIN.—Captain Goslin, one of the oldest soldiers in the Bombay Army, died on Feb. 15 at Poona. He came out as drummer in the forces of the East India Company more than sixty years ago, and was present at the battle of Kirkee, the siege of Satara, and in pursuit of Bajee Rao in Berar and Malwa, and throughout the Pindaree campaign. He was engaged against the Wahabees at Rasel Khina in 1824 in the forces under the command of Sir W. Grant Keir; and after the conquest of the Mahratta dynasty was attached to the Commissariat Department. In this department he gradually rose to the rank of honorary captain, and on taking his pension a few years since he elected to take up his permanent residence in Poona.

THE NEW DIOCESE.—The Acting Archdeacon and Commissary of Bombay has issued the following letter:—"From the Acting Archdeacon and Commissary of Bombay to the Clergy in Sind.—Rev. and Dear Sir,—I have received information from the Bishop of Lahor that, according to the new arrangements of the Indian Dioceses, Sind now forms part the Diocese of Lahor. This is the first notification from authority of the new arrangements which I have received. His Lordship wishes me to mention to you in writing that it is his wish and purpose on his arrival in India, which may be soon expected, to go up the Indus to Lahor, and to visit the civil and military as well as mission stations on the route or lying off it, if possible; and to hold confirmations if such seems desirable or needful after the Bishop of Bombay's late visitation. As a former Chaplain in Sind, I may be pardoned the expression of regret that the province of Sind is severed from this diocese, and of sincere hope that the severance by which nearer episcopal supervision is secured to the province will be found ultimately to promote the cause of Christ and his Church.—I am, &c., S. STREAD, Acting Archdeacon and Commissary.—Poona, Jan. 31."

SERIOUS ACCIDENTS.—On Thursday, February 14, at the Races, one of Dr. Doolittle's horses became very restive, and that gentleman, while trying to pacify the animal, was struck on the right jaw by its head. The blow broke a bone, and disunited some teeth. The doctor is now laid up, being unable to converse. It is hoped that he will not be confined to his room very long.—On Saturday Feb. 16, Mr. Noble Richardson, a son of Mr. Richardson, proprietor of the Iron Foundry and Engineering Works at Byculla, met with a serious accident. Observing a snake on a tree in the compound of his bungalow he ordered his gun to be brought, and discharged the contents of one of the barrels at the reptile, after which he handed the gun to a butler who was standing by, and went towards the tree to observe the effect of the shot. A few minutes after, the second barrel, which was also loaded and cocked, went off accidentally, the contents lodging under Mr. Richardson's right shoulder-blade. It is supposed that the servant handled the gun carelessly, and so caused the accident. Dr. Anderson, House Surgeon of the J. J. Hospital, was in immediate attendance, and, in conjunction with Dr. Blanc, performed an operation yesterday on the unfortunate gentleman, who is still in a very precarious condition.

SIR R. TEMPLE.—Sir Richard Temple, accompanied by Capt Rivett-Carnac and Dr. Waters, visited Mhow on Feb. 15. He arrived by mail train from Indor at eleven o'clock. A guard of honour was ready at the station to salute him. He was escorted by a detachment of 3rd Hussars to the mess-house of the regiment, as, owing to the absence of Major-Gen. Forbes, the Hussars invited him and his staff as their guests for the day. At twelve o'clock Sir Richard held a levée. Afterwards the Parsi community of Mhow, headed by Khan Bahadoor Eduljee Pestonji, Honorary Magistrate of Mhow, and Mr. Aderji Dadabhai, presented an address to his Excellency, and subsequently Sir Richard visited the 3rd Hussars, barracks and hospital, also the site proposed for the water supply of Mhow. A grand full-dress review of the garrison followed, after which his Excellency and staff returned to Indor by train. On Feb. 16, at Indor, his Excellency received visits from the Maharajah Holkar and his two sons, the Maharajah of Dhar and the two Chiefs of Deevas at the Residency. Sir Richard Temple, accompanied by Sir Henry Daly, paid return visits. In the evening there was a grand banquet at the Residency, to which all the ladies and gentlemen of Mhow were invited. On Feb. 17 his Excellency attended divine service at Christ Church, Mhow, afterwards returning to Indor. On the 18th his Excellency was to leave for Nimach, proceeding by train as far as Oojuria, and from there through Rutlam and Jowra, where he would be the guest of the Rajahs of Rutlam and Jowra.

BENGAL CIVIL FUND.

At the half-yearly general meeting of subscribers to the Bengal Civil Fund, held at the Town Hall, Calcutta, on Monday, Jan. 30, the report presented notified that the committee had admitted to the benefits of the fund the following families:—

The widow of the late Mr. G. E. Makgill (an invalid annuitant of 1872), who died in England on Aug. 3 last. Mrs. Makgill is entitled to the one-fourth pension, or £75 per annum, her husband having, at the time of his retirement, made up his subscription balance to Rs. 6,250.

The widow and child of the late Mr. J. Geoghehan, who died in England on Oct. 2 last.

The widow and eight children (five daughters and three sons) of the late Mr. A. R. S. Pollock, who died in England on Oct. 3 last.

The widow of the late Mr. H. S. Boulderson (annuitant of 1851), who died in England on Oct. 28 last.

The widow and two daughters of the late Mr. G. P. Leicester (annuitant of 1862), who died in England on Nov. 3 last.

The widow and daughter of the late Mr. S. J. Becher (annuitant of 1866), who died in England on Nov. 21 last.

The widow and four children (three daughters and one son) of the late Mr. V. H. Schallch (annuitant of 1877), who died in England on Dec. 3 last, provisionally admitted pending the receipt of papers.

The Managers submit for the consideration of the meeting the case of Mr. R. Evans:—

Under article eight of the rules, subscribers who resign the service and wish to secure to their widows and children the full, three-quarters, half, or one-fourth benefits of the Fund, must, on retirement, make up their subscription balance to Rs. 25,000, Rs. 18,750, Rs. 12,500 or Rs. 6,250, as the case may be, and must continue their contributions on their annuities at half the rates levied from subscribers in the service. Mr. Evans resigned the service from 1st March, 1877. On the 24th April last he was informed that he must at once pay Rs. 4,433-0-10, if he desired to retain an interest in the Fund by making up his balance to the sum of Rs. 6,250. He is anxious to keep up his interest, and he urges the three following circumstances which made it impossible for him to pay the money at the time specified:—(1.) During his term of service, extending from 1867 to 1877, he never got beyond the grade of Assistant Magistrate at Rs. 500 a month. (2.) When compelled to take leave on medical certificate in 1876, he had not completed the three years' residence after return from previous leave necessary to entitle him to the ordinary furlough allowance of £500. Instead of £500 per annum for two years, he could only claim £300 for one year. (3.) His health was so bad when he returned home that he could neither raise money by insuring his life, nor increase his income by obtaining employment. Mr. Evans states that he will be prepared to pay the amount, with any fine that may be imposed within a fortnight after the decision of the subscribers is intimated to him.

The Managers recommend Mr. Evans's application to the favourable consideration of the Meeting.

In accordance with the request of the Managers, E. F. Harrison has been in personal communication with the Actuary regarding the valuation of the assets and liabilities of the Fund. He reports that it would be impossible to place the inquiry in the hands of any one more capable of doing justice to it than Mr. Hardy. Mr. Harrison was to have had a further interview with Mr. Hardy in December, and the Managers have thought it advisable to await the result of his projected visit before taking any further steps regarding the valuation.

43rd Foot.—Lieut. P. T. Clark, from the Royal Cornwall and Devon Miners' Artillery Militia, to be second lieutenant, in succession to Lieut. F. H. Bourne, prom.

72nd Foot.—Capt. and Brevet major P. B. Simpson retires on a pension.

99th Foot.—The second Christian name of Second Lieut. Jones is Dally, and not Dalby, as stated in the Gazette of Jan. 20.

BREVET.

Major gen. F. C. A. Stephenson, C.B., to be lieut. gen., consequent on the death, on Feb. 22, of Lieut. gen. Sir J. Jones, K.C.B.; Capt. and Brevet major P. B. Simpson, 72nd foot, to have the hon. rank of lieut. col. upon retiring upon a pension; Capt. J. J. C. Irby, half-pay, late 47th foot, and adjutant of the Royal Hospital, Chelsea, to have the hon. rank of major; Capt. J. McLoughlin, half-pay, late 11th hussars, to have the hon. rank of major upon retiring on full-pay; Paymr. and Hon. Capt. J. Campbell, 36th foot, to have the hon. rank of major.

MILITARY DECORATIONS.

Further directions as to the mode of wearing decorations have been issued from the Horse Guards. They are as follow:—

1. Officers of the Army who are Knights Commanders of the Order of the Bath, or of the Order of the Star of India, or of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, will, when in full-dress uniform, wear the ribbon of the Order, or the ribbons of the Orders, to which they belong, over the collar of the tunic, on all occasions when the Sovereign is present, or the representative of the Sovereign, on the parade in celebration of the birthday of the Sovereign, and on all State occasions, including levées, drawing-rooms, and balls.

2. The buckles which are attached to the ribbons of the third class of the Orders of the Bath and of St. Michael and St. George should be seen when suspended from the horizontal bar referred to in Paragraph 1 of General Order No. 51 of 1875.

3. The Victoria Cross, when suspended from the bar, will come immediately after the badge of the Order of the Indian Empire.

4. The straight horizontal bar from which decorations and medals are suspended, is to be placed between the first and second buttons from the bottom of the collar of the tunic.

5. The undermentioned medals will be worn as specified against each distinction:—The medal for "distinguished conduct."—On the left breast, and immediately after the war medal commemorative of the war during which the act of gallantry took place for which the "distinguished conduct" medal was granted. The "meritorious service" medal.—On the left breast, after all orders and medals. The "long-service and good-conduct" medal.—As in the case of the medal for "meritorious service." It may be repeated here that the "long-service and good-conduct" medal cannot be held together with the "meritorious service" medal. The "best shot" medal.—On the right breast.

6. Non-commissioned officers and men who may be in possession of any of the distinctions quoted in the preceding paragraph are to be required to conform to the regulations laid down therein, and they are to adhere to the same if promoted to commissioned rank.

7. The above regulations extend to officers who have retired from the Service, or from the Indian Army, provided that under the regulations they be allowed to wear uniform.

	Gen. Yorke, c.b.

Miscellaneous.

THE FAMINE COMMISSION.—Mr. James Caird, c.b., has been requested by the Government of India to serve on the Commission to inquire into the subject of famines, and with that object will join the Commission in India early in October.

THE COMMAND IN CHINA AND THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.—Major-General E. W. Donovan, formerly of the 33rd Regiment, is appointed to succeed Lient.-General the Hon. Sir Francis Colborne in the command in China and the Straits Settlements.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Melwa has left with £52,810, £10,000 being in bar gold for Bombay, £10,000 in gold coin for Madras, and £2,000 also in gold coin for Calcutta. The amounts of dollars for Penang and Shanghai are valued respectively at £10,900 and £19,910. These figures prove that the export demand for silver for India has been effectually stopped. The Council drawings are quite as much as the trade demands can take up.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for Rs. 50,00,000 or £500,000 nominal in bills on India were received March 20 at the Bank of England, the amounts allotted being—to Calcutta, £382,400, at an average rate of 1s. 85-66d., and to Bombay, £117,600, at an average rate of 1s. 8-56d. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 8½d. will receive about 12 per cent.; all above in full. Regarding Calcutta there is practically no change compared with last week's allotment, but then Bombay received 85 per cent., of the applications at the above rate, and the present allotment is in that sense so much better, although there is no change in the price.

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—On Monday, the 18th inst., Sir E. Colebrooke, Bart., in the chair, F. D. Mocatta, Esq., and the Rev. I. Shirt, were elected Resident, and G. H. Damanh, Esq., a non-Resident member of this Society. Mr. Thomas called attention to the well-known Phrygian Inscription Dogaflu, and announced his discovery of various dates on it, which had escaped the notice of previous inquirers, demonstrating as these did a much higher antiquity for it than had been previously supposed. Papers were then read, communicated by Captain C. I. F. S. Forbes, and by Mr. H. L. St. Barbe, respectively; the first "On the Tibeto-Burman Languages," the second "On the Transliteration of Burmese."

INDIAN COVENANTED CIVIL SERVICE.—An authoritative statement on the subject of the destination of candidates selected for the Indian Covenanted Civil Service sets forth that the Secretary of State is in accord with the opinion lately expressed by the Government of India that every civil servant is bound to serve wherever the Government at any period of his career require him to go. The Government of India will therefore probably lay this down as a general rule, which will be communicated to the candidates at the time of selection. The Secretary of State is further of opinion that no civil servant should be sent to outlying provinces until he has passed his departmental examination in his own Presidency. In the ordinary course, therefore, appointment to the lower provinces of Bengal includes liability to serve in Assam and Burmah—to the North-West Provinces and the Punjab, liability to serve in Oudh and Sind—to Madras, liability to serve in Burmah—and to Bombay, liability to serve in the Central Provinces.

TROPICAL INSECTS.—The National Entomological Exhibition, which was opened at the Westminster Aquarium the other day, is well worthy of a visit, as it is, within its defined limits, one of the richest and most complete collections ever submitted to public inspection. Professed entomologists are sure to go, but there are plenty of other people who, though not entomologists, love to look upon tropical and other butterflies and wonderful beetles, and who will derive considerable entertainment from a visit to the gallery, where thousands of specimens are ranged. Among the 250 contributors to this unique show are Lord Walsingham, who displays a splendid assortment of the larvæ of lepidoptera, most artistically preserved with his own hands; Sir Sydney Saunders, and Mr. Frederick Smith of the British Museum, who exhibit bees and varieties of bees; Dr. Powers and Mr. Champion, whose strength lies in galls and coleoptera; Mr. Thomas Eedle, who shows a collection of preserved larvæ; Mr. Hillman, who is famous for oakgalls; while the Rev. F. A. Walker and Mr. Swanzy exhibit a splendid collection of tropical butterflies and beetles.

ORIENTAL FAIRY TALES.—A lecture was delivered on the 17th inst., at St. George's Hall, by Mr. T. W. Rhys Davids, on "The Buddhist Jataka Stories—the Earliest Fairy Tales, Fables, and Comic Stories of the Aryan Races." It was well known that in the midst of the Buddhist Scriptures there were a large number of stories and fairy tales, which had been enshrined in a kind of edifying commentary, and so preserved for the study of later times. The belief of the orthodox Buddhists is that they are the experiences of Buddha in former states of existence, and were collected after his death to the number of 550, with commentaries serving to incite men in the paths of virtue. The lecturer traced analogies between the fables of Æsop, Babrius, and Phædrus, and especially a very striking analogy to the Judgment of Solomon. The greatest value, however, of these stories was in the amount of folk-lore which they contained. The customs and habits were detailed by writers who lived at the time, and were themselves members of the community. These stories were translated into Cingalese and into Prali in the fifth century of our era. Considerable progress has been made with a modern Pali Edition by Mr. Fausbøll, but, as it is not yet complete, some of the examples cited were taken from the Cingalese, and were rendered in English form by Mr. Rhys Davids.

THE AGRA BANK (LIMITED).—The Ordinary General Meeting of the shareholders of the above bank was held on March 19 at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street; Mr. J. Thomson, the chairman of the directors, in the chair. The Chairman said, in taking the liabilities, the capital showed an increase of £6,530, which was owing to their having placed during the interval 653 shares, leaving 550 shares yet to allot. They had sold these shares at an average premium of £1. 2s. per share, making a total of £716 17s. This sum had been placed to the reserve fund, which seemed to be proper way of dealing with receipts of this character. The item of current accounts showed an increase of £154,458, and the fixed deposits an increase of £366,187. The bills payable showed an increase of £47,563. On the other side, there was an increase of £209,258 in cash in hand. Of course as their liabilities increased they were obliged to keep in hand larger available means. In Government securities there was an increase of £71,512 for the same reason. In credits, loans, and other investments, there was an increase of £495,412, and this item amounted altogether to the very considerable sum of £2,655,845. Out of the profits £30,000 had been added to the reserve fund. In conclusion, he moved that the report and accounts be received and adopted. The Earl of Carnwath seconded the motion, which, without discussion, was put and carried unanimously, and a dividend at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum was declared. The retiring directors were then re-elected; the election by the board of Mr. William Duncan, in the place of Mr. Ebsworth, who had resigned, was confirmed; Mr. Galeworthy and Major-General Boileau were re-elected auditors; and a hearty vote of thanks was given to the chairman, which brought the proceedings to a close.

EAST INDIA PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.—The committee resumed its weekly sittings on Thursday, March 21, Lord George Hamilton in the chair. The examination-in-chief of General Dickens was continued for a short time by the chairman, but only with the object of settling some portions of the previous evidence which had been left in doubt; but these preliminary questions did not possess any special public importance. The taking over of the Madras Irrigation Works by the Government occurred under peculiar circumstances; the works must have either been altogether abandoned and a loss of £300,000 capital incurred by the projectors, or a valuable undertaking must be supported. The promises of ultimate success were so manifest, that the Government at that time was induced to advance fresh capital, which it obtained by loan and otherwise, and the works were proceeded with under Government supervision. In answer to questions by Sir George Canibell, the witness stated generally that he believed the Orissa scheme, originated by Sir Arthur Cotton, was another work which the Government of past days undertook at vast expense and great loss; but what were failures at the first set off, alike with railways and irrigating works, had ultimately, after the lapse of the necessary time had been allowed for completion, proved so far remunerative that now they paid good interest on capital. Lord Dalhousie's grand system of guaranteed railways now shows a progressive release from early difficulties. The original trunk lines now pay a good dividend. The newer lines of railway promise to do the same at no distant time. As to irrigation works, there are several undertakings which are most profitable. The Eastern and Western Jumna Canals possess a large and increasing traffic, affording an interest on capital of from 14 to 17 per cent. After some minor questions from hon. members on railway and irrigation works past and present, the Committee adjourned.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, March 18.—INCREASED TAXATION IN INDIA.—Mr. FAWCETT gave notice that on April 2 he would call attention to the financial statement recently made at Calcutta by Sir John Strachey, and should move:—"1. That this House regrets that the people of Madras and Bombay should be burdened with the increased salt duty which has recently been imposed upon them, and is of opinion that such an increase would be unnecessary if the finances of India were administered with greater economy. 2. That this House, while admitting the expediency of creating a fund in India for the relief of famines, objects to the Trades License Tax, which will alone be imposed on those engaged in business, and will, moreover, fall upon small traders and artisans with undue severity. 3. That, in the opinion of this House, it is desirable that the fund which is to be created in India for the relief of famines should not be expended on public works, the returns on which are uncertain, but should be devoted to the reduction of debt, or should be kept as a reserve in a separate account, duly invested."

SALT SMUGGLING IN INDIA.—Mr. POTTER asked the Under-Secretary of State for India when the complete returns, promised last session, in reference to salt smuggling in India would be laid upon the table of the House.—Lord G. HAMILTON: I am afraid it is not in my power to name any particular date on which this return, which is very voluminous, and has to be compiled in India, will reach us. A despatch, calling attention to the delay in completing this return, will go out to India by the next mail.

LORD'S DAY ACT IN INDIA.—Lord G. HAMILTON, in reply to Mr. CHARLEY, said: During the passage of the Civil Procedure Code, which is a Consolidation Bill, through the Legislative Council in India last year, a schedule was inserted repealing the Lord's Day Act. As this insertion was not germane to the Act, and as it was on other grounds objectionable, the Government of India were directed to introduce a Bill repealing this schedule. They have objected to this order on the ground that, in their belief, the most important part of the Lord's Day Act was not applicable to India, and have not as yet introduced any repealing Bill. The Civil Procedure Act has not yet been assented to by the Home Government.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, March 19.—INDIAN SALT DUTIES.—Mr. FAWCETT presented a petition from 8,200 inhabitants, native and European, of Bombay, against the increase of the salt duties and the proposed rearrangement of other taxation in India at a time when the country is just recovering from a severe famine. He should move subsequently, he announced, that the petition be printed.

PRESS CENSORSHIP IN INDIA.—Upon the motion to go into Committee of Supply, Mr. O'DONNELL called attention to the establishment of a Censorship of the Press in Bengal and Bombay, and moved "That legislation for our Indian fellow-subjects subversive of fundamental principles of the British Constitution should not be adopted without this House being previously consulted upon the urgent necessity of such a course."—Mr. GLADSTONE said: I have no doubt that the hon. member for Dungarvan brought forward this question under a very strong sense of the urgency of the case, and I do not wish to make myself judge of his conduct in that respect; but I must say that, notwithstanding the urgency of the case, I am disposed to make an appeal to him and other hon. members not to attempt to proceed with the discussion at the present time. It appears to me that the matter is one of extreme gravity. I have rarely read any announcement affecting the proceedings of any portion of the Government of this country with greater pain than that which I have read of the recent doings of the Government of India. And that pain will be shared by those members of the Government and of the House who may have had information upon which to form a judgment upon the whole case, and likewise to arrive at the conclusion that the Government has acted wisely in the matter. For my own part, I think the measures are so strong that I must in common fairness and common sense presume the Indian Government must have seen reasons in order to induce them to take such an extreme course. I therefore am impressed with the view that both prudence and fairness, and I would almost say even decency, or at any rate Parliamentary propriety, requires that we should wait to know what those reasons are before we attempt to discuss this matter. Taking it at the best, if the Indian Government is right in taking proceedings which must cause the deepest pain to all the members of this House, and particularly to those who think with me upon the question, that matters affecting the internal government of India are of far greater importance in preserving the good relations between this country and India than determining her frontiers and other like questions; and if we should arrive at the conclusion that the conduct of the Indian Government has been wise the subject must still be a painful one, and one which we should only approach with full time and full information. If, on the other hand, we arrive at the conclusion that the measure is unwise, do not let us suppose that our path is a clear one. It is one of the unfortunate incidents of distant Governments, and it has often happened that even when you think an error has been committed, the attempts to correct those errors appear to have involved greater mischiefs. I do not wish to be understood as giving judgment upon the proceeding of the hon. gentleman who brought forward the motion, but as most carefully reserving my own opinion on every point of this case, except to state that the matter is one of extreme gravity; and it appears to me that the House is not disposed or prepared for the discussion of the question at the present moment. I have no doubt that the Government will lose no time in giving us the information upon the subject to which I think we are entitled. I would venture to entreat the hon. gentleman and others to wait until that information is received. At the same time, it appears to me that the proposition has been carried through with very great rapidity in India. That, however, is a point upon which we shall have to pronounce a judgment, but it does not seem that we should go forward at the present time with the discussion. As I understand the matter, the proceedings in India have been prompt, absolute, and complete; and if that be so, it is obvious that in a question of such gravity there would be no injury so great as to attempt to discuss the matter at once. (Hear, hear.)

LORD GEORGE HAMILTON has raised the question after the answer which he (the noble lord) had given to the hon. member for Louth, to the effect that when papers were received they should be laid before the House.

Mr. FAWCETT appealed to the hon. member to withdraw his motion at the present stage.

After a few remarks from Sir GEORGE CAMPBELL, the motion was withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, March 21.—THE INDIAN FAMINE.—Replying to Mr. POTTER, Lord G. HAMILTON said that the Government had no information as to the result of the partial census recently taken in Mysor and other famine-stricken districts of India; but they expected some communication on the subject shortly, and he could not conceive of any objection to its being laid on the table.

THE DELHI ASSEMBLY.—Lord GEORGE HAMILTON, replying to Mr. O'DONNELL, said by an oversight the Maharajah Scindiah was kept waiting outside the Viceroy's tent for some time, but the matter was explained satisfactorily.

INDIAN TAXATION.—Lord GEORGE HAMILTON, in reply to Mr. O'DONNELL, said that he proposed to lay certain returns on the table from which the hon. member would be able to obtain information as to Indian taxation.

SUICIDE BY A EUROPEAN LADY.—The Madras Times says:—A very melancholy affair occurred at Puducottah on Feb. 3, which caused considerable sensation among the local community. In the afternoon of that day a report got about to the effect that Mrs. J. James, the wife of Mr. James, the Rajah's bandmaster, had suddenly died by taking poison. This, after a while, reaching the ears of the authorities, the Town Police Magistrate and Mr. Kistnier, the Head-quarter Inspector of Police, went to Mr. James's house in the evening, and held a formal inquiry into the matter up to a very late hour in the night, at which inquiry Mr. Rodgers, the apothecary, and others were duly examined. It transpired from the investigation that the deceased, Mrs. James, and her mother, Mrs. Fox, who had lately come from Madras and was staying with her daughter, had had a quarrel, which, it would appear, terminated in Mrs. Fox leaving the house. Not long afterwards, the deceased, who is said to have been writing a letter at the time, suddenly screamed for help, when her husband, Mr. James, Police Inspector Mr. Power, who was also staying with them at the time, and some other persons ran in and found the deceased in great agitation and violent convulsions. They succeeded, with some difficulty, in laying her on the bed, and ascertained from her that she had taken some stuff, which was discovered to be strychnine. Medical aid was immediately called for, but before any effective remedy could be applied, she was a corpse. The deceased was buried on the following morning in the Lutheran Mission burial-ground.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.*WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1861, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 229, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 10s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.*ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—THE MATERIAL OF WHICH THESE ARE MADE IS RECOMMENDED BY THE FACULTY AS BEING PECULIARLY ELASTIC AND COMPRESSIBLE, AND THE BEST INVENTION FOR GIVING EFFICIENT AND PERMANENT SUPPORT IN ALL CASES OF WEAKNESS AND SWELLING OF THE LEGS, VARICOSE VEINS, SPRAINS, &c.

It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 229, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

THE FOLLOWING*IS AN EXTRACT FROM A LETTER

dated 15th May, 1872, from an old inhabitant of Horningsham, near Warminster, Wilts.:

"I must also beg to say that your Pills are an excellent medicine for me, and I certainly do enjoy good health, sound sleep, and a good appetite; this is owing to taking your Pills. I am seventy-eight years old.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay March 11; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, March 9; Calcutta March 8.

THE papers give a few fresh details about the Darbar held at Peshawar, on March 4, to receive the submission of the Jawakis. The surrendered arms and the fine of Rs. 5,000 were presented to the Lieutenant-Governor, who, in his speech, briefly reviewed the behaviour of the Jawakis, and exhorted them to abstain for the future from outrages on British territory. He also rebuked the Khans and Chiefs for their intrigue, rivalry, and uselessness for all good influence which, he said, directly promoted disturbances on the border; and he gave them distinctly to understand that he would require of them in the future that active loyalty on condition of which they enjoyed handsome allowances and honours from the British Government. His Honour made honourable mention of Nawab Bahadur Sher Khan, to whose exertions in their behalf the Jawakis might attribute the abatement of that punishment which their prolonged contumacy would inevitably have brought upon them. Mr. Egerton also spoke a few words eulogistic of the conduct and bearing of our soldiers in the field. The camp was to break up in a day or two, the Lieutenant-Governor returning to Lahor, whence he would almost immediately start for Sind, accompanied by Mr. Lepel Griffin, Colonel Black, and his Private Secretary, Major Bates.

THE crop and weather reports for the week ending the 5th March show a decrease of 22,000 in the numbers on famine relief in Madras, an improvement that hardly compensates for a general though slight rise of prices. There were still 260,000 in all on the relief list. In the Central Provinces the outturn of the harvest is below the average, especially in Betul, Chindwara, and Seoni, where blight has damaged the wheat, and frost and insects the other crops. Prices still showed a rise, owing to the large exportations to Bombay and the North-West Provinces. Reports from Central India state that the weather was cool, water scarce, and prospects fair. The cholera in the city of Indor was abating. The last report from Mysor, dated the 2nd of March, stated that the condition of the districts was satisfactory, and that there was no increased pressure on the people.

A GREAT deal of distress was reported as still prevailing in the Bombay Famine Districts in consequence of the failure of most of the crops. The distress in Oudh was growing very severe, and in one district the people were dying at the rate of fifty per day. In the North-West Provinces also there was much distress. The magistrate of Agra had appealed to the public for assistance in feeding the daily increasing numbers in the poor-houses, not so much for pecuniary aid as for help in the work of distributing the food.

WE learn that Lieutenant-General Strachey, President of the Famine Commission, was about to start on his tour to Madras and Mysor. With him goes Mr. A. P. Howell, who was to take up the preliminary duties of Secretary, until such time as Mr. Elliott is free to leave Mysor. That gentleman had been summoned from Mysor to Calcutta to confer with the Viceroy about famine matters. He would return, however, presently to Mysor, hoping to wind up the famine business there by the end of April.

AN examination of the outlay accounts furnished from one of the Madras relief camps has brought to light a series of bold and systematic frauds. To prevent over-charge in the valuation of the food, condiments, &c., supplied to the camp by the contractors, it had been ordered that receipts should be issued daily by the superintendent of the camp to the contractor for the amounts received on that day, and that on the production of these receipts, the proper native officer should settle the prices to be paid according to the price list kept in his taluk. It was found that in one case this work had been delegated to a subordinate; who, in collusion with the contractor, had systematically altered the receipts so as to show larger quantities of goods supplied. Thus, when the camp accounts show that 1,733 measures of rice had been received, the vouchers in the taluk (on which payment had been made) showed 673½ measures; and in the same way 88 becomes 288; 77 becomes 277; and so on. The case will of course be fully investigated.

WITH regard to the Famine Commission it is stated that the Viceroy had applied to Mr. Grant Duff to serve upon it, but that Mr. Duff has unfortunately been obliged to refuse. It is also said that Mr. Caird, President of the Copyhold Commission, will probably accept a seat on the Famine Commission.

OWING to the exigencies of the public service, with regard to maintaining effective supervision of those districts in the Madras Presidency in which scarcity still exists and measures of relief are still needed, the Government in Council has deemed it necessary to notify that, pending further orders, no leave will be granted to any of his officers except on very urgent grounds.

AT the meeting of the Leg'slative Council, on Thursday, March 7, Sir Edward Bayley presented the Select Committee's report on the Arms Bill. He detailed the alterations made by the Committee to meet the objections lately urged by the Northern India Rifle Association and other bodies. The Council of that Association had pointed out the injury that would be inflicted on sportsmen and rifle shots in India if the Bill passed in its original form. The Trades Association in Calcutta, moved by Messrs. Rodda and other respectable gun-makers, had also memorialised Government with especial regard to the needless injury threatened to their business by the legislation proposed. Among the objections to certain clauses of the Bill, it was urged that the proposed tax on the "fittings" sent out with a gun or rifle from home (turn-screws, cartridge-closers, &c.) was so heavy, that importers of guns would get out the weapons only, and have the smaller accessories made in India; thus a large number of native workmen would be gradually instructed in the manufacture of the very implements the Government wished to keep out of native hands, and the illicit trade in fire-arms be rather fostered than discouraged. It was urged further, that it was far better to prohibit altogether the import of cheap trade-made arms evidently intended for warlike purposes; whilst sporting guns and rifles, and target rifles, should be admitted as before, on an ad valorem duty.

At the same sitting Mr. Hope moved that the Select Committee's report on the Forest Bill be taken into consideration. He explained at some length the scope and application of the Bill, and the chances which the Committee had effected in the measure as originally drawn. Sir John Strachey spoke in support of the Bill. After a discussion raised by Sir Andrew Clarke on the subject of an agency to be employed to work the Bill, and private rights affected by it, the Bill was passed into law. The Sea Customs Department Bill was also passed.

ACCORDING to the Pioneer, the date for Mr. Rivers Thompson's return from Burmah has not yet been fixed. "He would prefer that the treaty with the native Government, which Colonel Duncan is engaged in negotiating, may be completed before he gives up charge of the province; but if this settlement is delayed, he will come over to take his seat in Council without waiting indefinitely."

THE Governor of Bombay, Sir R. Temple, met a large gathering of Parsees on Monday, March 4, at Nowsari, and read them a long lecture, in which he exhorted them to diversify their pursuits, and instead of following mercantile avocations merely, as is the fashion amongst them at present, to "go in for" agriculture and for serving in the Native Army. He also advised them to speak the truth.

THE daughter of Babu Keshab Chandar Sen was married to the Maharaja of Kuch Bahar on the 6th March with great rejoicings. The Queen sent her congratulations on the occasion, and the Maharajah Holkar conferred a khilat on him. The Hindu rites were "slightly modified" to suit the Babu's and the bride's religious views. The Duke of Parma was present at the wedding, and left on March 8. There were great doings at Kuch Bahar—illuminations, fireworks, and dramatic performances, and 5,000 poor were fed on the last day of the ceremonies.

ON Major Impey's transfer to the Nepal Residency his appointment at Udaipur will be taken by Major J. Cadell, V.C., who will be replaced at Jodhpur by Major Grant. The latter in his turn will be succeeded in the Persian Gulf as First Assistant by Captain Durand.

It is gazetted that the Viceroy would leave Calcutta at 9.45 on the evening of the 18th March, to visit Rurki, Dehra, and Nahan. He was expected to arrive at Simla at the beginning of this month.

EMIGRATION from Calcutta to the seven colonies of Demerara, Trinidad, Jamaica, Mauritius, Natal, Guadeloupe, and Martinique appears, from the last report on the subject, to have been falling off rather than increasing of late. During the year, however, 2,931 emigrants found their way back to their native country, bringing with them savings to the amount of nearly five lakhs and a quarter, or an average sum per head of Rs. 175. One emigrant from Trinidad, after a residence of twelve years in the island, has brought home Rs. 15,000, 140 sovereigns, and a quantity of jewellery. It is a pity the man's caste, name, and other details are not given in the report. A few more such cases as this might produce an effect on the popular mind. Those that have already been recorded are enough to provoke surprise at the indifference of the Indian peasant to the brilliant prospect which emigration opens out before him. But an examination of the present report will unfold several causes which have hitherto retarded the success of emigration. These are:—First, the unscrupulous zeal of irresponsible agents, who wander over the country entrapping all they can lay their hands on—young men and maidens, old men and children, the maim, the halt, and the blind. Last year eleven per cent. of enlisted coolies were either rejected or released from their engagement by the Protector of Emigrants at Calcutta. The number of people rejected and returned to their villages empty-handed would not tend to encourage future emigrants. Secondly, we have to consider the difficulties which confront the emigrant when he tries to obtain his return passage from certain colonies after the expiry of his term of indenture. Out of 24,291 adult immigrants who had been shipped to Guadeloupe, since 1854, only 1,880 had been sent back. On May 25, 1871, there were 13,540 in the island. None of these coolies have been able to obtain shipping home since then. Considering how fervently a native of India loves his home these statistics point to some strange abuse in Guadeloupe. Thirdly, in the series of stumbling-blocks before the emigrant we may rank the want of some person in authority acquainted with the Indian coolies' ways and habits to look after them in their new homes. This is an evil which it would not be difficult to remedy. The office of Protector of Immigrants in Natal is held by a retired Indian officer. It would not be difficult to find other Indian officers retired from the service who could be entrusted with the charge of looking after these helpless and dependent children of the East in other places.

THE Government of India was told last year that small children were amongst the articles exported from British territory to Nepal, the children being kidnapped in India. The matter was referred to the proper authorities; but according to the official report sent in, no regular system of kidnapping or slave traffic exists, though occasional instances of the abuse may, perhaps, occur.

It appears that the mountainous tract between the provinces of Jammu and Kashmir suffers more from scarcity, just now, than any other parts of the Maharajah's dominions. The distress extends, it is said, from Khibhal in the west to Kishtwar in the east; and as a consequence there has been some delay in the construction of the telegraph line from Jammu to Srinagar. The Pioneer gives this on the faith of the ordinary official reports, reserving to itself "the right to reasonable scepticism about real famine in Kashmir at any time. Instances are not unknown of the people of the Happy Valley starving in the midst of plenty—dying with the garnered harvest all about them, whilst waiting the coming of the myrmidons of the durbar to apportion the crop between the cultivators and their ruler."

THE dashing exploit of Captain Cavagnari at Sapri with the gallant Guides, and their bold leader Captain Wigram Battye, is by no means a solitary instance of such deeds in the career of this distinguished Frontier official. In August last year he directed the attack and surprise of the Gadia Khel hamlet at the mouth of the Kohat Pass. In January last he effected the surprise of Gari Gul with the 14th Sikhs, and in 1869, as far as political management was concerned, he arranged the surprise and capture of Gara Bazoti. The invariable success which has attended the repeated instances of surprise and attack of strongholds in the hill country by Captain Cavagnari shows clearly enough that, when judgment is combined with courage, our troops are quite capable of beating the hill men in their own tactics and on their own ground.

WE learn from the Indian papers that the Secretary of State has sanctioned the revised estimates, amounting to Rs. 1,93,14,793, for the Northern Bengal State Railway, being an average rate of Rs. 80,144 per mile for 241 miles. The main line, north of the Ganges, is metre gauge, while the section, south of the river, is to be constructed on the 5ft 6in. gauge, and will probably have to be worked by the Eastern Bengal Company.

THE following is an extract from a letter, dated from Malta, regarding the last voyage of the troop-ship Serapis between Bombay and England:—"We have experienced a succession of heavy gales between Port Said and this place. These large troop-ships are only allowed to carry just sufficient coal to take them from port to port in fine weather. We got into a heavy gale soon after leaving Port Said, against which we could only steam five knots. We hoped to struggle on as far as Malta, but when within nine miles of the island another tremendous gale overtook us, and we had not enough coal to enable us to reach the port, so we hove to, and I shall never forget the day and night which followed. Solid seas washed right over the vessel, the huge troop-ship rolling helplessly over on her side, and the boats being smashed to pieces like playthings. Accidents, some of which were serious, happened in every part of the ship, and when the storm had somewhat abated, we found ourselves 130 miles from Malta with no coal, provisions running very short, 1,200 souls to care for, and no fresh water even to wash our faces, as there was no coal with which to work the condensers. Two or three vessels passed us, but took no notice of our signals of distress, but at last the Trentham Hall hove in sight, hove down, and spoke with us. The captain came on board, but the recent gales had so reduced his stock of coal that he could not tow the Serapis to Malta, but he went off at once and had help sent to us."

ACCORDING to the Times telegram of yesterday's date from Calcutta public feeling in India has been excited to the utmost degree by the latest war telegrams. All Indian topics, however important locally, have suddenly sunk into abeyance in face of the paramount question of war. The interest in this subject—says the correspondent—"is largely due to the conviction that if war be declared it will, even though fought in Europe, be practically an Indian war, as being undertaken for the sole purpose of protecting India from Russian aggression. For this reason it is suggested that India should be required to supply a very large contingent from her native army. There can, it is said, be no distinction in principle between employing the native troops to protect the safety of the Indian Empire in Europe and using them in India to resist Russian invasion. So long as we retain our present number of English troops in India we could well afford to spare a large portion of our native army to serve as a contingent in any military expedition which England might send against Russia, seeing that there would be little or no difficulty in speedily filling up their places with new levies." We are further told that a suggestion has been made towards remedying the chronic state of unreadiness for war in which the native army exists—namely, that in the event of a war contingent being required only half-battalions of our present line regiments should be draughted off, the gaps being filled up by fresh recruits. When the new recruits became efficient soldiers a second draft might be spared for the war contingent, the same process being repeated as long as was required. In this way the original war contingent might be maintained at its full strength; or, indeed, even considerably increased.

FROM the same source we learn that the only topic which during the last week has been allowed to divert attention for a little from the absorbing question of war is the trial of the Rajah of Puri, in Cuttack, the hereditary guardian of the Temple of Jagannath, for the murder of a gosain, or holy man, who is worshipped by the people as a god. Before life was extinct the man had been tortured in so abominable a manner that the details cannot be published. He had been left to linger for fifteen days in agony. The case has caused a profound sensation in the districts.

THOSE who are acquainted with the writings of the late Colonel Meadows Taylor will hasten to welcome the appearance of a posthumous novel from the pen which so gracefully described the fortunes of "Tara" and "Seeta." Nor are they likely, we think, to be disappointed with the latest sample of their old favourite's literary and imaginative power. "A Noble Queen," as now published by Messrs. Kegan Paul and Co., is one more nugget from the mine whence Meadows Taylor drew those historical romances which have delighted many a reader, however ignorant of Indian history. It is the last, and we might even say the best, of a series of works of fiction which have done for India what Scott's romances did for Great Britain and several other European countries. No other writer that we can think of comes so near the author of "Kenilworth" in all the main excellences of the Waverley Novels. Each possesses the same kind of artistic power, the same clear eye for beauty, moral and physical, the same easy grace of expression, the same gift of realising the life of other countries and of past times. Both, too, are good story-tellers, who know how to develop character by means of adventures, without any sacrifice of dramatic truth or artistic harmony. They have the same sort of classic roundness and symmetry which distinguishes Virgil, Raphael, and Mozart in their respective lines. The noble Queen of the present story is the famous and ill-fated Chand, Sultana of Bijapur, who did greatly and died nobly in the days of Akbar and our own Elizabeth. Although she gives its title to the book, its main interest centres in the real heroine, Zora, and her destined lover, Abbas Khan, who are brought together in the first chapter by an incident which forms the keystone of an interesting and well-managed plot. There is just enough mystery about Zora and her blind old grandfather to keep our curiosity gently alive, but the author is too good an artist to weary us with the sort of Chinese puzzles so dear to writers of a lower stamp. There is plenty of pathos mingled with humour in the account of the grandfather's wanderings with his darling Zora, until he finds true friends and an honoured welcome in Queen Chand's Court, at Bijapur. Zora herself makes a charming addition to the portrait-gallery which holds Tara and Seeta. Abbas Khan's friend and follower, Runga Naik, is drawn with manifest truth from the Beydurs of the Dakhan, among whom Taylor spent so many years of his life. Of Queen Chand herself, in her glory and her suffering, we have some memorable glimpses; and Donna Maria and her saintly brother are skilfully contrasted with the villains of the story, white and black. The scenes in which one of these, Don Diego, figures, are wrought out with consummate power; and the incidents of the siege and defence of Ahmadnagar, crowned by the good Queen's murder and the heroine's narrow escape from a yet worse fate, lend much of tragic grandeur and completeness to the close of a well told, picturesque, and thoroughly interesting tale.

LORD DERBY'S retirement from the Ministry was an event which at the first hearing must have struck most of his countrymen with dismay. So long as he held the keys of the Foreign Office there was little fear of our being rashly committed to a needless war on behalf of an obsolete tradition, and an exploded craze. With his retirement our hopes of a peaceful issue to the long-pending differences with Russia seemed to vanish. There is some balm in Gilead still, however, if it be true that Lord Derby's place has been filled up by the Marquis of Salisbury. The latter's presence at the Foreign Office will no doubt be a loss to India; but unless his lordship's sentiments on the Eastern Question have entirely changed in the last few months the loss to India will at least be England's gain. We may still look to him to save us, if he can, from embarking in a costly, foolish, and apparently unprovoked war. It is reported that his successor at the India Office will be Mr. Gathorne Hardy, now Minister for war; but this for the present is a mere rumour. If Sir S. Northcote could be spared from the Treasury, he would go far to compensate the India Office for the loss of Lord Salisbury. Why not try Lord George Hamilton?

WE are glad to inform our readers that the India Office has subscribed for fifty copies of Mr. Low's admirable "History of the Indian Navy," a notice of which lately appeared in these columns.

Odds and Ends.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BENGAL is on tour, visiting Cuttack, False Point, Pooree, Chaudbally, and Chittagong.

THE Budget for Irrigation Works in the Madras Presidency for the year 1878-79 is calculated at twenty-six lakhs and twenty thousand rupees.

A SUCCESSFUL attempt has, says the Englishman, been made to send pheasants in ice from Masuri to Calcutta. They would travel equally well if carefully packed in charcoal.

THE salaries of the two appointments of Collector of Ganjam and Vizagapatam have, under orders from the Government of India, been reduced, from the 1st of January last, from Rs. 2,850 to Rs. 2,500 a month.

THE most liberal contributors to the Madras Famine relief to its population has been South Australia, the subscriptions from which country are equal to one shilling per head of the entire population.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE has sanctioned the revised estimates for the Northern Bengal State Railway.

IT is probable that the Hon. T. C. Hope, C.S.I., will shortly go to England on privilege leave.

MR. C. A. ELLIOTT, C.S., will probably be appointed Secy. to the Famine Commission.

CERTAIN changes impending in the organisation of the police in Bengal are calculated to effect a saving of about two lakhs of rupees per annum, without, it is promised, impairing its efficiency.

MR. D. N. TURNBULL goes as District Superintendent of Police in the Gujrat District.

THERE is a report at Puna that some officers are to be sent to the Cape for special duty.

THE marriage of the Maharaja of Maisur is to be celebrated in May next, and there will be great festivities at Maisur on the occasion.

THE CHINA OPIUM TRADE.

The Consular Reports on the China opium trade show that, while in some districts there has been a marked diminution in the quantity of Indian opium imported, there has, taking all the districts together, been a considerable increase in the total importations of the latter drug during the last few years, simultaneously with a much larger increase in the consumption of native grown opium. Between 1866 and 1870 the average yearly importation was 58,322 piculs, while between 1870 and 1875 it was 64,110 piculs, and in the last named year it was 66,461. It is thus evident that there is as yet no tendency of native grown opium to displace the Indian drug, while an enormous increase is going on in the total quantity of opium of all kinds consumed by the Chinese. The native drug operates in two ways, it is used unmixed by the poorer classes of the population, and it is used to dilute and thus cheapen Indian opium. In the former capacity it enters into competition with the produce of this country in a very partial degree only—for the majority of those who consume it are people who could not afford to use Indian opium. Its use as a diluent, on the other hand, is quite compatible with, and may be the indirect cause of an increased consumption of, the Indian drug. At the same time, it is impossible to avoid seeing that the future of Indian opium in China is a precarious one. At present the Indian drug is not only more fashionable, but intrinsically better than the native grown opium. But the native grown opium is improving fast, and though fashion would continue to secure the preference of the well-to-do for the Indian drug long after the last vestige of its former superiority has disappeared, yet a preference based merely on fashion and not on merit would not last for ever. Unless, then, China is for some reason incapable of growing as good opium as India, the imported will, in all probability, have some day to compete with the indigenous article, and the monopoly will cease to be worth maintaining. The Imperial edicts against the local cultivation continue, and probably always will continue, to be a farce. Throughout large tracts it is considered by the farmers the most important item in the annual harvest, and it yields sufficient profit to pay well for bribes to the Mandarins to secure their connivance. A Chinese customs official, however, suggests that if a larger proportion of the total taxation that falls upon Bengal opium from its manufacture to its consumption fell to the share of the country importing it, the Chinese Government might possibly be induced, in the interest of the most reliable portion of its revenue—that derived from the foreign maritime customs—to take some pains to cause its own prohibition of poppy cultivation in China to be better regarded. He says:—"It is the high price at which Indian opium is sold in China which has so greatly stimulated the cultivation among the Chinese. . . . The imposition of a heavy import duty appears to be the only measure likely to induce China to rigidly prohibit the growth of opium, by no means an easy or costless task in this vast empire. But if the revenue depended on it, rigorous and effective measures would doubtless be adopted. This also appears to be the only solution of the question as to how India shall preserve the revenue and yet see the growth of opium prohibited in China."—Calcutta Englishman.

THE PLUNDER OF THE "ROSA MARY" IN THE RED SEA.—In our issue of February 14 we gave an interesting account of the accident in the Red Sea to the s.s. Rosa Mary, bound to Bombay, and the way in which a body of Arab wreckers made free with the ship's stores, deck fixings, and cargo. It appears from a letter received from Messrs. Beyts and Co., of Jeddah, agents to the Bombay Underwriters' Association at that port, that a number of Arab craft have arrived there with iron from the vessel, and that the British Consul has detained the iron pending its being claimed by the owners. Some of this iron has the marks of the Dhond and Munmar State Railway on it. The crews of these Arab vessels could not be induced by the captain to lend any assistance in getting the steamer off the ground. We trust the opportunity now presented will not be lost, of fully informing these men that when they render assistance to vessels in distress in the Red Sea they will be handsomely remunerated, and that severe measures will be adopted to put down in the future, as far as possible, any such unjustifiable acts of pillage and robbery as were committed by these Arabs on board the Rosa Mary.—Times of India.

IS IT TRUE?—The last English mail for Darjeeling was delayed beyond the usual period in transit. The local paper states that one of the causes of the detention was owing to H.E. Sir Frederick Haines stopping the mail en route to get his own letters. H.E. left Darjeeling at about 5.30 a.m. on Feb. 19, and took the Postmaster of Darjeeling with him, in order that he might open the letter bags in transit, and get H.E.'s letters out of them. The result was that the up-mails did not reach Darjeeling until four p.m. on the day they were due.

MR. AITCHISON has accepted the Chief Commissionership of British Burma. His successor in the Chief Commissionership of Maisur is Mr. J. D. Gordon.

AN exhibition of native-grown agricultural produce and native manufactures is to be held at Puna in May next, for the encouragement of the agriculture and manufactures of India.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, April 1, 1878.

IS THIS "ZULM?"

At the end of last year a "happy thought" occurred to the members of a literary society in India, which, in all probability, it was imagined would commend itself to the favourable notice of the barā sahib log. The thought in question was that an Educational Congress should be held, in which officials of the Education Department, other Europeans of culture, head masters of schools, missionaries, and Indian gentlemen interested in the question, should meet to discuss, with a view to practical adoption, the means best fitted to advance the education of the people. The Society which gave birth to this suggestion is the Anjuman-i-Panjab, well known for the important services it has already rendered to the cause of education; and well known, also, for the high standing, cultivation, loyalty, and enlightened views of its members. When such a society starts such an idea we should naturally have anticipated the cordial support and assistance of the Government; for it obviously is a most desirable thing that the education of the people should pass as rapidly as possible into the hands of natives, and become independent of State control. The Society seems to have shared in this anticipation of support, and proceeded to vote nearly every officer of standing in the Education Department to preside over, or take a prominent part in the different sections of the forthcoming Congress. All things were progressing, to all appearance, favourably, addresses were being prepared, papers for reading were forwarded, and the first social Congress was about to be held in India under auspicious circumstances. Alas, for the transitory character of mundane things! The eye of official disfavour, for some inscrutable reason, fell upon the whole enterprise. The Lieutenant-Governor circulated a letter among the officials of Government, in which it was stated that officers of the Education Department "cannot, with any propriety, be permitted to discuss publicly, and without the distinct permission of the head of their department," questions touching on the future education of India." This remarkable document accompanies this arbitrary and unwise decision with offensive comments upon the natives of India, informing us that but few of them "can regard the educational policy of the Government with any intelligent interest or sympathy," and, with the exception of these few, "only English officials" remain "whose cultivation and intelligence" fit them for the discussion of such topics. A document more improper than the one referred to has seldom been penned, and it can have no other effect than to arouse just indignation in the breasts of those commented on. It was the enlightened liberality of natives of the Panjab which created the Panjab University, and the Anjuman has repeatedly won the commendation of Government itself for the important aid it has given to the cause of popular education. Not only are the acts of the native gentry thus rudely ignored; but intelligence and capacity is denied to all members of the Bar, of the European press, the higher staff of the railways, head-masters of grant-in-aid schools, European bankers, merchants, &c., and the whole body of missionaries. The discussion of educational questions by such men, it is said, "will be barren of any good results;" and as regards "English officials," they are curtly told that their "criticisms upon the manner in which the work of a Government Department is conducted are neither desired nor will be accepted by the Government."

The upshot of this extraordinary document has been that the projected Educational Congress has been virtually suppressed; and one of the most promising and inoffensive efforts to give effect to the Educational Despatch of 1854 of Sir Charles Wood has been brought to nought. The natives may truly exclaim "The ways of the Feringhees are wonderful!" and it may be seriously asked whether such arbitrary acts are not calculated to obstruct the cause of education, and to sow dissension among the official and non-official classes. Is there, finally, any country in the world which would forbid its subjects to attempt to relieve its Government of the burden of providing for educational wants; and which would insult and repel any who even offered to assist in the work? Is it "Zulm," or is it madness?

THE BENGAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

The Indian Daily News, noticing the report of the Chamber of Commerce for the half-year ending Oct. 31 last, remarks:—It deals with a great variety of subjects of more or less importance to trade. Perhaps, having regard to all its issues, the most important subject handled in the report is the possibility of improving the condition of wheat shipped from this country to England. Country produce has now fairly got hold of the home markets. Its quality is generally good, the best sorts ranking next to Australian—the finest imported—and its extreme dryness specially fits it for mixing with English wheat, which it serves to relieve of the superabundant moisture consequent on wet harvests. Owing, however, to the two great faults of mixture with dirt and with inferior grain its selling price in the United Kingdom is still not what it ought to be. Looking to the habits of the native agriculturist, we believe it is useless to expect any improvement in these respects from him. Of cleanliness as an element affecting the market value of his crops he has generally not the slightest conception; and as the presence of barley or pulse in wheat is only a natural outcome of the immemorial practice of sowing all three in the same field, he would undoubtedly consider complaints on that score as the very height of unreason. Zeal of district officers may, as the Governor-General has suggested, "advise and instruct" the ryot here to prepare his corn for the European market, but it will be long, we fear, before any change for the better results from such well-meant persuasions. The only remedy capable of affecting an early and substantial improvement is, one which it rests with merchants themselves to apply. The erection of cleaning and sorting machines at ports of shipment seems to us the most hopeful means of counteracting the carelessness of the native grower, and the surest expedient for strengthening the trade against foreign competition. The necessary apparatus is not expensive. A Mark-lane firm offers machines capable of turning out from eight to ten quarters of clean grain an hour for ten pounds, English price, and other sizes in proportion. The working cost would be low, but little skilled labour being required. There is thus a fair prospect that any firm enterprising enough to take up wheat-cleaning, as a business, would benefit its own pockets, as well as the trade of the port, and we trust yet to see the experiment successfully tried in Calcutta.

THE FUTURE MAIL CONTRACT.

The Times of India, after reviewing the history of mail contracts with the P. and O. Company, asks:—How is the next contract to be obtained?—by tender or otherwise? We say, by tender. There are a number of excellent lines of steamers now running regularly between England and India; and though we should be sorry to see the old P. and O. Company displaced, nevertheless sentimental considerations must give way to the duty of securing for India the best mail service that can be procured at the lowest rates. The length of term for which the contract ought to be given is a question upon which a good deal of difference of opinion exists. Many people, recollecting the dissatisfaction felt with the rate of speed achieved by the P. and O. steamers, and the difficulty of being able to demand faster rates for the long period of ten years, the term of the contract, are of opinion that no contract should be issued for a longer term than five years. A short contract would certainly have this advantage, that if the contractor proved unsatisfactory, no unreasonable time would have to elapse before he could be removed; but on the other hand, there is considerable force in the objections made on this subject by the committee of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce. Being of opinion that it is impossible to provide for high rate of speed unless the contract is for a longer term, more particularly if the vessels are not to be cargo vessels, and that contractors, at the end of five years, would, if the contract were annulled, find themselves burdened with a class of vessels for which they had no further use, they propose that, "Duration of contract should similarly be made matter of tender, as contractors would doubtless accept a long contract on more favourable terms to the public than a short one." However, there are large companies running lines of steamers in several parts of the world, who, having always to keep up a supply of first-class ships, would not find themselves very much inconvenienced even if the loss of the mail contract compelled them to withdraw a portion of their fleet from the Arabian Sea and the Mediterranean—a contingency by no means probable, because shrewd companies are generally well aware that good fast steamers can be appreciated by passengers as well as by merchants, whether they carry the mails on board or not. We think, therefore, that there ought to be no difficulty whatever in the Indian public securing excellent terms in a five years' contract, and we prefer the shorter time because it is a better instrument than a long term for securing constant efficiency in the mail service. We have endeavoured to work out for ourselves a calculation of the shortest time required for carrying mails from London to Bombay, and we cannot see that the journey could be done in any case under 16½ days. The following statement will show how we have arrived at this conclusion:—

OVERLAND JOURNEY FROM LONDON TO BOMBAY.

Mails leave London every Friday at 8 P.M.
 Time from London to Paris ... .. 10½ hours.
 Arrival at Paris, Saturday 6-30 A.M.
 Distance from Paris to Brindisi, according to Bradshaw, 1,266 miles.
 At an average speed of 35 miles an hour this distance could be traversed in 36½ hours. Allowing 3½ hours for stoppages, the time required from Paris to Brindisi would be 40 hours.
 Arrival at Brindisi, Sunday, at 10-30 P.M.
 Start from Brindisi at Sunday midnight.
 At an average speed of 13 knots the distance, 820 miles, from Brindisi to Alexandria would occupy 63½ hours.
 Arrival at Alexandria, Wednesday, 3 P.M.
 Time through Egypt ... .. 12 hours.
 Leave Suez, Thursday, 3 A.M.
 Distance from Suez to Bombay, 2,972 miles.
 This at a net average speed of 11 knots an hour would give ... .. 271 hours, or 11 days and 7 hours as the time required for the voyage.
 Counting this time from Thursday, 3 A.M., we get Monday, 10 A.M., as the hour when the mails could be landed in Bombay.

MR. EDEN ON THE LICENSE BILL.

The Calcutta Englishman, having carefully considered the speeches made by Mr. Eden and Babu Kristodas Pal at the closing debate on the License Bill, remarks:—They take up positions in many respects diametrically at variance; and it seems to us that his Honour had the worst of the argument. Babu Kristodas Pal advanced as his main objection to the Bill that the funds raised under it were to be applied to the construction of public works; that, in fact, the new tax was to be an addition to the Public Works cess imposed last year; that, indeed, this tax, though originally intended for famine purposes, would now become nothing but an addition to the general revenues. Mr. Eden's reply was that means were necessary to enable Government to carry on the large system of railway and irrigation works necessary to prevent famines in future, and to relieve future famines when they occurred; that it must be evident to all that irrigation works were necessary in dry countries, and that railways were the only means of preventing a calamity when the crops of any considerable area failed. The money now to be raised would go to the purpose of making railways and other public works, which would otherwise have to be made from money raised by loans. He seemed to say that money would still be borrowed, but to a less extent than before, and that the sum in future to be borrowed for public works, together with money borrowed to meet the cost of actual famines hereafter occurring, would not exceed the borrowings which have hitherto been made under the head of "Extraordinary Public Works." He said that the one and a half millions per annum which the Government of India was now raising from Bengal and other provinces as a famine tax would render unnecessary annual borrowing to that amount, and thus Government would find itself able to meet the fifteen millions, which the relief of actual famine was estimated to cost in every ten years, without exceeding the present rate of its non-famine borrowings. Mr. Eden could not find it possible to suppose that Babu Kristodas Pal would really wish the money raised to be locked up in a strong-box and put aside labelled "Famine." It seems to us that the member whose objections his Honour thus criticised did not urge anything so foolish as keeping the money raised in a strong-box. What he does seem to us to advocate is that the proceeds of this tax should be applied as a famine fund for the payment of loans already incurred to meet the actual relief of famine. Thus, supposing it takes five years to pay off the loans necessitated by the recent famine, the tax now imposed would run for that period. Supposing no famine to occur in the interim, it might be desirable to continue it for an additional similar period, the fund so raised being utilised in paying off debt, and so furnishing Government with a fund of several millions ready to its hand for meeting the expenses of any future famine. This is the position in which we should like to see the Government placed. We should like this famine tax to continue so long, and only so long, as may be necessary to meet the outlay incurred in relieving the recent famine, and to place in the hands of Government a considerable sum of several millions for the relief of any future famines. By being again called into existence whenever any serious famine occurs, it would be the part of the famine tax to maintain Government in that position.

STATION TALK.

LAHOR, Feb. 24.—It was not necessary to be a skilful billiard player, or, indeed, to have the slightest knowledge of the game, in order to enjoy the entertainment offered on Wednesday evening by his Highness the Nawab of Bahawalpore to Lahor society. It is true that Mr. Roberts has seldom been seen in better form, and has seldom played with more ease and finish; but obviously that was a part of the entertainment which only a part of the company could understand. Some ladies play billiards as some play the violin or as some others shoot, but probably the accompaniment of tobacco keeps the game more sacred to men than those other pursuits in which the sex shows an inclination to rival us. The Nawab, however, provided something more than the board of green cloth, in the shape of a capital supper, to which a large company sat down after play was over; and after supper came dancing, which lasted till morning. There could not well be a more compendious and comprehensive entertainment, and certainly it would be hard to provide one to give more complete satisfaction. To see a great player play a game of which he is passionately fond, to sup well, and drink really good wine, is a combination which many a portly person considers as near a shot at the top pocket of perfect bliss as he is likely to make off these earthly cushions; while to meet pleasant people, to flirt a little, to sup a little more, and to dance a great deal, suffices for the aspirations of a large number of very charming people. So on the whole I don't hesitate to say that Lahor and Meera Meer very cordially appreciated the hospitality of H.H. the Nawab, and the excellence of the arrangements made by Mr. Crampton Doran, his tutor.—That an enterprising baboo has opened a shop for the sale of Chinese and Japanese porcelain, lacquered ware, and bric-a-brac is not of itself a very momentous event; and that all the drawing-rooms of Lahor contain evidences of the successful nature of the venture is not in itself surprising. For the good baboo is a pushing man, and loses no opportunity of selling his goods. For instance, having been patronised by the chaplain and the greater part of the congregation of St. James's Church, it occurred to him that it would be a delicate attention to show his latest consignments to his friends. So a few Sunday mornings since, when the last solemn notes of the organ were pealing, and parson and people emerged from Church in a hushed and pious mood of mind, they were confronted by an elegant assortment of flower-pots, tea-sets, trays, cabinets, boxes, &c., all neatly laid out in front of the church door, the baboo and his assistants gracefully bowing and smiling with the gratified assurance of people who have done at once a polite and profitable thing. Nor was it easy to make them understand that there was a faint shade of impropriety in their selection of the door of the tabernacle as a show-room and shop. But while nobody wonders at a Bengali baboo coming all the way from Calcutta to sell articles brought all the way from China and Japan, it never seems to occur to any one that an equally profitable business could be done in the productions of this country. It is easy to buy a Japanese tray; but if you want a Hoshiarpore inlaid pen-box, a Sealkote damascened casket, a Mooltan flower-vase, a Kashmir chased silver-gilt goblet, a Saharunpore carved wood photograph-frame, a Moradabad lacquered brass hookah-bowl, or a Belaspore inlaid leather cheroot-case, you must wait till perchance some day a packman may bring one to your door. In many respects these things are superior to Chinese work; but it seems to be worth no one's while to sell them in any regular way. Tourists, especially those who, like Mr. De Scala, the Director of the Oriental Museum at Vienna, are commissioned to purchase Indian things, are very much put out by the exceeding difficulty of getting any but the commonest articles. Permanent residents in the country, by dint of much patience and keeping their eyes open, sometimes pick up objects worth having; but old work grows scarcer year by year, and a good collection of the new is made with great difficulty. The chefs d'œuvre of mediæval art in Europe were produced, it is true, on the same principles; but it is very irritating when you want a poor half-dozen of silver necklaces of different designs to have first to hunt the workman, then to advance him money to buy material, and then to wait week after week on his shuffling pleasure. Much Indian work is priced decidedly above its value, either on æsthetic or intrinsic grounds. And several branches have deteriorated from no assignable cause but the idleness or greed of the producer, and the carelessness of the purchaser. Kashmir work generally has greatly failed of late in quality; the Sealkote damascening has risen considerably in price, while the inlay has grown shallower and shallower, till now it is frequently little more than a gilded line on the surface of the steel, instead of an embedded thread. The use of agua fortis and the wax etching ground, by which a modern Spanish artist has revived the art in Europe, rivalling the finest old work of Toledo, I found by experiment to be of little service to the Sealkote koftgar, whose thin thread of gilt wire does not fill the rapidly etched channels. European tradesmen take up these things from time to time, but in sending orders they usually make the proviso that the forms shall be European. Perhaps they know the market, and are wise in their generation; for the public that can buy "machine-made jewellery" with its stupid eyes wide open cannot be expected to care for anything really good. It is also, perhaps, too sanguine to hope that there can ever be any large consumption in Europe of Indian goods. I hear with regret that a very promising consignment of Kashmir fabrics that might have been expected to open a trade, has failed; and the Umritsur shawl merchants this season have to deplore heavy losses on their last consignments. Carpets pay, and pay handsomely; but it is essential that they should be dark and rich in colour, and strictly Oriental in design. I hear an Umritsur firm is taking to this branch, and it is really high time that the monopoly which the jails have so long enjoyed should be wrested from them.

Miscellaneous.

FATAL BOAT ACCIDENT.—On Feb. 22 about twenty persons (natives) were drowned by the capsizing of the ferry boat on the Brahmaputra at Gowhaty.

THE HENRY-MARTINI RIFLES for the Darjeeling Volunteer Rifles have arrived. They will probably not be issued to the corps before the end of the financial year, 31st March.—Pioneer Mail.

THE IRRAWADDY FLOTILLA.—Two steamers have been constructed on the Irrawaddy Flotilla premises at Dallah, which are intended for the Assam line. One of them has already arrived in Calcutta.

THE ANDAMAN AND NICOBAR ISLANDS.—It has recently been ruled that the Chief Commissionership of the Andaman and Nicobar Islands is not to be considered a local Government, for the purposes of the Civil Pension, Leave, and the Acting Allowance Code.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.—The ship Lord Strathnairn, from Calcutta to London, was spoken on Dec. 13 in lat. 35° 6' S., and long. 29° 10' E., when the captain reported "having experienced very heavy weather, which necessitated a portion of the cargo to be jettisoned, being then on her beam ends."

CASHMERE.—By recent accounts received from Cashmere it appears that there is very serious scarcity in the whole of the mountainous tract between the provinces of Jummo and Cashmere, extending from Chihbal on the East to Kishtwar and Dhadewar on the West. The construction of the telegraph line between Jummo and Srinagar has, we understand, been delayed, in consequence of the difficulty of procuring supplies.

KABUL.—The city has this year been visited with exceptionally heavy falls of snow. In many places the streets were impassable, and the houses blocked up to such an extent that the inhabitants could only enter and leave them through the roof. Considerable loss of property in cattle and goods has occurred. Great distress is also reported to prevail in the districts of Hazara and Ghuznee, owing to the severity of the winter.

THE FRENCH POSSESSIONS IN INDIA.—Great changes are likely to be made soon in the government of the French possessions in India. It is expected that the Governor, M. Trillard, will be recalled, and rumour at Pondichery has it that he has already asked for permission to retire in anticipation of his recall. The Commissaire of Marine, M. De Possel Deydier, has been transferred to Cochin China, on account of his opposition to the Republican candidate at the late election.

ST. ANDREW'S KIRK.—The Rev. G. G. Gillan arrived in Calcutta on Tuesday (Feb. 25), from Rawul Pindee, and assumed charge of the senior chaplaincy of the Church of Scotland. From the eulogium passed by the Rev. M. Thompson in his farewell sermon, preached last Sunday morning, as well as his allusion to him in his farewell address to the congregation on Tuesday, we are assured that Mr. Gillan will succeed in his difficult charge to which he has been called, as well as he has done in every field of labour in which he has worked.—Indian Daily News, March 1.

MILITARY BANQUET.—The officers of the 1st-5th Fusiliers were entertained at a dinner given by the North-West Provinces Club at Allahabad, on Monday evening, Feb. 25, a fitting return thus being made to the profuse hospitality which the regiment have shown during their three years' stay in the station. Mr. Justice Turner was chairman, and, on either hand, were Colonel Roberts and Mr. Justice Spankie. After dinner the toast of "the Queen" was drunk, and then, with musical honours—"the Fifth" were toasted, General Ewart pronouncing the regiment "perfection," so far as such a state can be attained in the British army.

THE MILITARY STATION OF SUBATHOO.—There is some expectation among the troops there that Subathoo will be abandoned as a military station on account of its unhealthiness. The headquarters of the 51st, now on the march from Nowshera, look forward to being sent to Jutogh. These anticipations, however, have run on a little in advance of the facts. There is no idea of abandoning Subathoo altogether, though in future, if accommodation can be found elsewhere, part of any regiment at Subathoo will be removed. Search is being made near Jutogh for a site suitable to the accommodation of a wing of a regiment, but the whole project is in an undeveloped stage.—Indian Daily News.

FATAL SHOOTING ACCIDENT.—With reference to Dr. Whitwell's statement that he did not accidentally shoot a boatman on February 16th, the Ghazipore correspondent of the Pioneer (Allahabad) states that what really occurred was, that on the 17th of February a party, consisting of Dr. Whitwell and Mr. George Williamson, his assistant, went out shooting on the river, and it was reported to the judicial authorities that a boatman met his death by the accidental discharge of Mr. Williamson's gun, not Dr. Whitwell's. The relatives of the deceased boatman have lodged a complaint in the court of Mr. Wheeler, the assistant Magistrate, who has taken the evidence of several witnesses in the case. The deceased's name is said to be Dokri, and his body has not yet been recovered.

MODEL FARMS.—The Government of India is said to have approved of the transfer to Provincial services of all the charges on account of the model farms in the North-Western Provinces, and to have sanctioned an additional grant of Rs. 9,000 per annum from the Imperial revenues, with effect from the beginning of 1877-78, and to have also confirmed the sanction accorded by the local Government to the appointment of Mr. Nusworth, retrospectively, from the 22nd December, 1876, as superintendent of the model farm at Cawpore on a salary of Rs. 175 a month.—Indian Daily News.

MOVEMENTS OF HIGH OFFICIALS.—His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, accompanied by Mr. Horace Cockerell and his personal staff, embarked on board the s.s. Enterprise on Tuesday, Feb. 26, and proceeded to False Point, where he arrived on Wednesday. Cuttack, Pooree, and Chandbally will also be visited, and on March 8th his Honour will re-embark for Chittagong, returning to Calcutta on the 14th.—H.E. the Commander in Chief left the presidency on his Northward tour on Friday, March 1.—Sir Edward Bayley's retirement from the Viceroy's Council has resulted in the following appointments being made:—The Hon. Rivers Thompson, at present Chief Commissioner, British Burma, has been appointed to succeed Sir Edward Bayley. The Hon. C. U. Aitchison, who was lately nominated to the Chief Commissionership of Mysor, has now been appointed Chief Commissioner of British Burma.

GENERAL FAMILY PENSION FUND.—The eighth annual general meeting was held at the Office of the Fund, No. 1, Grant's-lane, Calcutta, at four p.m. on Feb. 12, the Rev. A. Williams in the chair. It was proposed by Mr. G. A. Kraal, seconded by Mr. C. G. Smythe, and carried unanimously:—"That the eighth annual report (for 1877), which has been circulated among the subscribers, be adopted and published, with the accounts which have been certified by the auditors to be correct." The secretaries reported that three new subscribers had been admitted during February, and that the accumulations in the hands of Government on Feb. 1, 1878, amounted to Rs. 3,50,526-8, exclusive of interest for ten months, about Rs. 10,000, and moneys not yet accounted for by Government. They also called attention to the fact that the percentage of expenditure on income during the past year had been only six, whereas Mr. Actuary Brown, in his report, had estimated the future expenditure at six and a-half per cent., which was the average of the Uncovenanted Fund in the thirty-one years from 1838 to 1869. Captain J. G. Bryning was re-elected a director, and Mr. E.

Reilly was elected in the place of Mr. H. Andrews. It was resolved that a fee of Rs. 150 be paid to each auditor for the current year's audit. Messrs. R. D. Newing and F. F. Wyman were unanimously re-elected as auditors. In regard to the case of Mr. Collett it was resolved that the matter be referred by the directors to the general body of subscribers, in accordance with Rule 45, and that Mr. Collett be invited to send in his statement of the case to accompany such reference.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND OUDH.—Under the orders of Government, the Pathan who murdered at Quetta the kahar of the 32nd Pioneers was hanged by sweepers on the 16th ultimo, on the spot where he committed the crime. The Lucknow paper states that on Sunday evening last week a fire broke out in the Martinière College village, and in about forty-five minutes 157 houses (huts) were burnt. Four unfortunate people—two women and two children—perished in the flames, although from all we can gather every effort was made by Mr. Stobart and the College staff to save life, and preserve the huts and property of the villagers from total destruction. The Lahor paper hears from Mooltan that the roof of the anteroom of the European infantry mess-house has been accidentally burnt. The fire was spreading rapidly, and but for the promptitude with which the fire-engine was brought from the European infantry lines and worked the entire house might have been consumed. Very fortunately, too, it was raining at the time, and the atmosphere was remarkably calm, so that there was no breeze to spread the flames, which were rapidly quenched.

A MOHAMMEDAN CONVERSAZIONE.—The fourteenth annual Conversation of the Society was held on Tuesday night, 26th February, in the Town Hall. Among the more noteworthy of the articles sent in for exhibition were the tribute Cashmere shawls from the Government Toshakhanna, the specimens of silver work of Messrs. Hamilton and Co., an elaborate chiming clock belonging to Messrs. Cooke and Kelvey, a pretty little type-writer sent by Messrs. Newman and Co., and "vitrimani," a new substitute for stained glass. Under the head of "electricity" there was a short telegraph line for the astonishment of country cousins, which was worked—rather rapidly, we must confess for all the complaints lately afloat to the contrary—by operators from the Government Telegraph Department. Then, too, the Rev. Father Lafont had on view some ingenious electric machines; and Messrs. Jessop and Co. furnished an electric pen; but for some reason, neither of the two telephones mentioned in the programme was to be seen. Dr. Kanye Lal Dey did some wonderful things with his batteries and his retorts, his acids and his bits of metal: and had he lived a century or two ago we have no doubt he would have found it hard to disprove all connection with the supernatural powers. H.E. arrived at half-past nine, and inspected all the tables, and was especially interested in the Rev. Father Lafont's instruments and Dr. Kanye Lal Dey's experiments. During the evening a company of native amateurs and the Viceroy's band alternately performed several native and European airs.

ABOLITION OF THE INVALID PENSION ESTABLISHMENT.—The invalid Pension Establishment is extinct. It was, while it lasted, a standing blot upon the good name of the otherwise honourable late Court of Directors, inasmuch as it proclaimed to the world that they were capable of breach of faith towards their servants, in making new rules and regulations, with retrospective effect, injuriously affecting their pockets. The only two names upon the list for nearly twenty years were those of old captains who entered the service in 1843 and 1844 respectively, when the provision for loss of health was liberal and ample, but who, serving too long, were shelved on the wretched pittance of Rs. 130 a month instead of Rs. 340-6, which they should have drawn had they been lucky enough to fall sick only two or three years sooner than they did. One of these officers died a few years ago, the other has just retired on the half-pay of his rank. He would have retired on full pay with a step of honorary rank if he had invalidated a year earlier, not perhaps according to the strict letter of the law, but according to the custom of the service, for Government saved money by allowing invalided officers to retire on full pay, although they had not served long enough with their regiments to entitle them to do so. About sixteen or eighteen years ago several captains,—Captains Samler and Cornish for instance—on the invalid establishment, who had none of them put in the qualifying regimental service, retired on full pay, £191 a year, got the extra bonus of £50 a year also, and with the rank of major to put on their visiting cards. The change of rules, however, though inflicting injury upon two individuals, has had a wonderfully beneficial effect upon the health of the officers of the Bengal army, for not one has invalidated for twenty years.—Englishman's Overland Mail.

STATION TALK.

MADURA, Feb. 27.—I wish I could, with my pen, do justice to the beautiful scenery of Madura, with its dark and noble groves of cocoanut palms, its miniature lakes, its noble temple, a monument of Tamil patience, ingenuity and skill; to Trimul Naik's palace, to the European portion of the town; and last, but not least, to the beauty of the Tamil ladies. To put before you its gorgeous and changing beauties would require a man with more than ordinary aptitude for writing. We left the dak bungalow with the intention to do the place thoroughly, and first went to the koril or temple. A short flight of steps, and a small covered passage, brought us into a square, in the centre of which was a fine tank, surrounded by galleries, the sides of which had their walls frescoed with scenes taken from the Hindoo mythology. The paintings were gaudy, and, as usual with native pictures, there was not much attention paid to perspective; but one of the sides of the square, which seemed to be the general thoroughfare, was perfectly different from the rest, being dark and gloomy—on each side were huge stone figures, while two of more than ordinary height guarded the entrance to the "holy of holies." Near to this were parrots and cockatoos, the gift of some wealthy devotees. The hum of human voices, the noise of the workmen, who were repairing the flooring of one of the stone passages, the splash of water, and the screechings of the parrots, added greatly to the impressiveness of the scene. Fancy standing and looking at these uncouth figures, so many thousands of years old, to which many persons bowed down and prayed in the self-same manner, and in the same dress, as they wore when the inhabitants of England were painted like savages! We could have moralised there for ever, but our worthy Brahmin tout disturbed all such reveries by a gentle tug at my coat, and asked us to penetrate further into the mysteries of this grand worshipping place. After wandering through innumerable passages lined on each side by stone and wooden statues, some of which were of great height, we were brought into a quadrangle grander and more solemn than the preceding one. Then, as we proceeded, could be heard the clang of cymbals, the tinkling of bells, and a subdued murmur, the same as when the sea beats up against our chalky cliffs in the Far West. This noise proceeded from a long line of worshippers; and, to our further astonishment, we saw a huge elephant noiselessly making his way from some remote corner, the driver directing him to a pair of large black folding doors, where he made the animal bend on his fore-legs to pay obeisance to the god within. Then, after performing his homage, the driver, for our especial amusement, and in the hopes of obtaining small coin, made the elephant show us some of his tricks, such as walking on his knees, and so on. Having seen all that we were permitted to look at within the temple, our guide asked us to ascend the highest of the sixteen towers of this immense kovil. We began our ascent; and the gods being propitious, arrived at the top in safety. Through the extreme goodness of my companions, I managed to reach the highest point; the steps only go a certain distance, and then the ascent is far from easy or safe to a man who is at all giddy or nervous. But our exertions were amply repaid. We were about 200 feet above the ground level; away down at our feet were the city and temple of Madura spread out like a map; above was the clear blue sky of Southern India; in the far distance the purple outlines of the hills on the one side; on the other the seemingly never-ending trees of the coconut palm; while marked out as fine threads were the roads between them. In the city we could perceive all the buildings worthy of remark; the numerous Christian places of worship; the ruined but grand old palace which is now used as a public office; the tanks, &c. Everything was distributed like a panorama for our eyes to feast on. Then, to turn to the temple. There were the two golden cupolas (the dwelling-place of some most holy god); the flag staff; the other fifteen towers, some grandly painted, others undergoing that process, the tanks—all were placed before us. The eye roamed from one beauty to another, sometimes to the works of man, then to those of nature, till finally tired with our elevated position, we turned once again to seek the safety of terra firma. We left the temple by the grand staircase, and found there a regular bazaar. What pleased us most in Madura, was to see the high-caste little girls going to school with slate and books. We were told that they were instructed in the rudiments of English, as well as in their own language.

Miscellaneous.

THE CASE OF THE LATE MR. W. F. WYNDHAM.—In the Court of Bankruptcy a meeting has been held for the declaration of a final dividend in the estate of the late W. F. Wyndham, who was the subject of a long inquiry in lunacy early in 1862. The adjudication in bankruptcy took place in 1864. The official assignee now reported that there was a sum of £87. 16s. standing to the credit of the estate, and it was directed to be divided among the creditors as a final dividend.—Madras Athenæum.

RAILWAYS.—Ten thousand rupees have already been collected towards the "Elwin Testimonial Fund," the Locomotive and Traffic Departments of the Madras Railway contributing the largest share. More funds are pouring in, and it is expected that they will more than cover the objects of the fund. Mr. Elwin is the Agent and Manager of this railway, and is about to retire. The petition of Mrs. Howe, the widow of the late engine-driver of the Madras Railway Company, who met his death in the Naggery collision, was forwarded to the London Board, who have decided on granting her a gratuity of Rs. 10,000.—Madras Paper.

AN OLD MADRAS PROPHECY ABOUT GLADSTONE.—"There's nothing in William, and he'll be found out one of these days." Such was the prophetic remark made to an old Madras civilian, by no less a person than the uncle of the Right Hon. William Ewart Gladstone, after the latter had delivered himself of his famous Budget speech in the House of Commons in 1853. Nobody at the time who heard or read that speech could have agreed with Mr. Gladstone's uncle; but the old gentleman's prediction has been singularly verified of late years. Mr. Gladstone's relative did not mean that "William" had not ability of a certain sort, but that he would never show any backbone as a politician. The minister who resigned office during the most critical period of the Crimean war; who disestablished the Irish Church, after writing "Church and State"; who has been rejected, after trial, by constituencies holding such divergent views as those of Oxford University and South Lancashire; who has refused to lead the Liberal party any longer and yet meddles with anybody else who attempts to lead it; who advocates the kicking of a nation, "bag and baggage," out of Europe—must be considered to have done some rather eccentric things in his day, which rather justify the avuncular doubt about the mental stamina of "William."—Madras Mail.

THE MISSING QUINOLOGIST ONCE MORE!—The Neilgherry paper says:—"Amongst mysterious disappearances of individuals—and there have been some—the one which has attracted the least attention is that of Mr. Broughton, the late Government Quinologist. Mr. Broughton had a disagreement with Mr. Cockerell, and his period of covenant having expired, resigned his appointment. He rode from Ootacamund to Mettappolium, there dismissed his horse and cooly, and it is supposed took rail from Pothmore to Madras, where he is said to have had an interview with Dr. Harris. A correspondent of the Madras Mail said that he had travelled with Mr. Broughton bound for Ceylon by one of the P. and O. steamers. This statement has not been confirmed. If Mr. Broughton really went to Ceylon, the P. and O. Company's books should show that there was such a passenger at such a time; the hotel books at Galle a gentleman of the name of Broughton resided or had refreshments in them. None of this evidence is forthcoming, because no one has taken the trouble of ascertaining if there is any such evidence. The Government of India has not spent one pie to ascertain the fate of this Englishman, renowned for the services he rendered in the cause of science. There must be, and should be found, some clue to the accident or maltreatment which befel Mr. Broughton, and it is the duty of the Government to institute the most searching inquiries."

BLIGHT AMONGST CEREALS.—Dr. Bidie, Superintendent of the Government Central Museum, Madras, has submitted to the Government of Madras a valuable report on some specimens of blighted cholum from Bellary, which had been sent to him for examination. He finds that the heads of grain and the sample of the grain sent to him do not contain many insects, but are pervaded by a fungus, which is the cause of the blight. This blight belongs to the same class of pests as those known to English farmers as "smut" or "bunt," and to the Ustilaginei. On shaking or rubbing one of the diseased cholum grains on a glass slide, it leaves a stain, which on microscopic examination is found to consist of myriads of minute spores belonging to the fungus. A careful dissection of one of the grains of the cereal discloses among the normal tissues a number of minute filaments or threads and masses of spores, free or packed in cells, which constitute the fungus in active growth. It need hardly be said that the grain is ultimately completely destroyed by the fungus, and that cholum partially affected will prove unwholesome as food. It is also unsafe to use grain partially blighted as seed, as, if it germinates, it is likely to perpetuate the disease. It is also probable, as in the case of smut, that the spores drop into the soil, and are ready, as soon as a new crop springs up, to attack the plants. The insects found on the Bellary cholum were mostly weevils, larvae of moths, &c.; and are considered by Dr. Bidie to be only secondary agents, which come to complete the work of destruction inaugurated by the vegetable parasite.

RAILWAY ROLLING-STOCK.—The authorities, we are informed, have had for some time under consideration the question of how the rolling-stock of Indian railways can be best adapted for the rapid and easy conveyance of troops in an emergency without interfering with the requirements of ordinary traffic. A progress report on this important subject has just been issued, showing that a thorough inquiry and consideration of the subject is going on. It appears that it is not intended to make any hasty or radical alterations in rolling-stock, but merely that, as the old stock dies out, it should be replaced by a pattern which has been decided on as most suitable for all cases. A large amount of rolling-stock for State Railways is now constructed on a settled pattern. The alterations required in ordinary carriages at present are very slight. The dimensions of the covered goods waggon will be sufficiently increased to admit of four horses being loaded in the width of the waggon; and in the third class passenger stock the interior fittings are to be made movable, side openings arranged so as to allow of the entrance of a dooly, and extra fittings to admit of the carriage being used for the conveyance of sick and wounded. Military time-tables are being drawn up with the aid of the Railway authorities, so that on any sudden emergency all necessary calculations will be to hand, the traffic managers will know the probable wants of the Military Staff, who, on their side, will know what can be fairly expected to be done, will be able to estimate the time required for movement, and arrange accordingly without fear of confusion at a critical moment.

THE TELEPHONE.—A crowded audience assembled in the lecture-room of the Madras Museum to hear the lecture by Mr. G. K. Winter, Electrician of the Madras Railway, on the Articulating Telephone, the recently invented wonder of the age. His Grace the Duke of Buckingham and the ladies of his family honoured the place with their presence. The room was densely packed, many being obliged to stand. The lecturer proceeded to explain how mechanical vibrations could be converted into electrical vibrations, which again could be reconverted into mechanical vibrations, thus solving the problem of the telephone, or the reproduction of sounds at a distance from the place of origin by means of electricity. He stated (1) that moving a plate of iron in the neighbourhood of (that is, to and from) an electro-magnet, a coil of wire wound round a piece of magnetised steel, produced currents of electricity in the coil; (2) that a current passing through a coil of wire caused that coil to act as a magnet on any piece of iron near it; on these two facts rested the mechaical and electrical construction of the telephone. The sounds, from the mouth or any other source, caused vibrations in an iron disc placed very near to a coil of wire, each vibration produced a current of electricity in the coil, which currents were transmitted by a connecting wire to another coil at the distant station. The current passing through the second coil caused it to act magnetically (2 above) on an iron membrane placed near to it. The vibrations of the first membrane were thus reproduced in the second one, and this therefore gave out similar sounds to those which caused the vibrations of the first. After this explanation the audience were admitted into a side room where there was a telephone, or rather pair of telephones (looking somewhat like stethoscopes) connected up to a wire leading to the Observatory, and along which were transmitted, from the observatory, sounds which were more or less distinctly heard by those at the Museum.

ENCOUNTER WITH A PANTHER.—A correspondent at Cuddapah, writing to the Madras Mail on Tuesday, the 12th Feb., says:—"Information having been received about nine o'clock this morning that a panther was seen in a large patch of annual grass near the town, a party of Europeans proceeded to the spot, where a crowd had collected. The panther was hiding in the dense grass, and measures had to be taken to drive him out of it. The grass was fired, and the flames and the yells of the natives soon forced the beast to break cover. A native in a tree close to the annual was the first attacked. He was either pulled down or dropped in terror when the panther leaped at him. But fortunately he received no more injuries beyond some severe scratches. The panther left the man almost immediately after seizing him, and then again sought cover in the annual. He was, however, driven out once more, and this time made a determined charge at Mr. A. G. Johnston, Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co.'s agent, who was alone and about sixty yards from where cover was broken. Mr. Johnston was armed with only a police musket, but stood his ground pluckily, and fired at the beast when it was about twenty-five yards from him. The ball struck the brute below the left shoulder, and went right through the fore-leg, cutting away the flesh and sinews, and partially destroying the bone. The panther, after being hit, turned and charged in another direction, when it was fired at and missed by Mr. Ward, Nazir of the District Court, who was not far from Mr. Johnston. Mr. Hill, an Inspector of Police, was, however, more fortunate, and succeeded in lodging a bullet in the animal's hind quarter. The panther, however, was still able to continue its course, and knocked down and severely wounded a man in the crowd. It then went a little further, and fell. The mob now became valorous, and surrounded the dying beast, hitting it with sticks and stones, and continuing to do this long after it was dead."

COLONEL GEORGE POMEROY COLLEY, C.B., PRIVATE SECRETARY TO THE VICEROY.—The military career of Colonel Colley began at an early age, for he passed out of the Military College at Sandhurst with the highest certificate that could be gained at the age of sixteen. Soon after he was posted to the 2nd Queen's, and went to the Cape, where he was shortly after employed on public works and engineering duty, until he was called upon to accompany the expedition against the well known Kafir-Chief, Krel. He was then soon placed in charge of a force on the frontier, and was continually engaged in skirmishes with the Kaffirs, a service for which he was ultimately rewarded by a brevet majority. From the Cape he went with his regiment to China in 1860, where he also distinguished himself, and on his way home he was invited to again take frontier service in the Cape Colony. After this duty was over he went home and entered the then newly-established Staff College, and passed out of it, after a brilliant examination, in half the allotted time. This made him a marked man at the Horse Guards, and staff appointments followed in rapid succession in the Brigade-Major's, Adjutant-General's, and Quarter-Master-General's Department. After that he became a Professor at the Staff College, and in 1871 was selected by Lord Northbrook as his Personal Assistant at the War-office. The Ashantee War took him from the college to the field, where he was intended to organise the volunteer corps, but instead he was placed in charge of the transport service, which he soon made so efficient that the line of communication was never endangered. With a natural instinct for war, however, Colonel Colley always managed to be present when any fighting was going on, up to the final capture of Coomassie, and for his services he was made a Colonel and a C.B. After a short spell of regimental duty at home he went with Sir Garnet Wolseley on his special mission to the Cape to settle the Transvaal question, and took advantage of his visit to explore what is known as "the fever country" between the Transvaal and Delagoa Bay—an expedition of 500 miles which he had to make on foot, carrying his own knapsack. Next we find him Quartermaster-General at Aldershot, an appointment which he resigned, at Lord Lytton's urgent request, to come to the country as Military Secretary. In this capacity he not long ago visited the frontier, and part of our present frontier policy may be due to his observations. Though he has had several excellent appointments offered to him in England, he has consented to take Colonel Burne's place as Private Secretary to the Viceroy, and will, no doubt, fill it as efficiently as his predecessor. Colonel Colley is not unknown in the ranks of literature, for he contributed the articles on the army to the new edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica." Socially, his success has been equal to that of his military career.—"BUCK."—Charivari.

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, Feb. 16.—As a matter of course attention generally, and especially native attention, is all on the stretch—rack I might almost say, with regard to the now excitingly critical news from England and the seat of war, on this subject especially, of the negotiations now going on. All the telegrams are eagerly devoured as they come in, and are immediately translated and circulated among those of the native community who cannot digest them in English. I am informed, too, that the translations are, in some cases, anything but literal, but rather "editions with improvements." So far as can be gathered, however, there is no particular anxiety to see the entry of England into the arena of the war, though without a doubt the Mohammedans would welcome it, and support it. Without a doubt if England be really forced to take a part in the contest, and shows herself in absolute earnest, she will have little or no difficulty in raising as many soldiers as she pleases from among the most warlike tribes in her own territory and on the frontier. It would only need an invitation to obtain Beloochees and Pathans to any required amount, and better stuff for "war material" could scarce be wished for.—I presume the stir created by the advent of Sir Charles Staveley is to be connected with possible arrangements in event of war. He has certainly been active enough, since he has been here, in his movements. He has been only one day at rest since arrival. He has examined all the military buildings, including Ghizree Sanitarium, and the Napier Barracks and Native Infantry lines in detail. To-day he was busy, with his own and the local and Engineers Staff, examining the proposed batteries at Manora Point—not yet commenced by the way, barring the housing of some 9-inch guns. On Monday and Tuesday (the 18th and 19th) he will inspect the Arsenal and the proposed site for the new one. Then he will proceed to Hyderabad, where he will remain a couple of days, and return to Kurrachee; and after spending a week here he and staff will go to Mhow to inspect the troops there. So that if not so ubiquitous as we found Sir Richard Temple, or so fly-about in his movements, Sir Charles Staveley may be said to have done a good deal of real work. H.E. gave us a great treat last Wednesday in the shape of a field day review and sham attack on a supposed enemy invading Kurrachee from the south-east. Our whole garrison turned out in force, consisting of the battery of guns, her Majesty's 83rd, and the 19th N.I., and were enforced by a flying brigade of equestrians and carriages containing such of the élite of the station as the annual district exodus has left us, which made the campus mortis to the east of the convent look remarkably animated and picturesque. The "regulars" were on the ground and in line at 6.30 A.M. and most o the irregulars and guerilla corps of gamins (who follow the parades for the purpose of picking up the copper cases of the discharged cartridges) had collected by the arrival of H.E. and a brilliant staff, at seven sharp. Then followed the usual inspections and salutes, &c., after which the troops were put through a little file and volley firing, &c., &c. The advance then began by throwing out the right companies of the two regiments towards the hill on which the enemy were, as skirmishers, the artillery covering the movement by an advance en echelon. After a little manœuvring, in which the skirmishers had to be reinforced from the reserve, a general advance took place, and the hill was carried with a rush and British huzzas. The troops then retired under cover of skirmishers and artillery fire, and re-formed; after which Sir Charles dismounted and again inspected, and then dismissed the corps to a well-earned breakfast, which I hope they enjoyed after their victory with as much appetite as I do after my "matutinal." So far as I, a non-military could judge, all was done à merveille. At all events the sight was a pretty one, whatever its other merits might be. Among the cavaliers I observed one of our "Chiefs of Police" on a marvellous "rocking horse," and I am told he kissed mother earth in an energetic charge on a corps of the guerilla gamins aforementioned.

Miscellaneous.

REGIMENTAL MOVEMENTS.—On the breaking up of the Mittri Camp the 29th Bombay N.I. will proceed for the hot weather to Debra Ghazi Khan, and occupy the vacant N.I. lines at that station.

DESTRUCTION OF A RAILWAY STATION.—The Nerbudda Railway station, on the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India line, was totally destroyed by fire on the 19th ult., the conflagration having originated in a live coal accidentally falling on some combustible portion of the building.

THE MAZAGON LAND COMPANY.—We (Times of India) understand that the Secretaries and Treasurers of the Mazagon Land Company received on Saturday the proposals of Government for the purchase of the company's property. They are kept secret. A meeting of the directors is to be called, at which the terms offered will be discussed.

KATTYWAR.—A Bombay paper states that the engineer of the Gondul State, Mr. Guunesh Govind, has discovered a quarry of fine marble, said to be equal to the best Italian. A slab is to be sent to Bombay to ascertain its probable market value, and should inducement offer the machinery for working the quarry will be obtained from Europe. This is the second marble quarry discovered in Kattywar, the first being in his Highness the Jan's territories.

THE BOMBAY VOLUNTEERS.—The Volunteers are very lucky. Besides the two cups offered by Major Maxwell and Capt. Baker, we learn that Mr. Maclean has placed a sum of money at the disposal of Capt. Sexton to be invested in some way other than in a cup, which is to form a prize for the best shot in the whole corps. We also learn that his Excellency the Governor has intimated his wish to be present at a morning parade some day after the inspection, after which he will preside at a breakfast to be given by himself to the officers and non-commissioned officers in tents on the Maidan.

A LARGE METEOR.—Astronomical inquirers may like to know that at Ramnad, on the evening of Feb. 14, about 7.30 though the moon was nearly at full, and had therefore almost attained its greatest brilliance, an extraordinarily bright and large meteor, starting from a very high point in the heavens, travelled a great distance southwards, when it expanded into a large ball of pure white flame, with the edges lit up with prismatic colours at the moment of final disappearance. The ball of white flame appeared the size of a large cannon ball, and was intensely bright, notwithstanding the strong light of the moon at the time in a clear sky.—Pioneer.

BOMBAY EDUCATION SOCIETY.—H.E. Sir R. Temple presided at the annual meeting of the Bombay Education Society on Thursday at the Byculia Schools, and, assisted by Miss Temple, distributed the prizes to the successful pupils. His Excellency also delivered an address, in which he referred to the correspondence regarding the land which surrounds the schools, and expressed a hope that an amicable arrangement might be arrived at between the Government on the one hand, and the trustees of the church and the directors of the institution on the other. Sir R. Temple also made a powerful appeal for increased subscriptions to the society.

THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF'S TOUR.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, says the Times of India, after presenting the colours to the 1st Belooch Regiment, returned to Kurrachee, accompanied by Doctor Anderson and Major Furze. A careful examination has been made into the comforts and discomforts of the garrison at Hyderabad, and a strong recommendation will be made to dismantle the fort, which is perfectly useless. The batteries of artillery both at Hyderabad and Kurrachee are in excellent order. The preparations being made and suggested to the Government of India for the defence of Kurrachee harbour are considered absolutely necessary, and no doubt will be carried out. The three batteries recommended to be placed at Manora would no doubt be able to give a warm reception to a hostile steamer.

SIR COWASJEE JEHAUGHIER.—On March 2 a portrait of Sir Cowasjee Jehanghier, which has been painted by Mr. Griffith, of the School of Art, subscribed for by the pupils and friends of the Elphinstone College, Bombay, and hung in the large hall of that institution, was formally unveiled by the Hon. Mr. Gibbs, as Vice-Chancellor of the University. There was a large attendance. The Hon. Mr. Gibbs in the course of his speech said:—"I have already on two occasions had the pleasure of commenting on Sir Cowasjee Jehanghier's liberality. On the present occasion, I think it will suffice if, in alluding to the large sum of £150,000 which he has expended in works of charity and liberality, I confine myself to those grants which he has made towards the spread of education in Western India. Among the buildings, this college, as you have already heard, owes its existence to his liberal gift of £20,000; to the Engineering College at Poona I believe his donation was £15,000; and an additional sum of one lakh of rupees, or £10,000, was given on the distinct understanding that it should be supplemented only by the Government and from the proceeds of the Hall of the University, now named the Cowasjee Jehanghier Hall, which has risen on the parade. I quite agree with Principal Wordsworth that Sir Cowasjee has shown great discretion in the manner in which he has bestowed his princely gifts. Perhaps no one can have been said to have been more catholic in his gifts than Sir Cowasjee Jehanghier."

COFFEE PROSPECTS.—From the coffee districts we continue to receive favourable advices as regards the coming blossom, though it is pretty certain that it will be late. There has been no blossom anywhere as yet, save in the low districts, and even there it has not been abundant. The planters' hopes are therefore centred on a March blossom, and in some districts it may be as late as April. The old crop is now nearly all in Colombo, leaving little more than the Ouva spring crops to come in, and they are not expected to be large, so that there is not a good prospect of exceeding 550,000 cwts. for the season's shipments.

IMMIGRATION.—After an inexcusable delay, the report of the Immigration Commission has been issued, but unaccompanied by the evidence on which the conclusions of the Commission are based. The result of the inquiry is that the Commission are of opinion that it is not desirable to close any route to coolies coming to Ceylon; that the present route via Mannar and the Central Road should be maintained; and that the Dutch Bay route, when put in the same state of efficiency as the present route by the North Road, will possess many advantages over it. The Commission therefore recommend that an estimate be prepared as soon as possible of the probable cost of erecting temporary buildings at Dutch Bay, and at intervals along the road between the point on the mainland north of Puttalam, which may be selected for the landing of coolies, and Polgahawela. Various sanitary precautions are also recommended. The Hon. W. W. Mitchell is the only dissident to the general conclusions of the Commission.—Ceylon Times.

COLOMBO.—H.E. the Governor's visit to Colombo from Kandy was only a flying one, and the day after unveiling the picture of Sir William Gregory, his predecessor, Sir James Longden, left the capital, and the following day proceeded with Lady Longden on a visit to Nuwara Eliya for the season. As a mere ceremony nothing could have been more simple and withal effective than that of unveiling the picture referred to. It occupies a place of honour in the Municipal Hall, and there was a large assembly, mostly composed of the leading Burgher families, to receive H.E. the Governor when he arrived to preside over the proceedings. Sir James Longden spoke with brevity, but very gracefully referred to the services Sir William Gregory had rendered to Ceylon in his capacity as a Governor whose sympathies were with every class of the community, and who had identified himself with the interests of both European planters and native traders, at the same time that he had devoted considerable attention to the restoration of "those ancient works in the island that were still the wonder of the world." His Excellency concluded by expressing the hope that the work of progress and improvement would still be carried on with eminently satisfactory results.—Ceylon Times, Feb. 28.

HONORARY DISTINCTIONS.

The following paragraphs of a Military Letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, dated the 31st December, 1877, are published for general information.

1. I have received and considered in Council your Military Letter, dated 25th October, 1877, forwarding applications from the officers commanding batteries and regiments of the Hyderabad Contingent for permission to bear on their colours and appointments the words "Central India," in consideration of their services in the campaign of 1857-58.

2. My Political despatch of 17th October, 1866, informed you that H.M.'s Government willingly sanctioned the grant of a similar distinction to the 3rd and 5th Regiments of Infantry of the Contingent, on the presumption that it would be gratifying to his Highness the Nizam, as well as to the officers and men of the regiments. On the same presumption the corps and batteries of the Contingent named below, may be permitted to bear the words "Central India" on their colours and appointments:—No. 1, 2, and 4 Batteries, 1st, 3rd, and 4th Cavalry.

HONOURS AND REWARDS.

MUSKETRY RETURNS.

With a view to promote interest in the execution of Field Firing, the Commander-in-Chief has caused a summary of all the reports made on this subject for the past year to be printed. A copy will be forwarded to all general officers, corps and department concerned. The British Infantry, armed with Martini-Henry rifles, should now engage in Field Firing at increased ranges. In reports for 1877-8, it should be stated up to what distance the fire of this rifle has been found effective against troops in position exposed to view, or sheltered behind rising or other ground. This practice by cavalry and infantry is never to be omitted; it can be made at any period of the year, and there are few if any stations where it cannot be carried on and entirely arranged for, without further aid by the station authorities, in an instructive manner. The companies, wings, corps, brigades, or divisions turning out for this practice, should always be as strong as possible. The sketches furnished with many of these reports were clear and well executed, and afforded an opportunity for officers to evince their proficiency in field sketching. His Excellency directs the continuance of these sketches to illustrate the several reports. The Commander-in-Chief notices the interest bestowed in the field practice of the last year by general and commanding officers, and all concerned; and confidently looks forward to increased efficiency, by the constant annual repetition of this the most practical of the Musketry Field Exercises.

SERVICES OF OFFICERS DURING THE FAMINE.—The Government of Bombay has published the following resolution on the services of officers during the late famine:—H.E. the Governor in Council has perused these reports with much satisfaction. 2. On several occasions throughout the famine period H.E. in Council had the gratification of noticing how efficiently and energetically the local authorities in all departments were performing the difficult and responsible duties that devolved upon them, and he did not fail to observe the efforts and precautions which were being taken by all concerned, on the one hand, to prevent waste and imposition, and, on the other hand, to protect the people from the calamity that had befallen them. 3. These efforts and exertions, rendered so ably and zealously, have been, under Providence, followed with success on the whole—despite failures, shortcomings, and disappointments; and H.E. the Governor in Council now desires to express the best thanks of the Government to all, non-official as well as official, who took any active part in the measures adopted for the alleviation of distress during the years 1876 and 1877, and more particularly to those whose names are here set forth. Then follow the names of no less than two hundred and seventy-seven officers.

TELEGRAPHIC DEPARTMENT.—Orders have been passed by the Govt. of India for a slight alteration in one of the rules of the telegraphic department, by which a limit of 200 words has been assigned to single telegrams. This limit is to be raised for press telegrams to 500 words.

SALUTES.—The following appears in the last Gazette of India:—"With reference to Notification No. 2 D. C. P., dated 1st January, 1877, it is hereby notified that her Majesty the Queen and Empress of India has signified her pleasure that the salute of 101 guns shall be reserved for the contingency of the personal presence of the Sovereign in India, and that on all other occasions, such as anniversaries and the like, which is customary to celebrate by a Royal salute, the salute shall be 31 guns."

SALVAGE.—INDIAN MARINE.—Under instructions from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, it is hereby notified that before any claim for salvage is made by any vessels of H.M.'s Indian Marine, full particulars of such claim, with an account of the stores damaged or expended by the vessel making it, are to be submitted to the Government of India in the Marine Department; and that no claim of any kind is to be made, nor is any case to be carried into Court until the consent of the Government of India thereto has been obtained.

HOSPITAL MANAGEMENT.

The Englishman notes that the Lieutenant Governor is determined on a thorough overhauling of the financial and general management not only of the medical institutions of Calcutta and its suburbs, but of medical institutions in the Lower Provinces generally. Not only do the figures which represent the expenditure of these institutions during the past six or seven years furnish prima facie evidence of reckless extravagance, but there are grave reasons for fearing that, so far from the patients having benefited by this lavish expenditure, they are very frequently cruelly stinted of what is absolutely necessary in the shape both of medicine and of food. We are not among those who would advocate a niggardly provision for the real wants of the sick in the hospitals. On the contrary, we are of opinion that a system of economy which fetters the physician in prescribing for his patients is to be deprecated; and it has been with great regret that we have learnt that one of the results of the panic created by these inquiries has been a serious diminution of the comforts of the patients in more than one of the Calcutta hospitals. What has led us to support the Government in this matter is the conviction that so large a proportion of the late expenditure represents the gains of others than the patients, that large savings may, under a stricter supervision, be effected without any hardship to the latter. The Lieutenant-Governor is evidently very fully informed as to the directions which inquiry should take, and if the investigation now ordered is thoroughly and honestly carried out, a complete reform of hospital management ought to be possible, compatibly with increased benefit to those for whom the hospitals are intended. Such a thorough and honest inquiry will, we suspect, disclose the fact that no attempt at reform is likely to be completely successful that does not include very extensive changes in the personnel of the subordinate medical service. Much of the work which is necessary to ensure patients the food and medicines prescribed for them is work which the superior medical officers cannot be expected to perform, and which indeed it would be physically impossible for them to perform. If the men to whom they must necessarily delegate these duties are themselves the root of the present system of fraud and robbery, no amount of inquiry will do much good. Indeed, it may do harm. For it is pretty sure that, finding the source of their gain curtailed, they will endeavour to make up the loss to themselves by taking still more from the patients than before. This would, perhaps, be even a worse result than the present waste of public money.

The services of Major Boileau, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General, have been placed at the disposal of the Foreign Office.

THE INDIAN PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.

On Thursday, the 28th ult., (the Right Hon. Hugh Childers in the chair), the Select Parliamentary Committee met at Westminster, and continued the cross-examination of General Dickens, this being the fourth day of the appearance of this witness before the committee. The questions asked by various members were of a miscellaneous character, viz., regarding the irrigation works of the Madras Presidency and in other parts of India. The witness gave the history of such old works as the Eastern and Western Jumna Canals. A century ago the irrigation works were few and small, being constructed on the most primitive principle by natives. There were ancient irrigation works in Sind, where, however, important town had disappeared, and with them the irrigation works themselves, which had been then in use. In that province, the older works had been constructed by forced labour. Some of the old tanks have been restored, with results most beneficial to the people, and had returned, as he had before stated, a total of as much as a million and a-half to revenue.

The Chairman read from an official paper issued from the Public Works Department, being a report of the history and progress of the irrigation works in India from their commencement (about the year 1850) down to a recent period; and asked the witness whether he agreed with the policy adopted by the Public Works Department in their mode of carrying through the works they had undertaken.

General Dickens replied that he considered the policy adopted had been a perfectly sound one, as was proved by the general and substantial benefit the cultivators had derived from the works, especially in recent years.

In answer to inquiries whether the superannuations or pensions of Engineer officers could be calculated upon the basis of the productiveness of public works, General Dickens replied that he had already stated the Department was in the present day in a sound financial position, fully enabling it to meet pensions.

Sir George Campbell, late a member of the Council for India, and who was Governor of Bengal in 1873 (one of the serious famine periods), having previously held Commissionerships in the Central Provinces and Oude, was called, and gave evidence.

Sir George Campbell, by permission of the committee, entered upon a general statement of his experiences as a financial administrator of Public Works in Bengal, the Central Provinces, &c. Going over ground which was originally taken by the old East India Finance Committee, Sir George enumerated a considerable number of public works to which the Governments of past days had been induced to lend their aid, only to discover, when too late, that they had been deceived by public companies, who only cared to secure their own interests, and cared not how they involved the Government, so that the completion of the works was not left to the ruinous outlay of their own capital.

Sir George instanced the Godavery Canal works as having deeply involved the Government. They had cost already about £700,000; but were now found impracticable to be carried on to completion. The witness mentioned the Madras Harbour as another project which the Government had assisted. The Government had advanced large sums in aid of this project, which emanated from a private company, but when he (Sir G. Campbell) was a member of the India Council, and this Madras Harbour Company came before the Council to obtain further concessions, he opposed the application, not being at all satisfied with the position of the Government in relation to these works in a financial sense. Sir George referred to other disastrous public works, through supporting which the finances of India had suffered, and proceeded to name the several companies seriatim, criticising their claims as he went on, when the committee adjourned.

Miscellaneous.

THE CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.—At the annual meeting on the 17th inst. the directors will recommend a dividend at the rate of six per cent. per annum (free of income-tax), and that £40,000 be added to reserve fund, which will then amount to £150,000. The dividend for the whole year 1877 is the same as for the year 1876.

DELHI AND LONDON BANK (LIMITED).—The report of the Delhi and London Bank (Limited), to be presented at the meeting on the 10th proximo, states that the net profit for the past six months, including the balance brought from the previous half-year, amounts to £11,138, of which £7,596 is set apart for payment of a dividend for the past half-year at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum (free of income-tax), payable on or after April 20 next, and £3,000 to meet deficiencies on realisations of the lock-up, leaving a balance of £542 to be carried forward.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for Rs. 50,000,000 (say £500,000) in Bills on India were received on March 27 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £414,500, at an average rate of 1s. 8<sup>7</sup>/<sub>8</sub>d.; and to Bombay, £85,500, at an average rate of 1s. 8<sup>7</sup>/<sub>8</sub>d. Tenders on both presidencies at 1s. 8<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub>d. will receive about 18 per cent. At the above rate applicants get about 6 per cent. more of their biddings than they did last week, but at the same time the price obtained by the Council is about  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. higher than it was then.

DUTY ON COTTON GOODS.—The Manchester Chamber of Commerce, at its meeting on March 26, drafted a letter to Lord Salisbury, asking for a more comprehensive remission of the duties on cotton goods and yarns imported into India than that provided in the Indian Budget, and resolved to urge upon him the desirability of simplifying those provisions of the Budget which affect manufactured cottons by exempting from duty all goods made from yarns not finer than 30's, and all yarns up to 26's water and 42's mule.

LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA.—An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders in the Land Mortgage Bank of India took place on the 27th ult., at the offices of the bank, Mr. Boyson presiding. The meeting was called to authorise the bank so far to modify the conditions contained in its memorandum of association as to reduce its capital. The directors in their recommendation said they deemed it absolutely necessary that advantage should at once be taken of the provisions of the Act for cancelling so much of the paid-up capital as in the present position of affairs could be looked upon as lost or unrepresented by available assets. It would be necessary to cancel £2 5s. per share of the paid-up capital on 95,624, the number of the shares now current, plus £17,539 of paid-up capital on shares forfeited and extinguished. The Chairman then moved the confirmation of the following resolution:—"That the sum of £232,693, part of the paid-up capital of the Land Mortgage Bank of India (Credit Foncier Indian, Limited), having been lost, or being unrepresented by available assets, be, and the same is hereby cancelled; and that the conditions contained in the memorandum of association of the company be so far modified, that the capital of the company be reduced from £2,000,000, divided into 100,000 shares of £20 each, with £5 per share paid thereon, to the sum of £1,697,326, divided into 95,624 shares of £17 15s. each, with £2 15s. per share paid thereon, and £15 per share uncalled." The resolution having been carried, the proceedings terminated in the usual manner.

PRESENTATION OF COLOURS TO THE 22ND FOOT.—The Duchess of Marlborough presented new colours last week to the 22nd Regiment, which is stationed at Buttevant. The Lord-Lieutenant and a distinguished company were present. Her Grace, after presenting the colours, in addressing the men, said:—"This duty which I am invited to fulfil would, under any circumstances, have been to me a source of pride and gratification. I cannot but feel that the present moment possesses more than usual interest, when the hearts of British soldiers must be deeply stirred by that fearful war that has been desolating the East of Europe and by the contemplation of its possible effects on our country. I am animated by the strongest conviction that, should this great empire be called upon to maintain her honour and vital interests, those colours which I now present to you will be gallantly guarded and proudly borne aloft, and that the 22nd, whenever called upon, will follow them to fresh glories and contribute their part in sustaining and increasing the honour of her Majesty's army. The memories of Hyderabad, Sind, and Meeanee, the name of the gallant Napier ever protect these colours and abide in the hearts of those to whom they are intrusted, and they will stimulate in war and peace to maintain the high character of the army. For my own part, I shall take a deep and unchanging interest in your fortunes and your future. As the wife of the descendant of one of England's greatest heroes and as the daughter of an Irish soldier, I am proud to be indirectly associated with the history of the 22nd Regiment."

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM INDIA.—The Euphrates, Indian troopship, Capt. Cuming, arrived at Portsmouth on March 22 from Bombay, which place she left on Feb. 14. Being caught in a gale when about seventy miles through the Bay of Biscay and her machinery requiring readjustment, she was compelled to put back into Vigo on March 17. She left again on the morning of the 19th. There were three births but no deaths during the passage. She brings from Bombay the 45th Regiment, for Shorncliffe, consisting of 20 officers and 603 men, 29 invalids, 342 time-expired men, 9 insane persons, 16 details for depots, 104 women, and 241 children; and the following officers:—Majors Moffatt, Dashwood, and Parker, 15th Foot; Vet.-Surgeon Going, R.H.A.; Lieut.-Col. Anderson, Major Hunter, Capt. Torkington, and Lieut. Frith, of the Royal Artillery; Paymaster Manning, 34th Foot; Capt. Tarleton, 54th Foot; Lieut. Carter, 62nd Foot; Capt. Treger, B.I.; Lieut. Wyllie, of the Staff Corps; Capt. McMath and Surg.-Major Birnie, 66th Foot; Lieut. Anketell, 83rd Foot; Capt. Stuart, 21st Foot; Lieut. Tapp, 67th Foot; Lieut. Hibgame, 107th Foot; Capt. Ross and Paterson, 1st Foot; Colonel C. O. Creagh-Osborne, C.B.; Capt. the Hon. W. Lytton and Lieut. Percy, 4th Rifle Brigade; Lieut. Godbold, 12th Foot; Capt. Brett, 22nd Foot; Lieut. Dering, 25th Foot; Capt. Jackson, 63rd Foot; Capt. Bolton, 72nd Foot; Capt.

Lindoe, 81st Foot; and Surgs.-Major Corbett, Macbeth, and Jazdowski, and Surg. Bushe, of the Army Medical Department.

ARMY AND NAVY CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LIMITED.—The twelfth half-yearly meeting of the Army and Navy Co-operative Society was held at the society's stores, Victoria-street, Westminster, on March 27. Admiral Sir Richard Collinson, the chairman, presided. The report adopted by the meeting stated that the sales for the six months had amounted to £649,673. 6s., and the miscellaneous revenue to £1,788. 10s. 9d., making a total of £651,461. 16s. 9d. The gross profits upon the trading was £46,061. 0s. 5d. The ordinary working expenses had amounted to £37,871. 15s. 10d. There remained a net profit of £7,854. 12s. 10d., which, less the miscellaneous revenue, was equivalent to about 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. in the pound on the trading sales. A dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, was recommended. During the half-year seventy-five new shareholders had joined, raising the total number to 12,634. There had also joined 2,189 annual subscribers, and 1,362 life members. The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said he thought every shareholder must be highly satisfied with the result of their half-year's trading. In his opinion it was unprecedented in the history of such undertakings. As an idea of the large business they were doing, he would mention that exclusive of parcels supplied by agents of the society and purchases taken away by customers, they had sent out for delivery 245,118 packing-cases, weighing in the aggregate 8,000 tons. The business, which is on the increase, had reached during the past year the enormous sum of £1,188,593. Colonel Brown, R.A., seconded; and the report having been adopted, Major-General D. B. McCrear and General Sir F. C. Chapman were re-elected directors, and a vote of thanks to the chairman closed the proceedings.

THE INDIAN FAMINE FUND.—A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Indian Famine Relief Fund was held on the 25th ult. at the Mansion House, for the despatch of business. Alderman Sir Thomas White, in whose mayoralty the fund was collected, presided, and there were present—General Sir Henry Norman, Mr. Arthur T. Hewitt, Mr. C. G. Arbuthnot, Mr. S. P. Low, Mr. Francis W. Buxton, Mr. Thomas Gray, Mr. C. B. Dowden, Mr. William Scott, Mr. Charles Teede, Mr. Winzar (the cashier), and Mr. W. J. Soulsby (the secretary). The fund was reported to amount to £515,667, of which £504,000 had been remitted to India, and there was a balance in hand of £1,534. 5s. 9d., most of which had been received during the last fortnight, including from Wellington, New Zealand (balance), £294; New Plymouth, New Zealand, £40. 10s. 4d.; Hobart Town (balance), £553; and Aberdeen (making £3,702), £36. 19s. 4d. The accounts had been audited by Messrs. Turquand, Youngs, and Co., public accountants, and found correct. The expenses were about £9,000, or 1 $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. of the receipts; but of this £7,757 had been unavoidably spent in advertising the subscription lists in the newspapers, at the request of the donors, at various times during the last seven months. Mr. Hewitt said it was very satisfactory, indeed, to find that so large a fund had been collected without a mistake in the accounts of even a single farthing, and the fact was highly creditable to the officials at the Mansion House. Upon the motion of Mr. Low, seconded by Mr. Hewitt, it was resolved to remit a further sum of £1,400 to Madras, making £505,400 in all sent out thither, and, as money continued to come in from the Colonies and elsewhere, the committee determined to keep the accounts open for eight weeks longer, when the fund will be finally balanced and the committee dissolved.

SILVER AND THE INDIAN EXCHANGES.—On the 29th ult., at the Society of Arts, Colonel J. T. Smith (formerly Master of the Madras and Calcutta Mint) read a paper dealing with the above subject, and offering suggestions for a remedy. Mr. Andrew Cassels presided. Colonel Smith said his proposals had been for some time under the consideration of the Indian authorities. After referring to the various proposals made from time to time to remedy the evils the lecturer said that the chief difficulty in the way of a solution was the existence of a large mass of standard silver coins which it was impossible to convert all at once into "tokens," and therefore the apparently inevitable necessity for the concurrent circulation of standard coins of the two metals—a fact which had led to a "double standard"—at all events for a limited time. Owing to recent events, this difficulty had altogether vanished. On this point he would suggest as a remedy that, after due notice, the coinage of silver on behalf of private individuals and advances upon silver bullion should be suspended, that part of the Act of 1870 which made it incumbent on the Government to receive and coin it being repealed, the Government retaining in their own hands the power of replenishing the silver currency whenever they might deem it expedient; that gold bullion should be received by the Government at the Mint rate of Rs. 38 14s. per standard oz., and coined into sovereigns and half-sovereigns (representing Rs. 38 15s.), or 10 and 5 rupee pieces of the same value, which should be declared legal tender, but not demandable, the present silver rupees continuing to be legal tender as before. Again, seignorage for the manufacture of gold coins should be abolished, except so far as that implied in the terms of purchase. This scheme would, he maintained, have the effect of merely transferring the standard of value from silver to gold, without in the least altering the value itself, owing to the extraordinary and fortunate accidents of the present situation of the Indian currency. Paradoxical as it might appear, it would be quite easy to establish a dominant gold currency in India without making the smallest further demand upon the produce of the mines, and, at the same time, although the mints were closed to silver, to keep up the silver coinage at the gold value, and to meet and fulfil the expansions and contractions of the currency. The above proposals had been submitted for approval two years ago. As regards the rate of exchange, no other ratio than 2s. the rupee could possibly be chosen. The advantage of this arrangement would be so great that even if it required some little distinction of the true value to bring it about it would be a never-ending reproach to our statesmen if they were to adopt any other. A discussion followed, in which Mr. Hendriks, Mr. Dutt, and other gentlemen took part.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, March 25.—SIR SALAR JUNG.—Viscount HALIFAX: I rise to ask my noble friend the Secretary of State for India a question of which I have given him private notice. In the Indian papers of last autumn a statement appeared that Mr. Oliphant, then in the service of Sir Salar Jung, one of the co-Regents of the Deccan, had been removed from that service by order of the Government of India. Mr. Oliphant is the son of Colonel Oliphant, an old Indian officer, who served many years in India, and became afterwards a director and chairman of the East India Company. When I was President of the Board of Control I was in frequent and friendly communication with him; and I naturally take an interest in his son. I am not aware on what grounds Mr. Oliphant was thus removed. There may be good reasons for it, and I am willing to believe that the Government of India would not have undertaken a step involving such serious consequences to the son of an old Indian officer, except on grounds which seemed to them to render necessary so strong an exercise of the power which, I am ready to admit, they must possess. My noble friend will be able to state the reasons for this removal, which I presume he considers to be adequate; but what I am very anxious to hear from my noble friend is that the grounds of removal, whatever they may be, are not of such a nature as to affect Mr. Oliphant's character as a gentleman and a man of honour, or to afford any reason against his being employed in any fitting situation in the service either of the public or of any individual.—The Marquis of SALISBURY: I entirely concur in the regret which my noble friend has expressed that it should have been found necessary to remove Mr. Oliphant from the post he held under Sir Salar Jung. Mr. Oliphant is the son of a gentleman who held the highest office in the East India Company, and who in the discharge of his duties did excellent service, and Mr. Oliphant himself is a man of ability and of blameless character. The Government of India found that he could not be suffered to remain in the post he occupied without serious injury to the public interest, and her Majesty's Government have seen good cause unreservedly to support the Government of India in that decision. It is not convenient that I should enter into the political reasons which made that action necessary, but I am glad to have the opportunity of saying that they imply no imputation on Mr. Oliphant's character, nor anything that would unfit him for an office of trust either in the public service or under an individual.

THE "OFFICIAL GAZETTES."—Orders have been passed by the Government of India, and will shortly be published (says the Indian Daily News), restricting the insertion of private advertisements in the Official Gazette to certain necessary cases; also directing that all Government notices of importance to the public, and of such a character that the public interests demand an extended publicity, shall be inserted as advertisements in the public newspapers, as well as in the Official Gazette. Many classes of notices are specified in the Government orders as coming under this category, such as postal, telegraphic, and marine notices, and notices of sales or tenders.

A PRIESTLY BIGOT.—A somewhat painful sensation has been created in Kalutara, in consequence of the refusal of the Rev. Reginald Duthy, the clergyman there, to perform the burial service over the body of the late Mr. Fonseka Mudaliyar, a highly respected inhabitant of the village, and a good Churchman. The ground of the rev. gentleman's refusal was that two Buddhist priests had recited "Pirit" over the deceased some hours before his death; but on its being explained to the Bishop of Colombo that the priests were taken to the house whilst the dying man was unconscious, he instructed Mr. Duthy to perform the service. The latter, however, persisted in his refusal, and the remains were accordingly removed to Panadura and interred in the cemetery, the last rites being performed by the Rev. Mr. De Mell, Missionary of the S. P. G.—Ceylon Times.

It is reported that a fresh census is to be soon taken of the people in the town of Madras.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA

Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.
Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa of the Finest Quality,
with the excess of fat extracted.

The Faculty pronounce it "the most nutritious, perfectly digestible beverage for Breakfast, Luncheon, or Supper, and invaluable for Invalids and Children."

Highly commended by the entire Medical Press.
Being without sugar, spice, or other admixture, it suits all palates, keeps better in all climates, and is four times the strength of Cocoa thickened yet weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and in reality cheaper than such Mixtures.

Made instantaneously with boiling water, a teaspoonful to a Breakfast Cup costing less than a Halfpenny.
COCOATINA A LA VANILLE is the most delicate, digestible, Cheapest Vanilla Chocolate, and may be taken when richer Chocolate is prohibited.

In tins at 1s. 6d., 3s., &c., by Chemists and Grocers.

COCOATINA IS THE BEST COCOA FOR

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,

C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employees who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with. It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. . . . The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Muhammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most cursory reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him a patient hearing on points the most open to controversy."—Allen's Indian Mail.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligencer.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1861, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

LAMPLOUGH'S PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1873, in H. Lamplough's favour.
 Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed.

GRATEFUL-COMFORTING. EPPS'S COCOA. BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—See Article in

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, March 18; Allahabad and Madras, March 16; Calcutta, March 15.

THE famine is still, perhaps, the prevalent topic; though the agitation produced by the New Press Law has given a certain prominence to that somewhat unpleasant subject. We find it stated in the Pioneer that recent returns from the North-West Provinces show there are 56,000 people on relief works and 27,000 in poor houses, or in receipt of charity. In Oudh, too, the numbers on relief works are reported to be nearly equal to those in the North-West Provinces. On the other hand, the same authority leads us to believe that with considerable distress there is also no small amount of "laziness and fictitious poverty." At Saharunpore, the Collector reports, "that when beggars are offered employment they bolt in large numbers and refuse to work." On the relief works in Agra 23,000 people are employed, but among them there is "a good deal of malingering." In Barabanki the people will "neither work or enter the poor-house; they want pice distributed every evening."

ONE of the latest items of intelligence by the overland is that the Secretary of State has, by telegraph, approved of the general scope of the Vernacular Press Bill, and of its being introduced and passed through the Legislative Council. There is a sensible and temperate article on this measure contained in an "Occasional Note" of the Pioneer Mail of March 16. The writer in a very few words expresses a comprehensive opinion on the subject, which may be recommended to the attention of those interested in the welfare of India and its people. He says that "the steps now taken ought to have been taken years ago;" but he has also said before that "the new law need not be regarded as the fruit of any apprehensive feeling. Is it not that Government has found, by experience, that the native mind could not quite appreciate a liberty which belongs to a special stage of civilisation hitherto not attained by the mass of Hindu and Muhammedan editors and writers for the Press?"

It appears that, according to the last weekly famine report from Madras, there has been a decrease of about 5,400 in the numbers on relief works and charitable relief; 255,000 still remaining. At the same time there has been a general, though not considerable, rise in the prices of rice and dry grains. As regards Bombay, we find it stated that the Government of that Presidency has, in consequence of the high prices and scarcity of grain, and the consequent distress prevailing in the Nasick and Nagar collectorates, issued instructions for the re-opening of some of the relief works in those districts.

LORD SALISBURY'S despatch of 13th December last on the Kelat Question has been published in India. It concludes with approval of the administrative arrangements sanctioned by the Viceroy in Council in regard to the re-establishment of the Kelat agency, a post which has been in occasional abeyance since its original creation, more than twenty years ago. Nothing can be more true than that "upon the tact and judgment" of the agent—in an office where complications may at any time arise for which there is no precedent—"and upon the extent and character of the influence which he may gain over the Khan and his Sirdars, must, in the main, depend the success" of any measures laid down for the guidance of our diplomatic or other relations with Brahuia.

In stating that the following general officers, whose promotion has been accelerated by the late Warrant, are allowed to retain their commands, we doubt not that the names will be familiar to most of our readers:—General Sir J. Brind, commanding the Sirhind Division, to the 16th December, 1878; Lieutenant-General C. Chamberlain, commanding the Oudh Division, to the 31st March, 1879; Lieutenant-General D. M. Stewart, commanding the Lahore Division, to the 30th September, 1879.

MAJOR CHAMPAIN has been appointed Director-General of Telegraphs in India, in succession to the late Colonel Robinson, R.E. This gentleman's services in connection with the Government Lines in Persia and the Makran coast, and the cable in the Persian Gulf, are too well known to need repetition. If the appointment is one which will rejoice his many friends, it will no less surely give satisfaction to the general public, more especially that large section having relations with India.

WE see it mentioned that at the last monthly meeting of the Asiatic Society, held in Calcutta, a vote of thanks was awarded to Sir E. C. Bayley, for his long and valuable services to the Society. Like honour was also given to General Thuillier, of whom and Sir Edward Bayley enlarged photographs are to be permanently hung in the Society's rooms.

A CONSIDERABLE stir has been caused by the marriage of Babu Keshab Chandra Sen's daughter with the Maharaja of Kuch Behar; not so much from the social positions of the bride and bridegroom as from the modus operandi. The Babu is charged with falling back into practices which he had renounced, by allowing his daughter, not yet fourteen years old, to be married to a boy little older; resigning his parental right of giving her away to a younger brother; and accepting a son-in-law who is likely to approve and practice polygamy. The question is apparently a perplexing one; but it is not clear, however they may lament the occurrence, what authority outsiders have to interfere.

THE latest news of the Viceroy's movements were that Lord Lytton and party would leave Howrah by special train on Monday, March 18, at 9.30 P.M., and during a short halt at Jumalpoore the following morning his Excellency would inspect the East Indian Railway Volunteers' battalion, which has its head-quarters there. The Viceregal party would reach Allahabad at 8.45 that evening, halting one hour for dinner, and again for twenty minutes at Toondla at 6.15 on the morning of the 20th.

THE Pioneer's correspondent at Feruzpore sends a minute account of the recent shocks of earthquake felt at that station. At Rawalpindi, where the walls of the houses were cracked, the visitation is said to have been severe beyond all previous experience. And independently of Simla shaken "to its foundations," we hear that one of the inner walls of the Fort at Peshawar was thrown down.

IT will interest many to learn that the annual reports for 1876, on the destruction of wild animals and venomous snakes, show the results of the year to be unsatisfactory as regards the destruction of life, though with respect to human life slightly more favourable in comparison with previous years' returns. Including statistics from Mysore and Coorg, 19,432 persons and 61,229 cattle were deprived of life by wild animals and snakes, while 23,459 wild animals and 212,871 snakes were destroyed.

THERE are still very sad accounts of the famine in China. From the statement in the Peking Gazette it appears that the worst distress was at Feng-Pai and Yang-Cheng, where were respectively 250,000 and 180,000 applicants for relief. A fall of snow took place on the night of Jan. 28; and the health of Peking is said to have benefited in consequence. Moreover, the absorption of the snow into the soil is considered very favourable for the prospects of the spring crop. At Hong Kong a vote of 10,000 dollars had been proposed by the Governor from the special fund for the relief of the sufferers in the North. In passing the vote, however, some strictures were made on the misrule of the responsible Chinese Government, and its failure to develop the resources of the country.

THE Englishman's Overland Summary contains a curious extract from the South of India Observer, describing a flight of locusts seen by Mr. Rowson, the Superintendent of the Government Chinchona Plantations at Nediwuttum, passing through Nediwuttum on Thursday, the 28th February. "They were travelling," he says, "northwards, through the 'Ossington Chinchona' and the 'Prospect' Tea Estates, in both of which they alighted. Their flight continued from 10 A.M. till 2 P.M. At midday the host extended for some 10 miles in length by 2 in breadth and some 30 feet in height. They were then so thick that they quite darkened the air, and a chinchona tree was invisible at a distance of 30 feet. They alighted frequently, but eat nothing. Their stomachs were full of some soft succulent grass recently eaten. Millions lost their lives in the Makoorty stream, and were found dead on the ground the next morning, having probably perished from the cold." Mr. Rowson likens the movements of these locusts to that of a perfectly drilled army: he fortunately saw nothing of the devastation they usually produce.

CRICKETERS will be interested in knowing that the "Parsi Eleven" will leave Bombay for England about the middle of May, and, after playing matches at Lords', the Oval, and Princes, will visit the provinces and subsequently Scotland and Ireland. They are coached by a professional from the West. We shall be curious to see how the training and climate of Bombay will have served in preparing a Parsi eleven for competition with home players.

THE Army and Navy Gazette states that Lieutenant Matthews, of the London, who was recently engaged in organising a police force for the Sultan of Zanzibar, has been appointed Acting Assistant Political Agent at Zanzibar, during the absence on leave of Mr. Holmwood, who fills this post. It also notifies this, during the absence on leave of Colonel Martin Dillon, C.B., C.S.I., Assistant-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General at Gibraltar, Major Hugh Chichester, Royal (late Bengal)

Artillery, performs the duties of his appointment during his absence.

MR. KNIGHT writes a long letter to the Friend of India to account for the destitute condition of Jhansi, and arguing that the means pursued by Scindiah for repairing the damages done to its villages by famine have been more successful than our own. He approves, and justly, the respect to native institutions paid by Sir Thomas Munro, and declares his unwillingness to supersede them by systems to which we are ourselves accustomed; dwelling especially upon that statesman's warning against "the creation of zemindars of whole districts or simple villages." But his proposal for an Assembly is, to say the least, premature. Moreover, we think his charge too sweeping as regards modern Indian statesmanship. There are men at the present day who have now to do, or have had recently to do, with legislating for India, who would not yield a jot to any of their fellows in admiration of Munro, or be behind any in recommending his enlightened opinions to the study of thinking men. But imitation of past greatness must be intelligent; and these very admirers know that if the distinguished Governor whom we have named were living in 1878, he would himself be guided by the spirit and wisdom of the present, as well as the experiences of the past.

THE same letter contains a lament that "nothing has been ever done by the Government to keep alive and perpetuate a knowledge of the writings of the great men who made the Empire we inherit from their hands." "Their views," it continues, "were long since forgotten, if they were ever known, by their successors. The mistakes we have been making ever since, and that we are constantly repeating in one form or other in the various provinces of the Empire, were as clearly discerned at the beginning of our rule as they are to-day, while no experience of their evils seems sufficient to burn in upon our memories the lessons which those evils should have taught us." It is not clear, however, that Government could do more in this respect than has been done by publishers on their own account. There is no lack of biographies, nor will there be lack of biographies of eminent Statesmen; and Metcalfe, Malcolm, and Munro have not been omitted from the category or forgotten, because they belonged to India. On the contrary, the records of their opinions and lives are before the present generation, and afford incontrovertible proof that India has produced a race of Statesmen in no way inferior to the best of European diplomatists.

A MISSIONARY writes to the Friend of India on the 2nd March, giving ocular testimony to the great distress from famine prevalent in the North-West. He does not, he says, refer to "hunger or pinching want," but to "downright starvation." Names are not mentioned; for he has no district officer to accuse of want of vigilance and effort in the right direction; but it is a sad picture to realise when we read of "human beings—men, women (chiefly old), and children unable to articulate, shrivelled up, dead and dying of dread of starvation, from inability to procure a small supply of even the barest necessities of life."

It is gratifying to learn that the Famine Commissioner in Maisur, after a tour through the worst parts of Tumkur, reports that the crops have been better than is generally believed, and that there are no signs of panic, or wandering, or of emaciation, except in a few instances. In fact, the Friend thinks there can be no ground for State interference, as, even had the crop been a bumper, there must still have been distress among the poorer classes. The country is believed to be fairly secured against further serious suffering.

WE observe, by accounts from Karachi, in Sind, that a public meeting was to be held on the 9th March, to protest against new Municipal taxation described as "oppressively extortionate," and calculated to "crush the people," who desire a reduction of expenditure. Let us hope that this is an exaggeration of the reality. The Karachi Municipality at one time set an example of loyal co-operation with Government, and of unanimity among its members, worthy of imitation by older institutions. But there was always a slight tendency to spend money, and it may be that the inclination has become a fixed habit ; in which case the occurrence of a reaction is not unnatural.

THE leading men amongst the natives of Bombay appear to have stirred themselves in support of Government in respect of the new Compulsory Vaccination Bill. Certain Guzerathi Hindus had met at the residence of Sir Mangal-dás Nathubhai to consider and concert measures for facilitating the operations of the vaccinators ; and resolutions were passed appointing a committee to make the Government measure intelligible, and, if possible, acceptable to the particular section of the population, represented on the occasion. This wise and enlightened action deserves, and will, no doubt, receive a marked recognition from the local authorities.

It is stated by the Indian Press that a memoir of Bishop Milman is being prepared in England. Our readers will scarcely need to be reminded of the loss which Calcutta experienced in the death of that estimable and learned prelate about two years ago, after nine years' incumbency of office. The clergy and laity in India have been requested to communicate with the Rev. B. T. Atlay, 6, Victoria-terrace, Calcutta, should any of their number have in their possession letters from the late Bishop illustrative of his character, or throwing light upon events, "diocesan or national."

THE Indian Church Gazette regrets to observe that the Bishop of Rangoon is empowered to choose his Archdeacons from among the chaplains only ; and considers that missionaries might reasonably participate in the honour so conferred. Surely the principle which regulates these appointments is one acknowledged by precedent, and its maintenance can be no more objected to in the nominations of Archdeacons than in other matters of Church routine at home or in India.

THE Madras Athenæum notices a strange misapprehension apparently existing in India as to the right of barristers to retain the fees paid to them, if they do nothing for the money. It argues that they have no such right. For instance, if a client pays a barrister a fee, say Rs. 100, the barrister, for that, must go into Court, and attend to the business. "It is true, that when in Court, the matter must be left to his discretion, industry, or ability. He can, if he chooses, tell the judges he thinks there is no case, and give it up, or he may do the work idly or badly, and he is not responsible ; but he must do something. The distinction between a barrister and an attorney is, that the latter is liable to be sued for mala praxis, the barrister is not. Vakils," the Athenæum believes, "are on the same footing as attorneys. If a barrister is made a judge, or dies, or goes away out of the country, making it physically impossible for him to attend to the case, the fee must be returned." Again, "There are cases in which a barrister is not expected to attend, his services being retained, lest the other side should retain them, but this could not be so in the three cases above enumerated."

MR. GOULD'S appointment as Administrator-General at Madras appears to have given satisfaction to the critics in that Presidency. According to the Athenæum, he is the barrister who ought to have it, and it is seldom that the man who ought to have an appointment gets it. But we regret to learn that "unfortunately for the profession of which he is a distinguished member, Mr. Gould's health will not permit him to practise as largely as his clients could wish." Let us hope that the promotion will bring increased physical strength as well as additional honour and emoluments.

THE unmilitary and most objectionable system of anonymous letter-writing appears to have gained ground among the sipâhis of the Madras army, and Sir Neville Chamberlain has had occasion to comment upon the subject in his remarks on the proceedings of Court-Martial upon a Nalgue, a Jemadar and two privates charged with the above offence. The Jemadar was convicted and dismissed ; the privates were found guilty and sentenced to two years' imprisonment with hard labour. Natives may generally have a weakness to resort to actions of this kind in making their grievances known, but in the old days of the Madras Native Infantry, when the fifty-two regiments had each a full complement of officers, anonymous letters against the sahib log were certainly not common, and discovery would have subjected the writers to severe punishment.

WE learn by a recent Indian summary that further news of the severity of the snow storms which have lately occurred in the Hazara and other districts has been received from the frontier. Reports have been current of several villages and forts in the direction of Ghazni being buried under snow, and there has, it is said, been great loss of life and property there. It is also rumoured that large numbers of poor people have died from want of clothing and food in Kabul, and that, as supplies had not come in on account of the severity of the weather, the Amir had sent out 2,000 camels to bring provisions from the direction of Hazara-Ghazni.

MR. SIMMONS LYNN appears to have had so successful an ascent in his balloon at Haidarabad that he is making arrangements for an ascent at Delhi and another in Madras before his departure for England. On the first occasion we learn that Sir Salar Jung and other native notabilities were present, besides British officers connected with the Residency or station. We can well understand the attraction of such spectacles to natives of India, though we do not remember to have heard of an Indian aeronaut ancient, or modern.

THE Madras Athenæum, speaking of a suit recently decided in the High Court respecting the privilege of a dancing girl in a pagoda, thinks it probable that a Bill will shortly be produced "to regulate the rights and behaviour of these young women," and it hopes that any legislation on the subject will be broad, as the expression of the High Court is reported to have been. A doubt is expressed as to the capabilities of any local legislator, Member of Council or otherwise, whose experience will enable him to dispose of the matter satisfactorily ; and it is by no means so simple as it may at first sight appear. The Lord Chamberlain's duties are comparatively easy in the treatment of similar references at home, for he has, at least, the means of obtaining intelligible data for guidance, but it would require a special knowledge beyond that of the ordinary judge, at home or abroad, to decide on the rights and behaviour of a class poetically styled, across the Channel, bayadères.

Two or three mails ago the Amir of Kabul was reported to be dead ; now it is said that his health is failing. Whatever be the true state of the case it were a wise policy for Government to deal with Afghanistan in a spirit which will be agreeable to the nation as much as to the individual Sovereign. Apprehension, it is added, is felt less the Amir's condition should give rise to State intrigues. Of course there will be intrigues wherever there are Afghans, and the succession to a chieftom like that of Kabul can hardly fail to be settled without trouble, if not actual bloodshed. The Government of India will, doubtless, be prepared for all contingencies ; but it is not unwise to anticipate a probable future, and even to contemplate an alternative prospect.

THE London Times of the 4th instant, in a correspondent's letter signed "Civilian," reverts to the origin of our "attempt to establish British ascendancy in Central Asia," by the disastrous activity of 1838. And the recently published life of Lord Melbourne is quoted to show that seven members of that nobleman's Government had recommended Lord Auckland to make the move which has since been so severely criticised and condemned. We cannot suppose that revival will tend to throw new light on this much discussed question. Nor could the secret history of any Viceroy's policy be obtained from the memoirs of a Cabinet Minister, unless it were permitted to ransack the desks, drawers, and pigeon-holes of every functionary connected with the Ministerial bureau for evidence of the part each one had taken in the particular transaction bearing upon it. At the present day, when there are many Councillors and many committees, and when innumerable private as well as public letters pass between members of the Indian Government at home and members of the Government in India ; and when, moreover, without the pale of strictly recognised administrators, there is a small phalanx of advisers, ever ready to write and receive overland letters, if only in fond recurrence to an Indian career abandoned from choice or necessity, but never forgotten—the problem of individual responsibility would be difficult indeed of solution.

IF "Civilian" has not read a remarkable volume of the time and circumstances to which he refers, published in 1844, under the title of "A Great Country's Little Wars," we earnestly call his attention to the probable advantages to be derived from its perusal. Written very soon after the occurrence of the calamity of which he writes, the author's appreciation of the Afghan War, as a historical fact and measure of policy, is of a sufficiently high order to commend his book to notice even at the present day. But it is more than probable that the work and its value are known to one who is evidently familiar with Kaye's brilliant and trustworthy chef d'œuvre.

AGREEING with Sir John Kaye in almost every line of his history of the Kabul occupation we can afford to call a halt at one passage. He says that "the treaty did not pledge the British Government to send a single soldier beyond the frontier," and that "to march a British army into Afghanistan was not an obligation upon the Indian Government; it was their deliberate choice." Here we ask ourselves, in the often quoted words of the old comedy, "What would Mrs. Grundy have said," had we held back from our professed purpose? What would have been the general Indian opinion as to our countermanding the Expedition? More than all, what would have been that of Shah Shuja, the would-not-be puppet? "I thought all this was for me," might he have argued: "but now that Herat has been let alone by the Persians, and my good friends have gained their ends, these good friends leave me alone to fight my battle as I best may." We are ready to join the multitude in regretting or abusing that unfortunate Treaty and more unfortunate manifesto. But once gone forth, there were both indelicacy and impolicy in getting out of it. And is it not Sir John Kaye himself who says, with reference to Herat and the more ostensible cause of invasion, that Lord Auckland could not contrive to make the two events "hang together by any other than the slenderest thread" in the manifesto of aggression? So is it with Quetta at the present hour. Whether the movement were right or wrong, and we do not dispute its wisdom—withdrawal, under present circumstances, would be a manifest error.

Odds and Ends.

THE HON. MR. J. O'KINEALY took his seat in the Lieutenant-Governor's Council on the 2nd March.

THE reductions already foreshadowed in the Bengal Police will probably take effect from the commencement of the approaching financial year. This time the lower ranks only will suffer, the higher having been reduced to the very verge of inefficiency in 1870.

POSTAL communications with Quetta have now been fairly established under the direction of the Postal authorities.

A CORRESPONDENT at Lahor who has lately passed through Barabanki, writes that the distress from famine there is very great, the deaths from starvation in one corner of the district being from fifty to sixty daily.

IT is stated that Mr. J. D. Gordon, the new Chief Commissioner of Maisur, will retain, with that appointment, the guardianship of the Maharajah.

THE Pioneer states that the Madras Government are in no case likely to leave Madras for Ootacamund before the middle of June.

FROM a telegram to the Times of India we learn that there was a severe earthquake felt on the 2nd of March; that the direction of the shock was from east to north-west, and the duration forty seconds; further, that there were two distinct shocks. No one was injured, but the walls of many of the houses were cracked.

THE attempt made by Sir Andrew Clarke to put the Telegraph Department on a yearly allowance of nineteen lakhs is believed to have fallen through for the present.

THE RAO OF KUTCH has engaged a geologist and mineralogist to report upon the commercial value and mineral resources of the country.

THE rate of exchange for the adjustment of final transactions between the Imperial and Indian Governments for the year 1878-79 has been fixed, with the concurrence of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, at one shilling and ninepence the rupee, and the Secretary of State has requested the Government of India to give the necessary instructions for the due observance of this rate in respect of all transactions to which it is applicable.

LIEUTENANT S. GOODRIDGE, R.N., of H.M.S. Daphne, having passed the necessary examinations, has been appointed Interpreter to the Fleet in Arabic, Persian, and Hindustani.

MR. M. KEMPSON, M.A., for many years Director of Public Instruction in the North-West Provinces, retired from the service on the 4th March.

THERE was a total decrease of 22,000 in the numbers on State relief in Madras in the week ending the 5th March. There were still about 250,000 in receipt of relief.

THERE are rumours in Baroda that the young Maharaja is to be married very soon; but it is not yet generally known from what house the intended wife is to come.

TWO students who were expelled from the Krishnaghur College, and imprisoned for bribing a servant to steal the examination papers last term, have been permitted to rejoin the school under orders from the Director of Public Instruction.

IT is said that Mr. C. A. Elliott, C.S., will be appointed Secretary to the Famine Commission.

GOVERNMENT has ascertained from the British Minister at Washington that the Silver Law, as passed by the United States Legislature, provides for a minimum monthly average of $2,000,000 (two million dollars, or say £400,000), as well as a maximum of $4,000,000 dollars, say £800,000).

THE last report of the Madras Executive Famine Relief Committee shows that up to date they have expended Rs. 73,99,141, and the balance in hand now amounts to only Rs. 3,69,819.

THE new Tower of Silence at Nowsaree was inspected on Monday by H.E. Sir R. Temple.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE recommends the Parsees to devote their attention to agriculture and the Native Army.

THE Commander-in-Chief and Staff arrived in Allahabad by the mail train on March 5. His Excellency inspected the troops in garrison and the Fort, and left for Cawnpore on the 8th.

AT Calcutta, on the 2nd March, a public meeting was held, under the auspices of the British India Association. Resolutions were passed, declaring the possibility of meeting famine expenditure by judicious retrenchments and economical administration without further taxation. The Home military charges and the outlay on Public Works were especially condemned. It was resolved to petition both Houses of Parliament.

BABU BOLINARAIN BORAH of Assam, the first native Covenanted Engineer sent out by the Cooper's-hill College, has just returned from England, and is in Calcutta.

INFLUENTIAL native gentlemen in Bombay are making efforts to dissipate the prejudices which exist in the ordinary native mind against vaccination, and are adopting measures to further the object of the Government in passing the Compulsory Vaccination Act.

THE French ship Lafontaine, 101 days out from Toulon, was wrecked on the 20th ult., on a bank to the east of the entrance to the Rangoon River. She had a cargo of salt for Rangoon.

THE Sessions Judge of Nuddea has called for all the papers in connection with Mr. Skrine's investigation in the Lokenathpore case.

FROM the 1st of April to the end of February the actual loss on the Secretary of State's bills on India amounted to Rs. 1,33,26,879, being Rs. 19,51,720 in excess of the estimated loss. The average rate at which the bills have been sold has been 1s. 8-81d., the estimated price being 1s. 9-23d.

VISITORS to Dalhousie this year will be glad to know that a bridge has been erected over the Nyne Khud stream, three miles from Bukloo, where so many accidents were wont to happen.

WE are informed by the Patriot that the Rajah of Bijni and Baboo Telukram Choudry of Assam have subscribed Rs. 300 in aid of the fund for the proposed deputation to England for the agitation of the Civil Service question.

THE Exhibition of Fine Arts, which was to have taken place in Bombay during March will not be held until December.

RECENT MINISTERIAL CHANGES.

If Lord Salisbury were known to the outer world by no other act than the promulgation of his recently-published despatch to the representatives of this country abroad, explaining the course pursued by her Majesty's Government in reference to the preliminaries of peace concluded between Russia and Turkey, his right of succession to the office of Foreign Secretary would be clearly established. He has produced a something for which there has long been a craving in the public mind, and which has hitherto been but imperfectly supplied by daily newspaper leaders or weekly essays and reviews. He has, in fact, transformed the vague outcry against Russian aggression upon British interests, which gave so much vantage-ground and opportunity to hostile critics, into a logical and lucid protest confined within certain expressed and unmistakable limits; and he will have had the grateful privilege of winning to his way of thinking a large number of good men and true, who, however ready to accept the contingency of a war when the honour of England is at stake, have been painfully seeking enlightenment on the rights of the case before them. Truly there has been no lack of private as well as public interpretations put upon the terms "Eastern Question" and "British interests;" and to determine their signification, in a mere literary or educational sense, for the apprehension of ordinary men, a summary of facts and condensation of opinions became necessary which, politically also, should bring to an intelligible issue the warm and lengthy discussions of club and Parliamentary orators.

The passages in the despatch which more directly concern India are those describing the results of the Treaty in respect of Armenia and Persia; and the "close pressing" of the "political outposts" of Russia upon Turkish dominion "at the head of the Persian Gulf and in the immediate neighbourhood of the Suez Canal." Of the first we are told that "the acquisition of the strongholds in Armenia will "place the population of that province under the immediate influence of the Power which holds them; while the extensive European trade which now passes from Trebizond to Persia will, in consequence of the cession in Kurdistan, be liable to be arrested at the pleasure of the Russian Government by the prohibition barriers of their commercial system."

The Armenian question is, to adopt the conventional parlance of the day, a "question" in itself, and a most interesting and important one; but perhaps its bearing upon India, with reference to the late Treaty, is rather in respect of geographical position than of ethnological considerations. As a people, Armenians are accustomed to three ruling nationalities, Russian, Turkish, and Persian; and whatever objections may be urged against the first, there will, in any case, remain little to be said in favour of the other two. They are not strangers to us in India, where numbers of some of the wealthier families have a home; but the whole Christian community of British India is not a two-hundredth part of the aggregate population, and the Armenian fraction of that community can, therefore, have no comparative prominence. But, geographically, Armenia and Kurdistan both stand in the way of the Trebizond-Erzurum traffic; and we learn, on the authority of the "Statesman's Year-Book," that "the greater part of the commerce of Persia centres at Tabriz, which is the chief emporium for the productions of Northern India, Samarkand, Bukhara, Kabul, and Baluchistan;" that "the principal article of import into Tabriz," during the years 1873-74-75 "consisted of cotton goods of British manufacture, of the average annual value of £800,000; while the chief article of export was of silk, shipped for France and Great Britain, of the average annual value of £110,000;" moreover, that "all the European merchandise that reaches Tabriz passes by Constantinople to Trebizond, whence it is forwarded by caravans." Kurdistan has for many years received its European supplies from Trebizond, though its staple return of live-stock has been habitually sent by land to Constantinople.

As regards the Persian Gulf and Suez Canal, it is well indeed that our position should not be mistaken. Both routes to India should be open to us. If we have failed to recognise the advantages of one in more peaceful times, and been content with securing the other by the diplomacy of Finance, the changed aspect of the political horizon should now lead us seriously to consider whether we can afford to let slip from our grasp (as it may do if we fail in purpose or vigilance) a possible alternative line of communication from some convenient port in the Mediterranean to the Shattul-Arab at Basrah. This is not a simple matter of pounds, shillings and pence; no question of a traffic repaying or not repaying outlay; no dream of converting some hundreds of miles of desert into gardens. The problem to be solved is purely political, and the object to be attained is the security and, we honestly believe, the future welfare of India.

Lord Salisbury truly says of the results to which we have referred, as well as of others not so immediately affecting India, that they "arise not so much from the language of any single article in the Treaty as from the operation of the instrument as a whole. A discussion limited to articles selected by one Power in the Congress would be an illusory remedy for the dangers to English interests and to the permanent peace of Europe, which would result from the state of things which the Treaty proposes to establish." Plain words such as these, plainly put together, need no special interpretation for the Ambassadors or Sovereigns at whose Courts they reside; and it would be well if they were carefully conned over, with trustworthy maps, by any responsible authorities whom they concern at home.

We have already spoken of the loss sustained by India and the India Office in Lord Salisbury's removal. Fortunately, his successor comes with no small prestige; and the high estimation in which he is held for uprightness and ability must always ensure a welcome to Mr. Gathorne Hardy, however novel and important the duties he may be called upon to undertake.

MEETINGS are being held in all the principal towns in India to protest against the licence-tax.

THE FRENCH GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

A respectable number of their Proceedings has just been issued by our Royal Geographical Society. Independently of an account of the great Stanley meeting at St. James's Hall, and a report of Mr. Stanley's address (which we must presume to be authentic), there are in it five articles of varied interest. The first of these is Dr. Duncan's instructive paper on the formation of the Main Land-Masses, one of the lately instituted Scientific Lectures; the others are papers of much the ordinary calibre. If Asia and the East are somewhat scantily represented by sketches of the Ob and Yenisei in the Far North, more suitable provision for the Indian palate will be found supplied in the last quarter's Geographical Proceedings of our good friends in Paris. An interesting meeting of the French Society was held at the rooms in the Rue de Rennes not many weeks ago, a brief notice of which may be acceptable to Oriental politicians, for the subjects discussed on that occasion were "Afghanistan and the Afghans," and "Kulja in Russian Turkestan."

M. Quatrefages, the distinguished anthropologist, and one of the Vice-Presidents of the Society, took the chair, and after the preliminary business of the evening called upon M. Paquier to read his paper. This gentleman is the author of a brief work published in 1876 on the Pamir, the result of careful inquiry into the physical and historical geography of Central Asia; and he has more recently been occupied in studying the tract of country possessed by the Afghans. He described the general geographical features of Kabul, spoke of the munshis or pandits, to whose explorations we owe so much of our knowledge of the trans-Himalayan region, and lamented the comparative paucity of European travellers in those parts. He reviewed, moreover, with fairness (so far as his researches enabled him) the information obtained through recent explorers in Persia and neighbouring States, including Captain Marsh and Colonel Macgregor—the latest, perhaps, of whom anything is known. To bring the subject of his lecture home to his audience, M. Paquier likened Afghanistan to Bohemia, and the Kabul river to the Elbe. He then, without obtrusiveness or irrelevancy, passed into the domain of politics, spoke of Quetta and its strategical importance; of Herat, the so-called key to British India; of a new overland route, planned by some Helsingfors Professor, in which Baku, Tehran and Ispahan were main points; of Sher Ali's policy, and of the boundaries of Afghanistan. This bare outline of a paper, written by an impartial Frenchman, with no unfriendly feelings towards us, will perhaps serve to arouse an interest in the proceedings of the French Geographical Society for the period corresponding with that of the latest issue of our Society at home.

M. de Ujfalvy described his journey to Central Asia, which he visited for the purpose of making ethnological studies. He started from Orenburg, (whither by the way, the railroad has since been opened), and after crossing the Kara-Kum desert—that bugbear of travellers—arrived at the Sir-daria, which at that time threatened to be flooded. Here he saw the traces of an ancient civilisation, in the exploration of which M. Lerch (of the Imperial Academy of Science of St. Petersburg) has done such good work. M. de Ujfalvy added that the young Grand Duke Nikolai Konstantinovitch, had determined, it was said, to devote himself to this very interesting branch of science, and bring to light and preserve the architectural and other remains which are scattered broadcast over the vast plains of Central Asia. It was in the spring of last year (1877) that our traveller arrived at Tashkand, where he met with the most cordial welcome from General Kaufmann, to whom he presented letters from the French Minister of Public Instruction, and who rendered him every assistance in forwarding the objects of his journey. Our space will not allow us to follow M. de Ujfalvy in his interesting journey; but we may add that he was accompanied by his wife, who shared with him all its discomforts and hardships.

INDIAN FAMINE TAXATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—From all that has recently come to light regarding famines in India, there can no longer be any doubt as to poverty being the cause of their extreme severity; and Lord Salisbury himself has declared that the true remedy against that scourge is to be sought in measures which will enable the people to make money enough in years of plenty to lay up against times of famine.

How is it, then, that the Government of India have done nothing to carry out this proposition of the Secretary of State; but have, on the contrary, belied its wisdom, by resorting, in order to meet the famine difficulty, to taxation which must further impoverish the people, and, therefore, intensify the very cause of suffering which it is sought to remove? It seems impossible to reconcile the policy enunciated by the responsible head of the Indian Government, and the action taken in the matter by the authorities subordinate to him. The one is diametrically opposed to the other; and the famine taxation recently imposed in India will appear in a still worse light, if its details are considered. The licence-tax, for instance, exempts officials and professional men, and scarcely touches wealthy merchants and bankers, thus sparing those classes in India who are able to raise their voices against undue taxation, and who could make themselves heard in this country; while it weighs heavily on the poor artisan, the hawker, the petty vendor who earns 100 rupees a year, or less than 4s. a week.

Moreover, when an income-tax was levied in India, it pressed hardest on the poor, although the bulk of the poorer classes earned less than the smallest income that was legally assessable. This arose from the poor in India being in the impossibility of resisting demands made by the Collector's people, or of obtaining redress for injustice suffered at their hands. It was also officially admitted at the time that due protection could not be afforded to the people against extortion practised by the host of underlings whom it was necessary to employ for the assessment and collection of the income-tax. The present licence-tax is not only open to the same evils, but, by relieving officials from burdens which should, in fairness, be borne by all classes according to their means, it is calculated to create class antagonism and hatred, a feeling which must be looked upon as a serious political danger in a country where the officials in every district are foreigners, and few in number, while the people are counted by millions.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

J. DACOSTA.

FAMINE ORPHANS.

The Friend of India remarks that the fate of those children whom the famine, which has carried away their parents, has left as a legacy to the State, is a question requiring urgent consideration, for we see in them a power which, if properly directed, may make its mark on a future generation, when all other signs of the present distress shall have passed away. That some attempts beyond that of their present maintenance are being made we are aware; but there is a scheme to aid which all classes and sections of the community may join, which has, up to the present time, received little or no attention. We allude to the proposal of an agricultural training for those who are able to benefit by instruction, combined with means whereby, when they attain to man's estate, they may be able to utilise what they have learnt. To initiate such a scheme, widespread assistance will be required, but it is principally to the Government we must look; and we think the scheme we propose is one which deserves the attentive consideration of our rulers. The late distress in Southern India has thrown large areas out of cultivation, and, with a diminished population, there is little chance of their again coming under the plough for many years to come. These lands, yielding no revenue, afford, however, the first essential—an area for cultivation by famine orphans, unburdened by taxation, during at least the first few years of occupancy. Portions of these might be selected by a Government officer with a knowledge of agriculture, with a view to forming them into famine estates under a committee of management composed of those into whose hands the orphans are entrusted. Blocks of land being thus selected, giving areas for wet and dry cultivation and raising garden produce, as well as affording an area for grazing the necessary cattle and sheep, and growing a supply of timber for fuel—sites for villages might be marked out, and the necessary buildings erected, under suitable management, by the older orphans. As the large majority of orphans are the children of agriculturists, it might reasonably be expected they would take to out-door work with readiness, and while the ryots' sons learned to till the dry land, the Thughie caste might devote their attention especially to the garden work. The way in which funds raised by subscription could be most advantageously expended would be in providing cattle and implements to till the land, and for seed and food until such time as the crops raised were available; such preliminary expenses being inevitable. So soon as the area under crops commenced to yield a return, the estate having no taxes or hired labour should be self-supporting, provided it were managed by careful and competent persons. The difficulty would lie in securing a proper agricultural director, but with the number of students now learning agriculture at Sydapett this difficulty might be met, and until crops were actually begun to be grown an occasional visit from a Government agricultural officer to direct the arrangement of the land to the best advantage would suffice. Such estates as these would afford opportunities for the introduction of deep cultivation, rotation of crops, the application of manures, village sanitation, and other reforms so urgently required in rural India; and they would stand a better chance of success by being taught to boys without a bias for set customs than they now have with the ordinary ryot. On arriving at an age when they could be trusted by themselves, the orphans should have such portions of the estate made over to them as they could cultivate, and rent might then fairly be exacted for their holdings. We should thus start them in life with every prospect of success. They would be taught the advantages of improved cultivation, be accustomed to the best processes, and by subsequently coming into possession of the very land on which they had learned have positive proof that they could attain similar results. On the other hand, the Government would secure intelligent tenants, and might bind them under restrictions to continue a practice which, while it would not exhaust the land, would provide a rent which, but for the improved system of cultivation under which their land was farmed they would never secure. For those who do not follow the plough or distribute the water, occupation might still be found. Ironsmiths, carpenters, rope-makers, and the usual lesser tradesmen of the village would be required, and must be forthcoming. Orphans trained to these crafts, away from the spot, might thus subsequently find occupation. Such farms might also be a means of growing crops suitable for export, which now are unattempted, because the ryot is not sufficiently intelligent and well off to deal with the export traders. Any surplus grain over that required for actual consumption could be sold, and the proceeds devoted to paying, for instance, a properly-trained man to superintend the manufacture of tobacco for the English market, or for dye plants or fibres, that only require to be known commercially at home to be appreciated. We give prominence to this scheme, because we see in it the means of elevating the agricultural classes of the community, than whom, for India's future welfare, no more important class exists. We think it should command the attention of the Government, as utilising what to them is useless waste land; and we believe the philanthropist and the missionary should give it their attention, as helping forward the solution of a problem that they must find of absorbing interest. The merchant who knows rural India is aware how many of her products are neglected, and are likely to still remain unutilised through the ignorance and apathy of her agricultural classes; but it is chiefly the interest and duty of the Government to weigh this proposal well, as a means of helping forward that improvement of Indian agriculture which we have insisted upon as the true, radical preventive of famine.

ATTACK ON INDIAN INDUSTRIES.

The Times of India comments upon a recent occurrence in this country, which it is pleased to call "An Attack on Indian Industries." It relates that another "large and influential deputation" of Lancashire gentlemen, whose peculiar mission and interest it is to take a lively concern in Indian matters, waited upon Lord George Hamilton last St. Valentine's day. But the burning words they spoke scarcely betrayed much affectionate solicitude for Indian industries. Their cry has hitherto been that our import duty on fine-piece goods—a duty originated and still levied as a necessary measure of revenue—interfered with free trade. Now they boldly fling free trade to the winds, and suggest, with "great unwillingness," the imposition of an excise duty upon the production of the Indian mills. "A great many objections," said the chief spokesman, Colonel Jackson, one of the largest Lancashire manufacturers, "had been raised to the imposition of an excise duty. One of these objections was based on the idea that such a duty was not in harmony with the principles of free trade, but there was an import duty on silver manufactures which was countervailed by a stamp duty, as well as an import duty on spirits, which was countervailed by an excise duty, and if that practice was contrary to the principles of free trade, then he presumed we were not really free traders in this country." This—the Times remarks—will be news to the countrymen of Cobden. The old refrain used to be that our import duty on fine goods was contrary to the principles of free trade, and inflicted a heavy tax upon the garments necessary to the poor Indian ryot. The poor Indian ryot, however, did not dress in fine piece-goods, but in the rudest and cheapest stuff his own country could produce. Now, in throwing over the argument about free trade, the wrongs of the ryot are thrown over too, and it appears advisable in the eyes of the English manufacturers that as the ryot cannot wear the goods they produce, that he should be heavily fined for wearing the goods of his own country. The Times is glad to see that Lord G. Hamilton said in a straightforward reply that the object of the Government throughout had been to reduce the price of what was practically a necessity of life in India, and "it was very clear that to impose an excise duty on the mills of Bombay would not in any way accomplish that object." . . . It rejoiced, moreover, that the deputation was so promptly answered; at a time when the whole country is suffering from the effects of a terrible famine is scarcely a fitting one to benefit the mill-owners of Lancashire at the expense of the Indian labourers; and it would certainly have been difficult to choose an opportunity when it would be more dangerous to harass the cotton industries of Western India for the mere gratification of English rivals. As to Colonel Jackson's declaration that he asked nothing but justice and fair play between England and India, the Times thinks he has them both in the wretched state of trade that is now common to the two countries; although, as the cotton-spinning industry in India is a novel exotic of costly growth, they probably suffer much more there than is the case at home.

FOREST CONSERVANCY.

The Pioneer remarks that what it had recently written about the mournful neglect of forest conservancy in Madras is fully corroborated by Colonel Beddome, the head of the department, in his report for 1876-77, just published. A Forest Act is wanted badly, but the Government has been too busy with famine work to introduce one. Meanwhile deforestation goes on to an extent that is simply alarming. With the wider cultivation of tea, coffee, and chinchona there is a constant demand for more land; and there being no safeguards, the result is a wholesale destruction of timber of all kinds. Saving some fuel reserves in certain districts through which the railway passes, and some small forest tracts hardly worth mentioning, there are no strict reserves of forest land in Madras, and no real forest from which cattle and fire can be rigorously excluded. And yet in almost every division are broad tracts which might easily be marked out and set aside. Nor would grazing and other communal rights be seriously affected, though we must expect some opposition; and this will become greater with every year of delay. The excuse of famine work seems hardly valid. Unfortunate as the presidency is, famine has only been an occasional visitor; whilst the Madras Forest Department was quite old enough to have vindicated its raison d'être before the last visitation. It was founded so long ago as 1847; when, the executive engineer of Malabar having pointed out that the forests there were being denuded, a special forest officer was appointed to explore, conserve, and work the Malabar and Coimbatore districts. Nine years later a Conservator was appointed for the whole presidency. There is now an establishment costing about two lakhs and a quarter a year. The objects of the sufficiently expensive department are to prevent the denudation of forests; to meet a rapidly increasing demand for timber and fuel; and, thirdly, we quote Mr. Maclean's useful book, "the preservation of the natural influence of trees on the climate and drainage of the country and supply of water." In his annual confession for the year 1876-77—one cannot call it a progress report—the Conservator seems to acknowledge that the first of these objects is unattained; and that as things are going on now, the second and third objects will soon become absolutely beyond the reach of Government.

STATION TALK.

LAHORE, March 3.—The concert in the Lawrence Hall on Friday evening, for the benefit of the Masonic Institution, was, however, the most remarkable entertainment I have yet seen in Lahore. The interest of the collective public of Anglo-India in music is but slight, and does not extend further than the ballad; and its disinclination to come out after dinner I think rather grows with its years. But on this wonderful night the hall was inconveniently crowded. All the world was there, in a very good humour with itself and everybody. The Bishop of Lahore has been installed to-day at St. James's Church, Anarkali. It is not the first time in the history of the Christian Church that a Bishop has been installed with scanty ritual in a Pagan tomb; and the lack of external pomp will not shock Dr. French, who knows the place, the people, and the work before him so well. The chaplain hands the keys of the church to the Bishop, the clergy retire to their places, and the service goes on as usual, excepting that the Bishop preaches the sermon. General Stewart inspected the volunteers yesterday, and all Lahore turned out to see the sight. The gallant corps has been encamped on the maidan for some time, and two or three of the days it spent under canvas were very rough and stormy. But nobody flinched, though several coughed, and an unwonted sneezing went up and down the ranks, and all acquitted themselves very well yesterday at the shooting butts and on the parade ground. A mimic attack, however, which formed part of the afternoon's proceedings, was delivered with more daring than discretion, and showed that in the art of skirmishing, of using all available cover, and of properly distributing its forces, the corps has much to learn. At the close of the inspection General Stewart addressed the volunteers in a speech, which, though brief, was a succinct statement of the essential points of the art of war. The corps was highly complimented, as it deserved, upon its shooting; and its steadiness in the details of parade drill was also praised by the General; but this last point was held to be a small matter compared with the power of intelligent action in attack. The defects in the movements attempted were pointed out at some length; how at one time they would have been decimated by the enemy, and how at another they would not have had a man left to tell the tale. But though the lesson was not a plain one, there was no harshness in its terms, and I think both officers and men found the criticism stimulating and encouraging, and laid it to heart. The oldest inhabitant cannot remember so severe an earthquake shock as that which happened yesterday about noon. With my usual want of luck I was unconscious that anything particular had occurred; but I hear on every hand that it was something tremendous, and that most people ran out of doors instinctively, expecting the trembling walls to tumble down about their ears.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

OPIUM.—A deficiency is expected this year in the opium crop.

LAMA OF LASSA.—News has reached Ladakh of the selection of a child to succeed the Dalai Lama of Lassa.

PUNJAB TRADE.—There was a decided falling off in the trade of the Punjab during the years 1876-77.

MORE RAILWAYS.—The Dhond and Manmar Railway will be open for traffic, though not actually completed, by the middle of next month.

LORD CANNING'S STATUE.—Lord Lytton's last public act in Calcutta this season was performed on the afternoon of the 18th inst., when his Excellency unveiled the statue of Lord Canning, now in position.

JOWAKI EXPEDITION.—The troops engaged in the final operations of the Jowaki Expedition evacuated the scene of their campaign on March 7; the prisoners of war were released, and the Adam Khel hostages discharged.

PESHAWAR COMMISSION.—Sir Richard Pollock, K.C.S.I., Commissioner for Peshawar, is about to take furlough to Europe. Major W. G. Waterfield, Deputy Commissioner of Peshawar for four years and of Hazara for five, will officiate.

FINANCE.—All necessary legislation in connexion with the Financial Statement having already been effected, it will be published in the form of a resolution of Government, with papers appended, giving the usual details. We understand that it is now settled, and it is hoped that it will be ready for publication before his Excellency the Viceroy's departure for Simla.

DEATH CASUALTIES.—We learn with regret that news has been received in Calcutta of the death of Mr. Villiers Taylor, Commissioner of Chota Nagpore. Mr. Taylor had been suffering a few days from fever, and sank very rapidly at Hazaribagh.—Sir John Wemyss, Bart., whose death is announced, was the seventh baronet. He was born in 1830, and succeeded to the title in 1858. He conducted a mercantile business in the North-West Provinces.

THE IRRAWADDY VALLEY RAILWAY.—It is expected that the entire control of the Irrawaddy Valley Railway will, on Colonel Trevor's departure, be vested in Mr. Martin, the Engineer-in-Chief. Colonel Downing returns to India in April or May. We are told that the receipts of the Railway are now about Rs. 22,000 a week, and but for the insufficiency of goods waggons the income would be double.—Friend of India.

PRESS BILL.—A Bill for the better control of publications in vernacular languages was suddenly introduced in the Viceroy's Legislative Council on Thursday. Following the precedent of the passing of the Press Bill of June 1857, standing orders were suspended, and the Bill was passed at one sitting. The Bill was introduced by Sir A. Arbuthnot, supported by Rajah Jotendro Mohun Tagore, Sir John Strachey, Messrs. Paul, Thornton, Evans, Morgan, Colvin, Eden, and the Viceroy. Extracts were quoted by members of a very seditious character.—Pioneer, March 16.

DISTRESS IN JHANSI.—The Pioneer says there is much distress amongst the poor at Jhansi. The people who emigrated from Gwalior, Agra, and other places are returning in crowds, up to three hundred daily; and some of them are so weak that a poor-house has been started, where they may be fed and sent on there way refreshed. The area under rubber in these provinces is very large; and if the weather soon becomes more seasonable—there has been unusual cold and a good deal of cloud lately—there will be a good harvest.

MARINE DEPARTMENT.—Under instructions from the Secretary of State, it is officially notified that before vessels of the Indian Marine can claim salvage, full particulars must be sent in to the Government of India in the Marine Department; and that no claim of any kind must be made, and no case carried into Court, before the consent of Government has been obtained—as to the peculiar merits of which arrangement the majority of our readers will find themselves rather at sea.

RETIREMENT OF MR. KEMPSON.—On Saturday last a large number of native gentlemen of the N.W. Provinces and Oudh assembled at the Kothi of his Highness the Maharaja of Benares to present an address to Mr. Kempson, Director of Public Instruction, on his retirement. Mr. Kempson replied in a long speech, in which he reviewed the progress of education in the N.W. Provinces. In his opinion it will be long before the native public will be able to relieve the Government of direct charges for the maintenance of schools of the higher class—an opinion the necessity for which is to be deplored, as the so-called higher education is a serious burden upon the revenues of India, while the good it does is at least doubtful.

THE BRAHMO MARRIAGE.—The bridal party escorting the daughter of Keshub Chunder Sen to Cuch Behar report their progress by telegraph as follows:—“Haldibari, Feb. 23. Left Haldibari on Tuesday morning. Grand procession. Five elephants, twenty palkis, sepoy, troopers, Sotabardars, and carts. Mekle-gunge and Matabhanga gave hearty reception. Reached Cuch Behar at ten last night. No demonstration; all was quiet and dark when the party entered the city. It is rumoured that the Dewan has protested against the marriage, and did not even go to welcome the bride. The Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner are most favourably disposed; the latter is evincing great interest.”

TRADE IN THE PUNJAB.—The report of the Financial Commissioner of the Punjab on the trade of that province for 1876-77 exhibits, as compared with the return of the previous two years, a decided falling off, not only in the value but in the weight of exports to countries beyond the frontier, and this notwithstanding the very marked improvement in the imports from Kabul. The balance of foreign trade is consequently very considerably against the Punjab. The report does not show how this excess of imports is adjusted. Inquiries were being made into the valuation of European cotton cloth so as to remove the uncertainty existing in the figures under that head, and consequently in the total value of the imports and exports of the province.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—On Friday night, March 8th, a singular accident happened on the Eastern Bengal Railway. The train was carrying baggage and camp equipage and some invalided officers and soldiers. Near Hulsu the passengers were startled by a loud explosion. When the train was stopped it was found that the covered van containing the camp equipage was blown up, nothing but the iron frame and wheels being left. It is supposed that matches had been left in one of the soldier's great coats, and that having ignited by the oscillation of the train it had smouldered among the tents until at last the fire reached the ammunition. The result of the accident was that when the officers and soldiers reached their destination they had no tents nor clothing, except what they had on. Inquiries are being made by the railway authorities.

CHOLERA AT SURAT AND INDOR.—A correspondent at Surat writes to the Bombay Gazette:—“Cholera has been raging in the village of Echapore, about three miles from here, for the last three weeks, and though the collector has been sending medical aid there, it is not to the extent that the emergency needs. The village is deserted, the Parsees and Hindus having left it in large numbers. Even the fire temple now lies unoccupied, the priest having run away with his sacred fire to another village. I believe if Mr. Pratt, the Collector, would enlarge his measures for the relief of the sufferers from this scourge it would abate; otherwise the consequences will be still more serious.” There is also a good deal of cholera just now in the city of Indor. There have been thirty deaths in three days. Throughout Central India the weather is warm and the crops fair; but water is scarce. In the Hyderabad Collectorate, in Sindh, small-pox is prevalent.

HIMALAYA WASTE LANDS.—It would appear that General Ramsay is doing admirable work in colonising waste lands at the base of the Himalayas. All along the foot of the hills, from the Rangunga to Huldwanee, what was once a dense forest, with a climate as deadly as the neighbourhood of the fabled upas tree, is now a garden, or at least a broad belt of waving grain-fields, stretching for miles and miles almost without a break. This has been effected by a system of small canals from the hill streams, the Bhabur itself being a waterless track, with the precious element deep below the general level of the land. The clearing of the forest and cultivation of the land has almost driven away the before-dreaded malaria, and gradually people from the densely-populated districts of Kumaon have been induced to settle down; and if the good work goes on for another twenty years, as it has done in the last twenty, the once deadly Bhabur will be as thickly populated as the most flourishing parts of Rohilkhand. So writes a correspondent who has seen what he writes about.

CASH BALANCES.—The following is the official statement of money in the Public Treasuries, and at the credit of the Government in the Presidency Banks and their branches on the last day of the month of January, 1878, with the corresponding figures on the same date in 1877 and 1876:—

Madras.

MAJOR EUAN SMITH.—Major Euan Smith is to remain at Hyderabad as First Assistant Resident. Major Waterfield is to officiate as Commissioner of Peshawar.

BANGALOR.—The Bangalor Bank case at Bangalor has come to an end. The cash-keeper has been sentenced to four years' rigorous imprisonment, and been ordered to pay a fine of Rs. 13,000.

MR. SAUNDERS.—The native community of Bangalor propose to entertain the retiring Chief Commissioner, Mr. Saunders, in some public manner before his departure. Mr. Saunders has, during his incumbency, made himself very popular with the natives.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE.—Sir Walter Morgan, Chief Justice of Madras, leaves shortly for Europe on a year's leave, and rumours at Madras point to Mr. Justice Cunningham as his locum tenens.

EURASIANS FOR THE ARMY.—It is stated that Sir Neville Chamberlain has recommended the enlistment of Eurasians for the Indian Army, and that his suggestions on the subject have been forwarded to the Government of India for consideration.

NOT FOR MADRAS.—We understand that there is some intention of appointing an assistant to the Director of Agriculture and Commerce in the North-Western Provinces. Meanwhile in Madras such an office as Director cannot be thought of.

NEW MEMBER OF LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—Mr. Alexander Mac kenzie, Chairman of the Madras Chamber of Commerce, has been appointed by his Grace the Governor to be an additional Member of the Madras Legislative Council.

BILLIARDS.—Mr. Roberts, the champion billiard-player, has defeated Major Campbell at Hyderabad, the latter sustaining a terrible defeat. Sir Salar Jung was present on the occasion, and evinced great interest in the proceedings.

BURMAH.—The King of Burmah contemplates despatching another mission to Italy to do honour to the new King of that country. The Italians and French in the King's service are said to be in arrears of pay, and would much prefer receiving their dues to seeing the King waste his money in these ridiculous embassies to Europe.

THE FAMINE.—Mr. C. A. Elliott, who is now in Allahabad, has been summoned to Calcutta to confer with the Viceroy about Mysor famine matters. Later he will return to Mysor, by the sea route to Madras, hoping to wind up his famine work there by the end of April, should no new bad symptoms develop themselves. Then he goes to Simla, to work with the Famine Commission.

SURGEON-MAJOR E. H. CONDON.—The death of this gentleman, of the Army Medical Department, is reported as having taken place at Madras on the 5th March. He came to Madras in November last on account of an affection of the lungs, which made his longer residence in England inadvisable. A cold caught on the voyage greatly aggravated the disease, and he succumbed to consumption.

NORTH ARCOT.—From the district of North Arcot it is reported that the north-east monsoon was a failure as regards the rain-fed tanks in many of the taluks, and that consequently nearly all such tanks are now completely dry. As distress is likely to continue on account of the deficient rainfall in a large portion of the district, it will probably be necessary to carry on the relief operations for some time to come in those parts.

GOLD MINING.—We understand that a preliminary meeting of some of the principal shareholders in the Alpha and Wynaad Prospecting Company took place on the 27th February, in consultation with the agents of Messrs. Nicol and Co. of Bombay, with the view to settle preliminary conditions to lay before the general meeting shortly to be convened. We wish the spirited speculation every success, and though we regret the management is to go out of our Presidency, we cannot help saying it serves us right for our want of public-spiritedness in allowing so much wealth to lie dormant so long. We are not yet acquainted with the terms proposed by Messrs. Nicol and Co.—South of India Observer.

MYSOR.—The statement regarding famine relief operations in the Province of Mysor, for the week ending the 23rd ult., says that "the weather has been warm, with dry easterly winds. There is now little field labour procurable, except in rice lands, and there has in consequence been a small but general increase on relief works. Permission has been given to revive the grain dole in villages to infirm and bed-ridden paupers, as there appeared likely to be a necessity for this precaution during the next two or three months. Measures have also been taken to strengthen the system of road-patrolling by the police along the main routes. The latest reports from the districts are satisfactory, and show no increased pressure on the people."

THE LATE J. MILLER, Esq.—We announce with very great regret the death of Mr. Miller, barrister-at-law, Administrator General of Madras. The learned gentleman was in the enjoyment of a large and deservedly lucrative practice when he was taken ill with fever, and is cut off, in the prime of life, at a period when judgment is ripe and discretion is mature. Mr. Miller died at the early age of forty-six. His loss will be severely felt by a large clientelle and by the profession to which he belonged. Mr. Miller was a very successful barrister, as well as a prosperous one. He had a happy knack of cross-examining, which was very telling. Into his private affairs it is not the business of a public journal to intrude. Those who have known him best, appreciated him most. He has left a widow and two daughters to mourn his loss here, and also a son in England. To them we offer our respectful sympathy and sorrowing condolence. A large number of the Madras public assembled at St. Mary's Cemetery to witness the funeral procession. Most of the members of the District Grand Lodge assembled at this residence, Adyar. The Members of the Lodges, Perfect Unanimity, Pitt Macdonald, and Universal Charity met the funeral at the Government House Bridge and marched in processional order to the Cemetery, the Band of the Madras Volunteer Guards playing the "Dead March in Saul." A party of six sergeants of the Royal Artillery carried the coffin, the pall being borne by the Hon. P. O'Sullivan, Advocate General; Mr. J. W. Handley, Government Pleader; Mr. H. J. Tarrant, Crown Prosecutor; Mr. G. P. Johnstone, and Mr. P. D. Shaw, barristers-at-law, and Mr. E. Barclay, Government Solicitor. The chief mourners were Mrs. Miller and the Misses Miller. The Rev. Dr. Sayers read the funeral service, after which Mr. Greateux, District Grand Secretary, performed the masonic service. Among those present were Sir William Robinson, K.C.S.I., Sir Walter Morgan, Chief Justice, the Hon. Mr. Justice Kindersley, Messrs. Ainslie, Munsie, Garstin and several others.

IMPERIAL LICENSE TAX.—The chief event of the week in Madras was the public meeting held at Patcheappah's Hall last Wednesday evening to adopt a memorial to the House of Commons against the Imperial License Tax on account of its unequal incidence, in that it fell only on Commerce and Trade, while Professions were untouched, whereby the officers of Government drawing handsome salaries, and well able to contribute their quota to the fund for the provision of future famines, which it is the object of the new taxation to form, escaped scotfree. The meeting was very largely attended, the mercantile and trading classes naturally forming the bulk of the assembly, while the Government officials and members of the local Bar were conspicuous by their absence. There were not many speakers—indeed, Madras is very deficient just now in the matter of public speakers—but there was not much to be said on the occasion, since, coming as it did so late in the day, this meeting had simply to go on the lines that had been already traversed by the previous meetings at Bombay and Calcutta.

THE GOVERNOR'S VISIT TO NOWSAREE.

The Sumnachar, commenting on the late consecration ceremony at Nowsaree, observes, that any one who has had an opportunity of inspecting the Towers of Silence and its internal arrangements cannot fail to be impressed with the superior sanitary philosophy inculcated in the Zoroastrian system. European visitors who had pictured in their minds a Tower of Silence as an abode of uncleanness and impurity have on becoming better acquainted with the inside of these structures frankly avowed that their previous conceptions were utterly at fault. Hitherto non-Zoroastrians have had no opportunity of ascertaining this by ocular inspection, and his Excellency Sir Richard Temple was probably the first European in this Presidency who with his own eyes witnessed the inside of a tower of the dead. Before his Royal Highness's visit to Bombay there was a strong prejudice among European residents against the very idea of approaching the tower precincts, but the example set by his Royal Highness has very generally been followed since, and it is quite fashionable now for sojourners in Bombay to "do" the towers. The Parsee community is to be congratulated on the circumstance of his Excellency the Governor having accepted their invitation to Nowsaree on many accounts, but on none more so than this, that the event has been the means of dissipating a dense cloud of ignorance and prejudice regarding the actual arrangements as to the disposal of the Parsee dead as carried out within the Towers. A long-standing blot has thus been erased from the fair fame of this community.

On Sir Richard Temple's address to the Parsees at Nowsaree, the Jam-i-Jamshed says:—"He who would truly reform the Parsees and restore them something of their primitive greatness must do as Sir Richard did at this great gathering. He should abandon the language of empty panegyric, and tell the people addressed some bitter yet wholesome truths. We think the Parsees are to consider themselves as singularly fortunate in having found in Sir Richard Temple the modern counterpart of the venerable and patriotic Roostum. That remarkable personage wrought a mighty deliverance for their ancestors from physical enemies; Sir Richard has devoted his attention to their moral and spiritual deliverance, and has verily proved himself in this respect a second Roostum. His Excellency's knowledge of Parsee history is so profound that it puts us, both laymen and priests, to shame. The valuable advice he tendered, that the practice of agriculture being enjoined by Zoroaster as a religious duty, the modern Parsees should no longer permit themselves to neglect this precept, has often been endorsed in these columns. Agricultural labour, leading to ownership in land, would not only restore the physical stamina of the Parsees, but would render them hardy and independent, and revive by its indirect influence on character some of their old military fire and daring. Thus morally and materially the bulk of the community would benefit by reverting to the fundamental teachings of Zoroaster. The Bombay market would be relieved of its plethora of quill-driving clerks, and the community, whose future prosperity is seriously threatened, would easily resume their former pre-eminence among other races."

STATION TALK.

HYDRABAD, Feb. 23.—Friday, the 22nd instant, will be a red letter-day in the annals of the 1st Belooch Regiment, as witnessing the presentation by H.E. Sir Charles Staveley, Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, of new colours to that very distinguished regiment. The interesting ceremony took place on the general parade-ground at Hyderabad at five o'clock in the afternoon. The whole brigade, consisting of the Battery of Artillery under Major Lewis, the Detachment 83rd Regiment under Captain Wyndham, and the Beloochees under Colonel Davis, were formed up in review order under Colonel Henry Beville, C.B. Shortly before five P.M. a large number of spectators also attended, including all the ladies and civilians present in the station. The Artillery were formed on the right, the Beloochees in the centre, and the 83rd on the left of the line. Punctual to the minute Sir Charles Staveley rode on to the ground attended by his Staff. The ceremony was at once commenced by the drooping of the old colours. This was the first appearance in public of the lately formed band of the regiment, and the manner in which it played must have given the greatest satisfaction to Colonel Beville and the officers. The old colours, which were now unfurled for the last time, were presented to the regiment at Hyderabad in 1861 by Sir A. Cunynghame, now commanding the forces at the Cape. They have been carried with honour and credit wherever the regiment has since served, and when the torn and tattered rags slowly defiled along to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne," many of those present in the ranks must have felt proud to remember that these colours had been carried by the gallant Belooches up to the heights of Magdala. The ceremony of trooping the colours was performed in a most creditable manner, and elicited the warm approval of the chief. The regiment was then formed into three sides of a square. Sir Charles Staveley, with his Staff, rode into the centre, and the new colours were unfurled and were formally handed over by his Excellency to Colonels Davis and Castell. The chief addressed the regiment in a flattering speech, to which Colonel Beville replied in the following words:—"May it please your Excellency—In the name of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men, I thank you for the honour your Excellency has conferred on the regiment by presenting our new colours to us. Believe me, Sir Charles, it is an honour and a distinction we all appreciate; not only as coming from the Commander-in-Chief of the Presidency, but as coming from a distinguished commander in the field, under whose orders a very large number of those now on parade this evening have had the good fortune to serve. The ceremony which we have been engaged in, together with the kind words your Excellency has been pleased to address us, will not be forgotten. Our records will hand them down, and your Excellency may rest assured that the colours now confided to the 1st Belooches will be as jealously guarded as those which proceeded them, and that wherever we may be called on to march to defend the right and punish the wrong-doer this regiment will as faithfully perform its duty to our Queen and Empress as it has hitherto always done, and I think I may also add, that by steadiness, good conduct and devotion to duty in quarters, the 1st Belooches will continue to merit the approval of the Government we serve." At the conclusion of Colonel Beville's speech, their Highnesses Mirs Hasan Ali and Husain Ali Talpoor, who had come on the ground to see the ceremony, were brought up by Colonel Beville and introduced to Sir Charles Staveley, who conversed with them for a few moments. Line was then reformed and the parade concluded by the brigade marching past, which was very well done, the band playing a spirited march. The marching of both the Belooches and the 83rd was excellent, and the Chief was evidently very much pleased. In the evening Colonel Beville and the officers entertained his Excellency's Staff and the whole station to a grand dinner at the mess. Sir Charles Staveley, who is unfortunately not in very good health, was unable to attend, but his place was ably filled by Brigadier General Brook, Adjutant General of the Bombay Army.—"Beacon," Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

EARL OF DALKEITH.—This nobleman returned to England by the mail steamer which left Bombay on the 11th inst.

THE "MALABAR."—H.M. troopship Malabar sailed from Bombay on March 14. The Jumna arrived out the same day.

ICE.—Fears of an ice famine in Bombay are apprehended; and the hot weather is said to have set in.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—Sir Charles Staveley, Commander-in-Chief of Bombay, arrived in Bombay on the 10th from Kurrachee.

BOMBAY VOLUNTEERS.—The Bombay Volunteer Corps was inspected on March 13 by its Honorary Colonel, Sir Richard Temple, who afterwards entertained the officers and non-commissioned officers at breakfast in tent on the Esplanade. His Excellency is of opinion that if troubles were to arise Bombay would furnish 1,000 volunteers.

NEW SCHOOL.—This evening the Church of England Frere-Fletcher School is to be opened by H.E. Sir Richard Temple. The new building is situated on the Esplanade, and has been in course of erection three years. The money which it has cost has been subscribed, and the Lady Superintendent (Miss Prescott) is now trying to raise £5,000 for its endowment.

THE GOVERNOR.—Sir R. Temple, on Thursday evening, the 14th March, presided at the exhibition of the Free Church of Scotland schools. His Excellency delivered an address, in the course of which he referred to the great services of the missionaries of the Free Church of Scotland in the cause of education, and paid a tribute to the memory of Dr. Duff, Dr. Wilson, Dr. Anderson, and other representatives of that Church. Miss Temple was also present, and distributed prizes to the girls.

PURCHASE OF THE FORESHORE PROPERTIES BY THE GOVERNMENT.—We are informed authoritatively that the Government of Bombay have received sanction to immediately open negotiations with owners of foreshore properties for the purchase of the whole of the foreshore rights, and for enlarging the Port Trust. It is intended to re-organise the Trust so as to bring the whole foreshore under its control. An estimate has been formed of the value of the foreshore properties, and a distinct offer will be made to the owners of each property, which, if rejected, will not be renewed. It should be clearly understood that it is only the foreshore rights, and not the whole landed estate of the Colaba Company which the Government seeks to acquire.—Bombay Gazette, March 11.

RIGHTS OF SHIPS CAPTAINS.—According to the Bombay Gazette, some indignation has been felt in Bombay at the conduct of the Political authorities in Aden. A person named Brownstein or Goldstein, accused of robbery in India, left here by a recent Italian steamer; a telegram was sent to the Political Resident at Aden to stop the steamer, capture Goldstein, and send him back to India. The captain, however, refused to give up his interesting passenger, and instead of asserting British authority vi et armis in British waters the Resident was content to put up with the captain's refusal and to telegraph the fact to Bombay. An effort will be made to capture the delinquent at Suez, whither a telegram has been despatched.

BOMBAY TOWN COUNCIL.—There was a rather warm discussion at the Bombay Town Council meeting on the 12th March. Mr. Nowrojee Furdoojee, in submitting a motion having to do with the lines of public streets, made certain remarks which were taken to cast a grave reflection upon one of the executive officials of the Municipality, and also, in a lesser degree, upon the Council itself. In the entire absence of anything like corroboration, some outspoken utterances fell from Sir Frank Souter and Mr. Kirkham, who enforced the importance of public men making themselves acquainted with the facts of a case before publicly saying that which may be regarded as injurious to another person's character. On the other hand, Mr. Nowrojee stoutly upheld his right to repeat to his brother councillors the complaints which from time to time reach his ears, without being compelled to ascertain if those complaints be true or not—a proposition which the Council, on broad general grounds, did not seem unwilling to support. At the same time, the meeting decided to adjourn Sir F. Souter's resolution, which practically obliges Mr. Nowrojee to produce proofs, although it should be added that the gentleman last named had previously voluntarily undertaken to do so.—Times of India, March 18.

THE OPIUM TRADE.—The opium revenue of 1877-78 bids fair to exceed the estimate of last spring by a considerable sum. But deficient rainfall last autumn has very seriously affected the Malwa crops of 1878—so much so that the best authorities anticipate that the opium yield this year in Malwa will not exceed one-half of an average year's out-turn. Of course the deficient crop will cause prices of Malwa opium to rise; already they have risen about twenty-five per cent. There will therefore be a short supply of Malwa opium to China this year—a result calculated to stimulate production and competition there. The Government of India is not at liberty to make good the deficiencies of the Malwa crop this year from the reserve of Bengal opium in store, because the quantity of the Bengal drug for sale in 1878 has been already notified and cannot be increased in good faith; but in order to keep down prices as much as possible meanwhile, and to supply some part of the deficiency of the Malwa crop, as soon as they can, the Government of India has decided to sell during the year 1879 60,000 chests of Bengal and Benares opium, being 6,000 chests more than the quantity notified for sale in 1878. We understand that at present there is no intention to raise permanently the annual provision of Bengal opium to this high figure, which, indeed, probably could not be maintained.—Bombay Gazette, March 11.

SOAP MANUFACTURE FOR INDIA.—Soap would perhaps prove a good thing for some enterprising Anglo-Indian to think about. During the first three-quarters of the current official year India imported over two lakhs worth from foreign countries, and at the same time exported nearly 2 1/2 lakhs worth of the indigenous manufacture. Mr. J. E. O'Connor, in his review of Indian trade for 1876-77, says, "It is surprising that soap should continue to figure in our list of imports at all;" indeed, India ought not to supply herself, but to send far more to foreign countries. The native soap now exported is a rough, unsavoury article not much used even by natives themselves, who notoriously prefer belati saboon if they can get it. Yet in India there is tallow, oil, potash, soda, all the materials, except science and capital, wanted for soap-making. Mr. O'Connor suggests that soap-boiling establishments after the model of those at Marseilles might be started either in the North-West Provinces or the Punjab, and make enormous profits, besides improving the sanitary condition of the country.

Mr. C. U. AITCHISON, C.S., will not go to Mysore as Chief Commissioner, as at first arranged. He has accepted the Chief Commissionership of British Burma.

INDIAN PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.

The Right Hon. the Earl of Northbrook, Governor-General of India from 1872 to 1876, was examined by the Select Parliamentary Committee on Thursday, the 4th inst.; Mr. Childers, M.P., in the chair. His lordship, in his examination in chief, answered questions as to what was the policy of the Government of India during his term of office in regard to carrying out public works.

Lord Northbrook said that when he arrived in India he found public opinion strongly opposed to any increase of taxation. The policy had been inaugurated by Lord Mayo not to carry on public works on any large scale in the face of increased taxation. At that time the finances of India represented a good annual surplus over several years. Had it not been for the famine of 1873 and 1874 we should have been able to carry on the public works then in progress by expenditure taken out of revenue. The object was to carry out public works upon sound financial grounds, with or without loans. The great principle we had in view was that irrigation and other works should be made reproductive. The Money Market operations for loans we expected to ultimately meet by surplus revenue, and we did not attempt to borrow without calculating how the loans could be met by this means.

Mr. Fawcett observed that the term "reproductive works" was an indefinite term; public works were made to appear reproductive in the accounts of the Department. But the reproductiveness of an undertaking ought to be shown by its own proceeds.

Lord Northbrook was understood to say that he trusted to the financial system to prove whether the Government works were reproductive or not. Of course no works could be undertaken which did not promise a fair return for outlay. His lordship approved of funds being raised, limited to year by year, and applied to the systematic carrying out of railway and irrigation works, to meet the contingency of future famines.

The Chairman: Your lordship has seen the evidence of General Dickens, which so fully represents the policy of the Government in carrying out public works under his (General Dickens's) superintendence. Would you state to the committee your views on General Dickens's evidence, whether the system of carrying out railway or irrigation works under General Dickens met with your own approval?

Lord Northbrook: I was perfectly satisfied with the policy carried out at the time. I approved also of General Rundall's valuable engineering reports of the progress of the undertakings in hand. I advised this officer to make a report of the position and progress of irrigation works throughout India. He acted upon my suggestion and prepared such a report, which was sent home to the India-office. It is a valuable document, dealing with the more recent irrigation works up to March, 1874. General Rundall does not merely go into details as to the advance made with the undertakings, he offers views and suggestions of his own on improvements that might be made in following up the system. The prospective character of General Rundall's report renders it open to opinion, but his lordship said he had faith in the opinions of so experienced an engineer officer as General Rundall, as Inspector-General of Public Works.

A great number of questions having been put to his lordship to test his views on the policy and utility of public works carried out during his Viceroyalty, Lord Northbrook expressed his entire approval of the modus operandi of the Public Works Department during his term of office, but his lordship stated that his cardinal principle was that public works should not be prosecuted out of taxation, but only out of either revenue or loan. This was the policy of the late Lord Mayo, and he had fully approved of it and endorsed it.

To questions put to his lordship with respect to the system of accounts kept by the Public Works Department of India, Lord Northbrook expressed his satisfaction that by a recent despatch of the Secretary of State for India a plan of keeping accounts, separating extraordinary works from ordinary works, had been recommended for the adoption of the Public Works Establishment in India. After some inquiries respecting the effects of the famine and the state of the silver market on Public Works loans, the committee adjourned.

Miscellaneous.

OFFICIAL APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. Horace G. Walpole has been appointed Private Secretary of State to Mr. Hardy, and Mr. W. J. Maitland as Assistant Private Secretary and Précis Writer.

EGYPTIAN AFFAIRS.—Mr. Rivers Wilson, accompanied by Mr. Primrose, private secretary to the Financial Secretary of the Treasury, left England on the 4th inst., for Egypt, in connection with the financial affairs of the Khedive.

THE EUROPEAN CRISIS.—A telegram from Calcutta, dated April 5, states that, in consequence of the European political crisis the Indian Government has under consideration the adoption of measures which are, however, of a purely precautionary character.

ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION.—This bank announce a dividend of 5 per cent. for the half-year, making, with the dividend previously paid, 10 per cent. for the year ending Dec. 31, 1877. To provide for exceptional losses they withdraw £175,000 from the reserve fund, which will then stand at £325,000.

THE MINISTRY.—The Marquis of Salisbury has been appointed Minister for Foreign Affairs; Mr. Gathorne Hardy Secretary for India; Colonel Stanley Secretary for War; Sir H. Selwin-Ibbetson Financial Secretary to the Treasury; Sir Mathew White Ridley Under-Secretary for Home Affairs; Viscount Sandon President of the Board of Trade; Lord George Hamilton Vice-President of the Council; and Mr. E. Stanhope Under-Secretary for India.

INDIA OFFICE, March 28.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Augustus Rivers Thompson, Esq., c.s.i., of the Bengal Civil Service, to be an ordinary member of the Council of the Governor-General of India, in succession to Sir Edward Clive Bayley, K.C.S.I. The Queen has also been pleased to appoint Gregory Charles Paul, Esq., barrister-at-law, to be her Majesty's Advocate-General for Bengal; Patrick O'Sullivan, Esq., barrister-at-law, to be her Majesty's Advocate-General for Madras; and John Marriott, Esq., barrister-at-law, to be her Majesty's Advocate-General for Bombay.—Gazette.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £500,000 in bills on India were received on April 3 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £448,500, at an average rate of 1s. 8<sup>7</sup>/<sub>32</sub>d.; to Bombay, £50,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8<sup>6</sup>/<sub>32</sub>d.; and to Madras, £1,500, at an average rate of 1s. 8<sup>7</sup>/<sub>32</sub>d. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 8 11-16d. will receive about 4 per cent., all above in full; and on Bombay at 1s. 8 11-16d. in full. The results of this week's allotment show that the Council have only been able to dispose of their bills at a reduction of nearly  $\frac{1}{4}$  per cent. as compared with last week.

DR. LEITNER.—According to a circular recently published in India, Dr. Leitner, of Lahor, intends to return to England, in order to open an institution for young Hindoos who are preparing for the Indian Civil Service Examinations. Care will be taken that residence in the institute shall not entail loss of caste. There will be Hindoo cooks, and even water from the Ganges. Similar arrangements will be made to meet the case of Mohammedan pupils. The institution is to be supported at first by subscriptions from native gentlemen and noblemen.—Academy.

DEATH OF LIEUT.-GENERAL H. G. HART.—The death is announced at Biarritz, in his sixty-ninth year, of Lieut.-General Henry George Hart, the founder and editor of "Hart's Army List." General Hart entered the army in 1829, and served for many years in the 49th Regiment. He was afterwards appointed to the command of a depot battalion at Templemore, and on July 8, 1856, he commanded a force of 574 men of the battalion which suppressed a mutiny of militia at Nenagh, in which there were killed and wounded on both sides. General Hart was thanked for his services on this occasion by Lord Seaton, the commander of the forces in Ireland, and by the major-general commanding the district. General Hart has left three sons in the Service, viz., Captain A. F. Hart, 31st Regiment, brigade major at Aldershot, and Lieutenants R. C. Hart and H. H. Hart, Royal Engineers.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM INDIA.—The Crocodile, which has been delayed by head winds, arrived at Portsmouth on Monday evening, the 1st inst., from Bombay. She brings 516 invalids and 175 time-expired men for Netley, 63 women, 136 children, and the following officers:—Lieut. Hart, R.E.; Lieut. Brown, 8th Foot; Lieut. Mack, 12th Lancers; Lieut. Money, 5th Foot; Capt. Meredith, 18th Foot; Capts. Carleton and Partridge, 25th Foot; Capts. Paulis and Tilden, 60th Foot; Lieuts. Jamieson and Keighley, of the Staff Corps; Capt. Pearson, 106th Foot; Lieut. Henriques, R.A.; Capt. Young, 6th Foot; Col. Travers, 48th Foot; Capt. Doyne, 6th Foot; Majors Brind and Bradburne, 17th Foot; Lieut. Lushington, 54th Foot; Lieut. Littledale, 65th Foot; Capt. Purdon, 85th Foot; Lieut. Mansel, 68th Foot; Capt. Bullen, 15th Hussars; Major A. de V. Tupper, R.A.; Capt. Crowther Benyon, 1st Foot; Lieut. Rae, 14th Foot; Lieut. Field, 17th Foot; Lieut. Hewat, 25th Foot; Surgs.-Major Ogilvy, Ashton, and Simon, and Surgs. Connolly, Sharpe, Ruxton, and Dwyer, of the Army Medical Department.

INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The half-yearly general meeting of the Indo-European Telegraph Company (Limited) was held a few days ago at the City Terminus Hotel. Colonel James Holland, the chairman, presided, and in moving the adoption of the report, an abstract of which has already appeared, reminded the shareholders of the information conveyed to them on a previous occasion of the disaster to their lines owing to the war. Between sixty and seventy miles of cable bordering on the Black Sea were destroyed, and they took measures to lay an alternative line with the assistance of the Russian Government. Fortunately they had had the foresight to accumulate a reserve fund, which enabled them to get over this difficulty. The cable had been made by Messrs. Siemens, and, with the assistance of the Russian Government, it had been laid, and, after some interval, business had been carried on as usual. They had applied to the Russian Government to recoup them for the expense and the loss of revenue sustained by the company, but they could not tell what would be the result of this application, although they believed it would be more or less in the company's favour. Mr. W. H. Barlow seconded the motion, which was adopted.

PROMOTIONS.—In the year 1870 the commissions of all existing British major-generals were antedated to March 6, 1868, to give them rank above Indian Local and Indian Staff Corps major-generals, who, it was found, were unfairly superseding them. This was done on the recommendation of a Royal Commission, and, with trifling variations as to antedates, the arrangement held good until the promotion of Colonel Thomas Ross, of the Imperial List, December 16, 1876, whose promotion was antedated to October 28, 1868. Thus the actual major-generals, from E. A. Whitmore to T. Ross, were virtually senior to the eighteen or nineteen Indian major-generals, whose commissions were dated November and December, 1868, 1869, 1870, and 1871. Now let us see how the vested rights of these British general officers (from Hart to Ross included) are protected. On the Retirement Warrant coming out in October last, the whole of the Indian major-generals were promoted over their heads. Thus the process of supersession, so carefully guarded against in 1870, has only been postponed; and not only this, when vacancies occur on the Indian Staff-Corps List of lieutenant-generals we shall find Major-General T. A. Carey, whose commission as such, and those of many others, dates October 1, 1877, promoted lieutenant-generals over British officers who have held that rank since 1868. This was never intended by the framers of the order of 1870. A simple remedy suggests itself in the separation at once of the Staff Corps and Imperial Lists and antedate of every British major-general on promotion to October 1, 1877. The matter may seem a trifling one to civilians, but it is not so to the officers concerned.—Army and Navy Gazette.

THE NEW INDIAN SECRETARY.—The appointment of Mr. Hardy—not long to remain Mr. Hardy, however—to replace Lord Salisbury at the India-office, will be received with general satisfaction. The post needs certain special qualifications for the proper discharge of its duties, which Mr. Hardy has shown himself to possess in no small measure during his reign at the War-office. Firmness, administrative tact, and sound judgment are the chief requisites, and the new Secretary will be credited with these qualities, even by his political opponents. He took over the War-office, it will be remembered, at a peculiarly trying moment, when the Army Reorganisation scheme of Lord Cardwell had done little more than produce general disorganisation. The old Purchase system—which, whatever its faults, certainly ensured a steady and reasonably rapid flow of promotion—had been abolished without a plan being simultaneously adopted to prevent stagnation of promotion. There were numberless other points where the military machinery of this country had got out of gear, and to Mr. Hardy was left the labour of producing order out of disorder. This end has now been almost entirely realised, and he hands over to Colonel Stanley a very different legacy of labour from that which he himself inherited from Lord Cardwell. In the late Financial Secretary to the Treasury the English army has obtained all it could possibly desire in its administrative head, Colonel Stanley's close acquaintance with military matters, as well as his mastery of the minute details of army organisation, rendering him an admirable selection for the post. The only matter which gives cause for regret in this transfer of Ministers is the loss to the Conservative party in the Lower House of Mr. Hardy's brilliant debating powers. His elevation to the peerage was thoroughly well earned by a long course of eminent services to the State, and for some time past it was felt that the high reward could not be much longer deferred. Yet, although the public will acknowledge the claim of the late War Secretary to this distinction, the Commons will not yield one of their most successful debaters to the Lords without a grudging sense of unfair treatment by fate.—Glob.

THE DEPRECIATION OF SILVER.—A Paper on this subject was read at the Society of Arts on March 29 by Colonel J. T. Smith, R.E., F.R.S. The author, after referring to the earnest desire manifested for the last seventeen years by Indian statesmen and the public to introduce a gold standard for the currency of the empire and the difficulty of effecting it, alleged that circumstances have now changed so as to make it quite easy if done without delay. He first pointed out that if the coinage of silver were stopped and the Indian currency were obtainable only by means of "Council bills" issued without limit to meet the wants of trade, that would constitute a change of standard, the new dimension of which would be the price in English gold—that is, the rate of exchange paid for the rupee. After drawing attention to the fact that, by accounts to March last, rupees were still passing generally in India for their former value of 2s. each, and that it is only the rate of exchange which had altered, the author proposed to stop the coinage of silver, and thereby cause the rate of exchange to rise gradually to 2s. the rupee, at the same time opening the mints for the coinage of gold, which would flow into the country by the course of trade. It was shown that if it be considered desirable to prevent the least alteration of the present natural distribution of the precious metals throughout the world this would be easily effected by the Secretary of State selling his "Councils bills" cheaper than gold, say at 1s. 11½d. per rupee. In that case the establishment of the gold currency would take a longer time (but the rupee would continue to be quite as usual for all purposes of commerce as at present), as it would be supplied only out of the large mass of gold (£150,000,000 or £160,000,000) already in India, and the annual supplies regularly imported in rapidly-increasing quantities, already amounting to £5,000,000 per annum; the present inability to use which, in a severe monetary crisis, is noticed as a cruel injury and injustice to the natives of India, who, throughout the entire length and breadth of the empire, have expressed their unanimous desire for its legal currency being established.

SUNDAY OBSERVANCE IN INDIA.—On Thursday afternoon, the 4th inst., a large deputation of representatives of missionary and philanthropic institutions interested in the welfare of India, and of the committee of the Lord's Day Observance Society, had an interview with Mr. Gathorne Hardy, at the India Office, to present a memorial urging an amendment of the Civil Procedure Code for India enacted last year by the Indian Legislative Council, by a schedule of which the Lord's Day Act of Charles II. was repealed for that country. The memorialists submitted that if the Act were repealed without some equal safeguard being substituted the legal week of work would consist of seven days, to the serious injury of the inhabitants of that great country, who were being trained to labour, both of body and mind, of a more severe and exhausting character than had been their position hitherto. The separation of the Lord's Day from the ordinary vocations of life under the sanction of law had been of inestimable advantage to the many hundreds of Christian congregations and communities now established in India, and the memorialists prayed, therefore, that the sanction of the Imperial Government might not be given to the Civil Procedure Code until, either by the retention of the working and trading sections of the Act of Charles II., or by the substitution for them of restrictions of a like character; the code should be so amended as to secure that the legal working week in India should continue to be of six days only. Mr. Hardy, in reply, said he much regretted that Lord Salisbury, who had been engaged in the correspondence on the subject, could not have been there to receive the deputation, for he had only become acquainted with the actual circumstances of the case within the last few hours. He could well understand that those who took a deep interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire should feel surprised at what had taken place with regard to the Civil Procedure Code, but as a matter of fact it had been decided that the Lord's Day Act did not apply to India, and its repeal was therefore a merely nominal repeal, leaving the state of things unaltered. He would submit the memorial to the Indian Government, and communicate with them to ascertain if any steps could be taken to meet the wishes of the deputation. The deputation then withdrew.

CENSORSHIP OF THE INDIAN PRESS.—A meeting of Indian gentlemen was held on March 29 at the Victoria Hall, Notting-hill, to discuss the Act recently passed in the Imperial Legislative Council at Calcutta, to destroy the independence of the vernacular Press in India. Mr. G. M. Tagore occupied the chair, and, in opening the meeting, said they must be careful to remove the question they came to discuss from the regions of passion or futile declarations about liberty. He could not, as a barrister of Gray's Inn, engage in anything which might affect the stability of the British Empire. As Indian subjects they enjoyed the liberties of Englishmen wherever they went. They had now come to discuss the question whether they, who as natives had hitherto been brought under the paternal Government of England, were now to be disinherited by a body of officials in India. The speaker then gave a short account of the history of the Indian Press, and quoted the opinion which Sir Charles Metcalfe had once expressed, that it was not sound policy to exercise occasional censorship over the Press; and declared in favour of leaving it to the enjoyment of its supposed liberty. The Chairman further said if this were the case with India when it was yet under the Government of a monopoly, why should its subjects, now in their maturity and manhood, be deprived of that privilege? If the articles of which the Viceroy said he had 1,500 extracts were really seditious, there was a Penal Act to meet such cases. Mr. V. R. Dhaivagan then moved a resolution to the effect "That this meeting looks with grave apprehension at the step recently taken by the Indian Government with regard to the censorship of the vernacular press in India." This being seconded, the motion was carried with acclamation. It was also resolved that a committee should be formed for the purpose of taking the necessary steps for bringing the Act under the notice of the British public and Parliament, with a view to its repeal. In moving the latter resolution, Mr. K. M. Dutt stated that he had received assurances of support from many members of Parliament and Liberal clubs. Several of the latter were forming themselves into committees for the purpose of obtaining the repeal of the obnoxious Act. Mr. Dutt also spoke with considerable appreciation of the utterances of the Daily News upon the question. The gentlemen forming the committee having been agreed upon, a vote of thanks was unanimously accorded to the English Press who supported the meeting's view of the Act, especial mention being made of the Daily News.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, April 2.—INDIAN MEDICAL APPOINTMENTS.—Colonel LOYD-LINDSAY informed Mr. O'DONNELL that the secretary to the Surgeon-General in India is selected from the medical officers serving in India, and that the latest appointment was so made by the military authorities.

SIR R. TEMPLE AND PUBLIC MEETINGS IN INDIA.—Mr. O'DONNELL asked the Under-Secretary for India whether it was true that Sir R. Temple had refused the use of the Town Halls at Bombay and Calcutta for a meeting called to petition Parliament on the subject of Municipal Government Reform.—Lord G. HAMILTON said that they had no official information upon the subject, but he had seen statements in the newspapers to the effect that Sir R. Temple, acting in his undoubted right, had on a certain occasion refused to allow the use of the town halls. Sir R. Temple was acting within his undoubted right, and, as her Majesty's Government had received no communication from India or any complaint from those interested, it did not seem to them that any expression of opinion was required.—Mr. BRIGHT:—I beg to ask whether this refusal to allow the Town Hall to be used has been put in force before, or whether this is the first occasion that the Town Hall has been refused when an application has been made to hold a public meeting in it?—Lord G. HAMILTON said that beyond the information contained in the newspapers he knew nothing.—Mr. O'DONNELL gave notice that on a future occasion he would call attention to this interference with public meetings.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF THE PUNJAB AND THE EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.—Mr. O'DONNELL asked the Under-Secretary for India whether this official had refused permission to the above department to hold an Educational Congress.

Lord G. HAMILTON:—I can only say that we have no information of any kind upon this question.

INDIAN FAMINES AND TAXATION.—Mr. FAWCETT proceeded to call attention to the financial statement recently made at Calcutta by Sir John Strachey, and moved a series of resolutions condemning the increased salt duty, the trades licence tax, and the proposed expenditure of the fund to be created in India for the relief of famines. Mr. Fawcett was of opinion that the fund should not be expended on public works, but should be appropriated to the reduction of debt, or should be kept in a separate account as a reserved duty invested.—Mr. MACIVER moved an amendment, suggesting that the trades licence-tax should be supplemented by a similar tax to be imposed on persons who derive their income from other sources than trade. Mr. MacIver further asked the House to express the opinion that the proposed famine fund should be expended on public works.—The discussion was continued in a House averaging from six to fourteen members, by Sir GEORGE CAMPBELL, Mr. SMOLLETT, Mr. GRANT, Mr. BIRLEY, Mr. MASSEY, Mr. C. B. DENISON, and Dr. LYON PLAYFAIR.—Lord GEORGE HAMILTON, in replying, warmly defended the financial policy of Sir John Strachey. With respect to the increased salt duty imposed on Madras and Bombay, he explained that it arose from a rearrangement which, primarily equalising the tax throughout India, would presently be followed by a general reduction. As to the Trades Licence-tax, he acknowledged the justice of some of the criticisms levelled against it, but said there was no alternative between it and an income-tax. If the people of India preferred an income-tax he was sure that Lord Lytton and Sir John Strachey "would be happy to accommodate them." As to the third resolution, Lord George pointed out that a Committee was now sitting to inquire into the question of the expenditure on public works in India.—Mr. FAWCETT dividing the House twice, the first resolution was negated by 163 votes against 87; and the second by 159 against 96. The third resolution was not put, after which the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, April 5.—BOMBAY TOWN HALL.—Mr. HARDY, in reply to FAWCETT, said that the Government of Bombay, in refusing the use of the Town Hall for a meeting to protest against legislation, followed in the course pursued in 1875.—Mr. FAWCETT: Is the right hon. gentleman aware that the town-hall at Calcutta was allowed to the inhabitants of Calcutta for exactly the same purpose as the town-hall at Bombay was refused?—Mr. HARDY: I am not able to answer that question.

THE CLIMATE OF BOMBAY.—Mr. Frederick Chambers, the District Superintendent for the Bombay Presidency, has published a sketch of the meteorology of that region for the year 1876, with the view of seeking for the causes of occasional deficiency of the South-west Monsoon rains. The general result to which he is led is, that the same principles which explain the usual alternation of the seasons will also in a great measure afford the interpretation of the anomalies of the rainy system in different years.—Academy.

INDIAN ZOOLOGY.—The work of Dr. J. Anderson on the zoological collections formed by the Yunnan Expedition, and that of Mr. W. T. Blandford on those of the Yarkand Embassy, are both rapidly progressing, but are still retarded by the necessary delays caused by the preparation of the plates in Europe. In ornithology we may draw attention to Colonel Godwin-Austen's reprint of Jerdon's standard work on "The Birds of India." The original edition has been long out of print, and consequently difficult to procure, and many working naturalists both in India and at home will welcome this new edition. Being a textual reproduction it may be quoted as the original, while the "Supplementary Notes" published by the author in the Ibis of 1871-72, are added in the form of an appendix. "These notes were the last work upon which Dr. Jerdon was employed, and the present reprint is thus a record of all he wrote in connection with 'The Birds of India' up to the time of his death." The island of Ceylon was not included in the limits to which Jerdon confined himself, and information regarding its very interesting avi-fauna has still to be gathered from various scattered memoirs, of which the most important is Mr. Holdsworth's excellent "Catalogue," published in the Proceedings of the Zoological Society in 1872. We have therefore had much pleasure in receiving the prospectus of a "History of the Birds of Ceylon," by Capt. W. Vincent Legge, R.A. Captain Legge has spent more than eight years in the island, during which time he devoted all his leisure to the study of its ornithology. His work will be published in parts, and will form a quarto volume.—Academy.

STORY OF A HORSE.—The following story about a horse case is told by a Madras correspondent:—"A gallant aide-de-camp of the Duke's purchased a horse some three months ago, but, after he had been broken, did not like him, and sent him to a dealer to be sold. A gentleman turns up who requires a thoroughly broken and perfectly quiet horse, and buys this one, on the dealer's recommendation. When he gets the horse and tries to mount him, he is very ignominiously thrown, so he sends the horse back to the dealer's stable and says he won't have him; he is not a quiet horse. The dealer refuses to take him back, and tells the purchaser (as the dealer considers him) that the horse is at the stables at his, the purchaser's risk. The horse, to make matters more complicated, dies, and this may be assumed as an evidence of ill temper on the part of the beast. I think, however, I am not to give an opinion. Well, the dealer sues the gentleman, who, he says, bought the horse for the money. The gentleman says he did not buy him, for he only agreed to take him if quiet, and that he was not quiet, and that the sale was never concluded. The case is a hard one, hard enough for Vanity Fair. The horse being dead it is difficult to prove now whether he was quiet or not. Then different men have different opinions as to quietness in horses. Several gentlemen have been called as witnesses, but good riders, especially if young, are apt to call anything they can sit themselves quiet. Some say the horse's temper was angelic, some that it was diabolical, and others allege that the supposed purchaser, being a short man and not being able to mount easily, put his toe into the horse's ribs and made him fidgety. Altogether, the case is so difficult to decide and the evidence so conflicting, that the learned judge postpones his judgment for a week."—Naval and Military Gazette

THE PUNJAB BRIDGES.—Across the five rivers of the Punjab, says the Civil and Military Gazette, there are twenty bridges of boats, in addition to 365 ferries, both together producing an income of over five lakhs of rupees. Owing to railway complications the bridges at Wazirabad and Jhelum had to be taken under direct management last year, instead of being farmed, and for the same reason their income fell off woefully. The year was an unlucky one for boat bridges. On several occasions unusual and unexpected floods spoilt all the arrangements made. It is worthy of note that one bridge on the Jhelum river was formed before the middle of September, and another kept up till the middle of July. The 365 ferries are managed by 1,111 native boats, with a compliment of 3,900 men. The Punjab rivers may confer many blessings in other ways, but they are a sad hindrance to communications in the flood season. Only those who have spent from four in the morning till six in the evening crossing the Indus in a small boat (possibly even without an awning) on a day in mid-June or July can realise the troubles of the isolation caused by the Indus to the strip of English territory on its western bank.

The Bill to consolidate and amend the Abkari Law of the Presidency of Bombay has passed its second reading. The proprietors of the "alienated villages" who are affected by the Bill have addressed a memorial to the Viceroy upon the subject.

The amount of cash in the Reserve Treasury of the Government of India on February 28 was Rs. 1,52,67,568.

here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.
postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.;

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Postoffice, Piccadilly.
NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,
&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c.
It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 8d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, March 25; Allahabad and Madras, March 23; Calcutta, March 22.

THE censorship of the Vernacular Press and Financial Statement are the topics which, with the Famine and Famine Commissions, still take up the chief attention of the Indian public, and were largely dwelt upon by the Local Press at the time of departure of the Mails. In the Times of India is the reply of the Madras Famine Committee to the Mansion House telegram, asking if a further appeal to the public would be made by the Governor. We republish the first part:—"Distress continues over special areas. Will probably intensify for a few weeks and last altogether some months, owing to high prices. The Governor does not think there is ground for renewed appeal. Committee concur in this opinion. Three lakhs and a-half still in hand." The response was a further remittance of £4,000, and the postponement by the Mansion House Committee, of their intention to dissolve. Progress statements would now be issued fortnightly instead of once a week.

THE Friend of India has an interesting account of the distress in the North-West. We are told that to arrive at the true state of suffering, the traveller should go into the villages, and not trust to appearances on the highway, notwithstanding the dead bodies he may frequently light upon there. A few minutes' conversation with the villagers would, it is stated, supply rather surprising statistics. "In one place sixteen people are said to have died of starvation; in another, twenty-two; in another, thirty-five; in another, forty-five. In sixteen villages lately selected at random in a district in Rohilkand, 373 names were given by the inhabitants as those of such of their number as had actually perished of want. . . . If proof were required of the general extent of distress, it could be found in the fact that the Brahmins, in proportion to their numbers, contribute fairly to the common tale of want. Again, almost every village presents a certain number of empty houses; some, two or three only; others, whole rows; and the fugitives are no mere day-labourers or people who live by supplying the necessities of the agricultural community, but they are the tenants themselves. They have run away, unable to contend with present want and the prospect of the landlord's future exactions."

THE numbers on the relief works at Agra on the 14th inst., were 1,093 in the relief-houses, and 11,939 on the relief-works. —The reports on the state and prospects of the crops in the Central Provinces are unfavourable.—The prospects in Madras are such that the Public Works Department has asked district engineers to send in promptly reports on large works that have been projected in Bellary, Cuddapah, Coimbatore, North Arcot, and Salem.

WE cannot but think that sufficient cause has been shown for the restriction of the Vernacular Press Bill to papers in the native language. Yet the Pioneer believes that Government at one time doubted "whether the new Law ought not to have a wider application—that is, to English as well as to vernacular papers." The Bombay Times would naturally like to know the grounds for the Pioneer's belief.

THE Bombay Times just received notifies changes in the Department of Customs and Secretariat. Mr. Charles B. Pritchard, C.S., Collector of Salt Revenue, and on special duty to submit a scheme for the working of the Akbari system and for general management, had been appointed Commissioner of Customs and Reporter General of External Commerce for the Presidency of Bombay. He was to take charge of his appointment on the date of departure of the mail. Mr. C. Gonne was to act as Chief Secretary to Government in charge of the Separate Department, retaining charge of the Political, Judicial, and Educational Departments during Mr. Ravenscroft's absence in England; Mr. J. Nugent as Secretary to Government in the Revenue, General, and Financial Departments, and Mr. J. Monteath, C.S., for Mr. Nugent.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SIR ARNOLD KEMBALL is, we are glad to see, in England again, safe and sound, after a hard and stirring time passed in Asia Minor and amid Ottoman camps. These later experiences, combined with his long official residence in Baghdad, and overland journeys between that city and Constantinople, should constitute him facile princeps in the list of authorities on Turkey and the Turks. It is not a mere knowledge of outside life to which we refer, and which may be acquired by clever travellers, but that thorough acquaintance with prejudice, habit and language which alone fits an otherwise skilful diplomatist to deal with Orientals. The distinguished officer had the honour of an interview with her Majesty on Thursday last.

WE give prominent place to the published acknowledgment of the Punjab Government, under date the 14th March, for the services "zealously and conscientiously performed for many years in positions of responsibility" by Brigadier-General Keyes, C.B., commandant of the Frontier Force. That officer was about to make over the duties of his command to his successor:—

Brigadier-General Keyes was first appointed to the Punjab Frontier Force in 1849. He commanded the 1st Punjab Infantry for a period of nine years, and whilst at the head of this regiment he distinguished himself in the expedition against the Kabul Khel Wazirs in 1860; in the Umbeyla Campaign in 1863; and in successfully conducting a secret expedition against the Bazotis in 1869. In March 1869 Brigadier-General Keyes was transferred to the command of the Corps of Guides (Queen's Own), and in April 1870 he was selected for the honourable position of Commandant of the Punjab Frontier Force. During the period of Brigadier-General Keyes's command the Frontier has been for the most part undisturbed, and Government has not been compelled to undertake operations of a punitive character beyond the border, excepting a short expedition into the Dour valley in 1872, and the recent operations against the Jowaki Afridis,—both of which have been under Brigadier-General Keyes's personal command brought to a successful issue. During his tenure of office the Punjab Frontier Force has been armed with improved weapons; its high character for efficiency has been not only maintained, but considerably improved; this improved efficiency has been practically tested by the recent operations in the field. The Lieutenant-Governor desires, on the resignation by Brigadier-General Keyes of the command which he has held so long and so creditably, to express his warm acknowledgments of his service on the Punjab Frontier.

HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM had intimated his intention of paying a visit to Pondicherry. Such a visit should be in every way beneficial, and will, doubtless, furnish an agreeable episode in the Madras Governor's Indian career. The Hotel de Ville was to be put in order for the reception of the distinguished party expected.

A RUMOUR has reached Lahor that a kossid had arrived at Peshawar with news that the Amir of Kabul was willing to receive the usual subsidy from the British Government.

WE learn from the same paper that "an interesting attempt is about to be made, under the auspices of Government, to open up more ports along the seaboard of British India. The hope of obtaining improved facilities for the distribution of food in any future famine counts for something in the project; but reasons for desiring more ports, if the natural features of the coast line will allow of their development, are sufficiently numerous, independently of this idea, to justify the special survey which is now to be undertaken." The appointment of Colonel Thomason, R.E., to proceed from England with the object of inspecting the coast is said to have originated in the representation made on the subject from India; while Sir Andrew Clarke's interest in the scheme makes it especially hopeful.

THE Pioneer learns, with satisfaction, from the Turkestan Gazette, that more Indian tea is sold in the markets of Russian Central Asia, and of the neighbouring Khanates, than the Russians quite care for—anxious as they are to develop the overland tea trade with China via Kiachta. But it is not quite so satisfactory to learn from the same Gazette, of which the Pioneer gives a translated extract, that the object of the authorities in Turkestan is to counteract the ill effect upon the Russo-China trade, of the import of teas from India via Bukhara, by the levy of an import duty. The abolition of a native custom-house establishment appears, however, to have stood in the way of the Local Government in carrying out their intentions. Perhaps, as the Pioneer expresses it, the language of the Gazette is a lament over "the apathy of the authorities who might levy a duty on the Indian tea with ease and at a very little expense."

ACCORDING to the Madras Athenaeum, the Emperor of China has issued an edict prohibiting opium-smoking throughout the country, particularly among officials, scholars, and soldiery. The edict was issued at the instance of his Excellency Kwoh Sung Tao and his colleague, Envoys to Great Britain. It commands generals, governors-generals, and governors in the various provinces to draw up regulations adapted to local circumstances, for carrying out this prohibition, which is to take effect three years hence.

MR. HANBURY's assertion in the House, on Tuesday last, that "no Foreign Office in the world was so lamentably deficient in information respecting Turkey in Asia as our own," is rather sweeping, and it is followed by one of similar character, to the effect that at the present moment no trustworthy account is to be had of the different populations in that extensive region. We are inclined to think that our official shelves contain far more information on the subject than is supposed, and we are quite sure that the men and means are, or have been, available to the State, for procuring almost all that we can require. But the statistics of Turkish population are perplexing to Turks themselves, and no foreign nation without authority to carry out a census can obtain more accurate data than those accepted by the Ottoman Government, and already published to the world. Whether the Asiatic Turks number fourteen or eighteen millions, is, however, a question the solution of which need make no change in our political programme; and, for the Foreign Office, a mean between the two figures will be a sufficiently safe guide for the present as, let us hope, for any impending emergency. A like ignorance on the character and comparative strength and influence of the nationalities and tribes which constitute, and are the component parts of, that population would be less excusable; but we have reason to suppose that more is known in that respect than meets the eye. Consuls Palgrave, Taylor, and (now General Sir Arnold) Kemball, are types of men not likely to have been sleeping at their posts, or to have left them without recording results; and we doubt not that among their contemporaries and successors are zealous and able public servants who need no special prompting to report such matters as should be apprehended by statesmen or diplomatists at home. On the other hand, we do not for a moment pretend that our management of these things is perfect. Far from it; we believe that the formation of a separate Asiatic Bureau is indispensable to efficiency. Indeed a nucleus of such an institution might at once be formed from men now in official harness and materials in use or in pigeon-holes. While uniting the departmental and documentary strength of the Indian and Foreign Secretariats, it would merge all minor considerations in the endeavour to make a complete office of reference under the nominal control of the Indian or Foreign Secretary of State, but for the manifest use and advantage of both. The scheme is not a new one, but it carries no less weight at the present juncture than when suggested three or four years ago.

THE Calcutta telegram of the Times Correspondent, dated the 6th instant, which we quote below, shows the effect upon the public and local Government in India of the present political crisis in Europe:—

All military furloughs have been stopped. Various rumours, assuming at last more and more definite shape, have circulated in the press with reference to a projected expedition to Baghdad. These, however, turn out at last to be entirely without foundation, having been officially contradicted. After a careful consideration of various regiments of the native army and its strength as a whole, I am led to the conclusion that immediately on the announcement of war we should be able to despatch from India a very large army corps without weakening the frontier or any other strategic position, or reducing the various forces of observation maintained to watch and keep in check our too powerful feudatories. Probably, however, the most important auxiliary force which India could furnish to an English army would be a corps of native cavalry, supporting, as it would, that branch of the service in which England is numerically weakest, but in which the native army is pre-eminently strong.

We make no comment on the officially contradicted rumour, because it has been so contradicted. As regards a further statement of the correspondent that 10,000 cavalry might be spared as a war contingent, without the slightest detriment to the safety of Indian towns or districts, there is no doubt that such a force, if properly cared for and economised, might be made highly serviceable in a war of which the geographical extent is not limited to continents in any one quarter of the globe.

THE late Colonel Waller, to whose memory attention is drawn in our Correspondence columns of to-day, was one of the married artillery subaltern officers attached to the British army of occupation in Afghanistan; and on Nov. 2, 1841—a date made remarkable by the outbreak of the Afghans, and murder of Sir Alexander Burnes—he was in charge of two horse artillery guns at Siah-Sang, distant about a mile and a-half from the Cantonments. On the following day, according to Lieutenant (now Sir Vincent) Eyre, he was one of the detachment under Major Swayne which vainly attempted to effect a junction at the Lahor Gate of the city with part of Brigadier Shelton's force from the Bala Hissar. On that occasion Lieut. Waller was wounded; and he was still suffering from his wound, when afterwards removed with the families, under escort of Muhammad Akbar Khan, to Badiabad. During the long captivity which ensued, and in the dreary fort of Tezin, a daughter was born to Mrs. Waller. The story of the release is too well known to need repetition here. Suffice it to say, that Lieut. and Mrs. Waller and two children will be found on the list of the rescued; and among those who were welcomed in General Pollock's camp on Sept. 21, 1842.

THE Bombay Gazette understands that the proposed Lighthouse for Cape Guardafui has been the subject of further correspondence between the Secretary of State and the Home Government in the Foreign Office. At Lord Salisbury's request, a circular was addressed to her Majesty's representatives in the maritime countries of Europe, instructing them to ascertain "whether the different Governments would be disposed to sanction the imposition of a new tax on vessels passing through the Red Sea, with a view to provide for the erection and maintenance of a lighthouse on the Somali Coast, near Cape Guardafui." The Khedive is said to have expressed his willingness to undertake the work contemplated, if Europe would pay all expenses. But the French Government had declined, on financial grounds, to assist in the matter at an earlier date than 1879; so that, under present circumstances, it is not likely any immediate action will be taken.

WE have not heard of the particular plan, should there indeed be one, which our Government has approved for ensuring the safe passage of ships passing Cape Guardafui from the South and South-East. But it is doubtful whether the full precautions will have been taken if Rás Hafun, below Guardafui, be not lighted as well as Guardafui itself. The story of the three wrecks in the summer of 1877, one closely following the other, will sufficiently serve to illustrate the dangers of the coast, without further inquiry into accidents of bygone years. England and France are especially interested in arriving at a speedy determination on this point. When two such fine vessels as the Maikong and the Kashmir run hopelessly aground, at the risk of life and property, the responsibility is declared to be of an international character. And the circumstance of comparative proximity to the scene of disaster should not satisfy us that the fear of a British force at Aden will guarantee, for every future occasion, that protection and safe conduct which is now extended by the Somalis towards our own countrymen, and, as regards life, to others. Far better to prevent the occurrence of wrecks at all. So lately as at the end of October last a French Messagerie steamer lay to, for a brief interval, while three or four of its passengers proceeded in a boat to reconnoitre the locality of the Maikong's mishap. The hull of the fine vessel was observed at a short distance from the landing place, motionless amid the waves which passed it, only to become lost in the surf bursting upon the shore. She had probably shared the fate said to have befallen some of her passengers, and been stripped of all that was valuable.

IF the acknowledgment, by the Secretary of State, of the Report of the Directors of Public Instruction in Bombay for the year 1876-77 has been, as affirmed by the Bombay Gazette "rather depreciatory," it behoves the local Government to give attention to the true cause of disapproval, and endeavour by every possible means to avoid its recurrence in future years. But the passages we have seen extracted from the Report are scarcely unfavourable, or such as cannot be readily explained. For instance, while the candidates for matriculation in the University have fallen off from 1,269 to 1,154, an increase of 10 per cent. is shown in the number of scholars attending the Elphinstone High School, and of 15 per cent. in the fees taken. The diminution in the number of candidates successfully matriculating is ascribed to the greater severity of the examination carried out; and we think that the same reason might have been applied to the decrease in the number of those presenting themselves at all. We defer, until after perusal of the Report, any remark on the question of arbitrary standard, which appears to have been raised by the action of an Inspector, who has seen in the distinction between a Sardar's and Mission School a cause for varied procedure. In the meanwhile, it is quite intelligible that the Directors' order to apply the same standard to both schools should be approved by the Secretary of State.

It has been stated that his Excellency the Viceroy, delivered prizes, at the beginning of last month, to the boys in the Barrackpore Government School. Lord Lytton's remark on that occasion, that the study of Shakespeare is very useful, but that the language of Shakespeare is not that of every day use in the nineteenth century, has a wide application in India, where the tendency of precocious intellect is to make at once available all knowledge acquired. What is wanting to the Indian in his educational career is patience, perhaps also perseverance—that patience which he possesses under circumstances of physical pain and want; that perseverance with which he clings to inherited custom. It is the case of a foolish sick man who tries a new diet; he devours the pabulum put before him, and anticipates immediate health and strength when he should await the natural growth of cure. He ignores the digestive process, and with it the fair side of Procrastination, which in this case is not the thief, but the good steward of Time. In the same spirit, so soon as he attains a certain standard of fitness, he rushes into the battle of public life, and throws up his books and studies. In qualifying for a profession, the acceptance of a post under Government, or a public career of any kind, his end has been attained; for in nine cases out of ten it is rather the satisfaction of lording it over his compeers, receiving a Government salary, or profiting from questionable privileges, which is his self-acknowledged reward; not the consciousness of possessing an ability worthy of better things than the gratification of a narrow ambition.

IN connection with Education in India, we have noted a Report that Sir Richard Temple had secured the services of Mr. Fairclough, the actor, not unknown to fame in this country, for two readings in the Elphinstone College at Bombay. Such an innovation in the curriculum of study cannot be otherwise than popular with the students, who are naturally fond of dramatic representations, and the move is in our estimation a good one. We have a theory that the Stage has yet to be made one of the more direct and powerful adjuncts to education and civilisation at home as well as in our colonies and India. If Parliament could be brought to the same way of thinking, a National Theatre might be reinstated in London under a Government Director secured from loss by an annual subsidy, and the Drama in its higher sense might again hope to become an intellectual recreation, and withal a School of Morality.

A CUTTING before us from one of the lately received Indian papers—we think the Pioneer—casts by anticipation a somewhat dark shade on the consequences of the Viceroy's advice to students. It is suggested that if the "Babu of the period," in obedience to His Excellency's behest, abandon Shakespeare for plainer and more practical study, he will no longer be able to enliven his exercises with the happy quotations he now frequently employs. "For instance," continues the writer, "an examination paper on Mathematics, lately sent up by a student in Bengal, ran something as follows:—'A.B. is equal to C.D., true, but is X.Y. equal to Y.Z.? There's the rub.—Hamlet;' The conclusion drawn is, that 'Answers of this sort relieve the dull monotony of studies too exclusively devoted to one purpose, and help to sustain the student in a general conviction of his own dignity as a man of wide culture.' Cela va sans dire, as they say across the Channel; and we are glad at the same time to find that, in spite of heat, mosquitoes, and all the drawbacks, moral and physical, of exile, a sense of humour is not confined in India to the mind of the native Indian.

THE Pall Mall Gazette, alluding to a letter from Tiflis in the Politische Correspondenz, speaks of a Persian Envoy in that city who is credited with a political mission to the Grand Duke Michael, having for its object a Russo-Persian alliance. The agreement is to be finally concluded on the arrival of the Shah at Tiflis, en route to St. Petersburg; but we observe that it is only to come into force in certain eventualities. The scheme contemplated is a vast one, and brings within its limits the "Muhammadan States of Central Asia," the general design being to forward the views of Russia, and to defeat the objects of England. Truly Russo-Persian treaties are becoming as plentiful as were formerly Russo-Persian wars. It is to be hoped that the one will be found more beneficial to the interests of the Shah than were the other. Meanwhile, the British Lion does not seem to be much affected by the movements reported.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Madras Athenæum writes a long account of the little French settlement of Mahé, situated on the Western coast of India, between Tellichéri and Calicut. He sees no reason why, with good government, it should not be restored to the condition in which it was 30 or 40 years ago—during "its more palmy days." But his praise of the late chef de service and his doings is not so freely given to the arrangements of the present régime. One cause of criticism which may merit attention is the poor housing of the good Sisters and their school children; but we think too much stress is laid upon "the inestimable value of good street lights." They are very good things in their way; but a "substantial lamp-post" in "a suitable position" is hardly a lasting monument of superior administration.

WE have received with pleasure and interest an intimation that the Royal Asiatic Society is about to consider a paper by Captain Mockler, which will be put before it on the 18th inst. It is "On the Identification of Places on the Makran Coast mentioned by Arrian, Ptolemy, and Marcian"; and will doubtless carry us back to the learned researches of Dean Vincent, published seventy full years ago. While on this subject let us also note that the Asiatic Society in Bengal has, according to the latest intelligence, "suddenly come to the front" with a popular gathering "interesting to every member who chose to attend." In addition to Dr. Brandis's exhibition of woods, the papers read by Mr. Shaw, the traveller, on a primitive Aryan community living amid a non-Aryan people near Thibet, and by Dr. Lewis on the causes of elephantiasis and leprosy; and the Ajunta cave photographs of Rajendra Lal Mitra, must have supplied ample and varied material for an attractive meeting.

THE Pioneer has something to say on Colonel Venyukoff, whose "Experimental Military Survey of the Russian Confines in Asia" was brought under the notice of our geographers and politicians some four or five years ago, when attention had been first seriously turned in this country to the wide spreading annexations in Turkistan. Although written in India, the article contains matter of sufficiently fresh interest to Englishmen at home to lead us to reproduce it in extenso :—

As a traveller and a savant, M. Venyukoff's opinions are justly esteemed throughout the scientific world. It may be feared, however, that his name does not carry equal weight in political, and still less in diplomatic, circles. This is the more to be regretted because his views are singularly moderate, being founded upon reason and common-sense. For instance, he is opposed to the Russian annexation of the region known as Turkish Armenia, because he believes that anything more than Batoum as a port, and Kara as a strategical point, will become an encumbrance rather than a source of strength or profit. The Armenians, he says, will prejudice the welfare of the country by their rapacity and commercial cunning, which enables them to overreach the simpler tribes amongst whom they live. The Russians themselves are unable to cope with these wily Asiatics, who, besides, are useless as soldiers, and look upon war only as a means of increasing their gains. It is, moreover, a mistake to call that country Armenia. The mass of the population consists of Kurds, Turcomans, Greeks, and Circassians, with only a sprinkling of Armenians. Indeed, in the important districts of Tchaldyr and Kara the Armenians do not number above 7,500, while the shores of the Black Sea in the neighbourhood of Batoum are inhabited by different clans of Georgians. It is very unlikely, however, that such prudent counsels will prevail with the Russian Government in the hour of triumph. The possession of Van is necessary for the command of the head waters of the Euphrates and the Tigris, while Erzeroum will be needed, if for nothing else, to suggest an excuse for demanding the cession of Trebizond. As matters now stand, Russia has only to ask to have, and there is nothing in her past history to justify the hope that she will be modest under the circumstances. M. Venyukoff's protest against annexation is the voice of one crying in the wilderness. —

Odds and Ends.

It is reported that General Strachey is to be the President, and Mr. Elliot Secretary of the Famine Commission about to be formed for India.

THE roads between Cashmere and Ladakh are said to be everywhere bad, but practicable.

THE Indian Daily News hears that Captain Searle, I.N., Superintendent of the Bombay Marine, is likely to be appointed to act for Commander Robinson, I.N., Superintendent of the Bengal Marine, proceeding on furlough.

It is announced that Sir John Strachey goes home on leave in August next.

SIR GEORGE COUPER was expected to leave Lucknow for Naini Tal about the 12th April.

THE Government of India have sanctioned an additional grant for Public Works Extraordinary for the extension of the Western Rajpootana State Railway beyond Beawar as far as Erinpoora.

THE East Indian Railway line from Buxar to Allahabad will be doubled almost immediately.

OWING to the increasing distress in Mysore, the local D.P.W. authorities have telegraphed to the Government of India for ten more subordinates to reopen or take charge of Relief Works in the province.

THE bust of the late Dr. Stoliczka, when it arrives in Calcutta, will be located in the Imperial Museum.

MR. A. E. GREY, Commissioner of the Southern Division of Bombay, is going on furlough for a year from the 29th of April.

LADY MEADE has left Sekandarabad for England for the benefit of her health.

It is reported that Mr. A. E. Gough, Professor of English Literature at the Banaras College, is to be transferred to the Bengal Education Department.

FOR the month of December last 2,708 emigrants left Calcutta, of whom 1,713 went to Demerara, 461 to Granada, and 534 to the French West Indian Colonies.

MR. HALSEY, the Officiating Commissioner of Inland Revenue, is about to visit Ajmir to put into shape the new arrangements for the Rajputana Salt Traffic.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL W. S. DREVER is gazetted to act as Inspector-General of Police in Madras during the absence on furlough of Colonel Hearn.

DR. G. V. CURRIE, of the 10th Bengal Cavalry, is to be resident medical officer in Kashmir this season.

THE POSITION AS REGARDS INDIA.

THE "intelligent foreigner," who, having no personal or immediate concern in the present political excitement of Europe, comes over to England to study the question of British interests, either from lack of other employment or from sympathy with British institutions, will doubtless be perplexed at certain apparent inconsistencies which everywhere meet the eye and ear of casual spectators and listeners, and which are not always easily reconciled by the very aborigines of the soil. He will see on one side old and young Indian civilians and military men eagerly discussing the movements of Russia, even far West of the Bosphorus, as foretoking eventual encroachment upon India; and on the other side an illustrative map showing how the Treaty of San Stefano contemplates extensive annexations immediately below the Danube, a river from which the Ganges is about as distant as the Congo. He will also hear from members of Parliament, as from members of West-end clubs, that Russia's disregard of treaty obligations aims a blow at Indian interests, commercial and political, and affects the security of Indian communications; yet in a lengthened debate in both Houses of Parliament on this well-worn but far from exhausted Eastern Question, he will not hear a word about India at all, except incidentally or by way of parenthesis. The main points in the speeches of Monday and Tuesday last which in any way concern our Indian possessions are not many or hard to find. The Premier's statement that the Treaty of San Stefano checks our commerce from Trebizond into Persia and Central Asia, coupled with a kind of assurance that had not our fleet been ordered into Turkish waters the commercial roads might have been stopped; the Duke of Argyll's expression of belief that the Empire of India can flourish without the Grand Turk, added to his inability to see any European or British interest involved in the cession of Armenian territory; Lord Kimberley's hope that this country would not embark in a war against a great Power upon such chimerical notions as that a Russian army would march across the desert to Egypt; and Lord Strathnairn's opinion that the destruction of the Ottoman Empire would place India in a position of considerable danger, to avert which effectual measures should be taken: these are almost the only allusions to the subject in the Upper House, which the reported debates have enabled us to discover, and the last is really the only direct one of the whole—the only utterance which seems to hit the mark with military precision. On the first day's debate in the House of Commons the Chancellor of the Exchequer spoke more fully, and his words may be quoted:—"We look to the maintenance of our communications with India and the East, and we desire to establish ourselves upon such a footing that there shall be no danger of either interruption of those communications or of such a threatening of our position in India as may cause us embarrassment. We do not go into minute questions of routes and lines of invasion and attack; but we have not been able to conceal from ourselves the moral effect which might be produced upon our position in India and in the East from changes which might take place—the effect which certain changes might have upon the roads of communication which we now have open to our Eastern dominion. And it is our duty to be prepared, if the occasion should arise, to defend those roads of communication which we think of importance; but I trust that no occasion of the sort will arise." Later in the day Colonel Barne is reported to have said that we "might utilise the Indian Mussulmans, who were first-rate troops, and who, marching up the valley of the Euphrates, would seriously imperil the Russian hold on Armenia." He was, moreover, of opinion that "we ought to take the greatest care not to let Russia advance further in Central Asia or to gain greater influence in Persia, as it was one of the most important highways towards India. What was wanted was to prevent Russia becoming too powerful in Europe, and marching up the Suez Canal and cutting the British Empire in half." Beyond the passages to which we have referred, it does not occur to us that any speech in either House supplies material for comment, so far as regards India in the present state of affairs.

And thus it is on all occasions where our Eastern Empire is part of a general consideration in Indo-European politics. It is no reflection on the able and hard-worked Statesmen or Administrators who have been, now are, or may eventually be in power, to say that they need a staff of expositors in Parliament who, whether Liberal or Conservative (for such distinction is happily secondary in national emergencies), should be able to bring out from a debate, professedly on a matter of vital importance to India, what are the real Indian interests involved in it. The question of communications, dwelt upon by Sir Stafford Northcote, is no doubt practical and most important, and the "Valley of the Euphrates," spoken of by the member for East Suffolk, is not an impossible field for the meeting of a new Cyrus and Artaxerxes in the nineteenth century. But British influence in Persia, and the position of Persia with reference to India, alluded to in an incidental truism, dropt as it were by the speaker in the course of a general criticism on Russian encroachment, are matters of the highest moment; and we venture to say that the annexation of Turkish Armenian territory and strongholds is not so fatal to the security of our position in the East, as the growth of Russian prestige immediately South of the Caspian—a prestige which, if we heed not, will assuredly ripen into despotic and absolute control.

The sword and the pen are seldom handled equally well by one and the same hand. In Oriental phraseology a like distinction is drawn and described in synonymous terms. Much less can it be expected that the explorer, accustomed to the high and hard saddle of Asia Minor and Persia, will feel at home on the level benches of the House of Commons. His facile dealing with the Suraji and chapanji would become but constrained speech and action in the Council Chamber or the Salon at home. His addresses to Baluchis and Brahuis, well suited to Eastern deserts and duvaras, would be wholly unsuited to civilised ears at home, very unparliamentary and quite inadmissible in "Hansard." In plain words, it is not very easy to find public exponents of the strictly Oriental (or let us confine ourselves to the term "Indian") issues of an Oriental question so vast as the present.

Nevertheless, we cannot but wish that India were, numerically, better represented in Parliament than she now is; and that a few accessions were forthcoming to aid, by special knowledge and experience, speakers who, despite of Indian training and administrative ability, seldom venture into details such as were formerly supplied by Sir Henry Rawlinson and Mr. Edward Eastwick, when members of the House of Commons.

THE INDIAN PRESS BILL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In view of the approaching discussion on the Indian Press Bill it may not be amiss to lay before your readers a few considerations upon the subject, which have not, as yet, been prominently brought forward.

Everybody of course knows that all Native papers which are written in English will remain absolutely exempt from supervision or censorship. But what is not, perhaps, so generally known is, that this class forms a very considerable proportion of the entire Native Press; and that as its writers are in fact the brothers and cousins of the writers for the Vernacular section of the Native Press, there cannot possibly result from a Censorship of the latter any such suppression of opinion or silencing of grievances as the uninitiated might imagine. It is perfectly true that the most virulent phraseology that can be found in a vernacular paper can easily be matched from an English written one, and the fact that nobody contemplates any check upon the liberty of the latter should, I think, silence those writers who have hastily assumed that the Indian Government is actuated by a silly impatience of native criticism.

No. It is not who writes, or even what is written, that is of so much consequence. What really is of transcendent importance is WHO READS. So long as the gospel of hatred so sedulously preached by the native press, is addressed to the sedentary classes alone, no danger of insurrection arises. Love or hate, nothing will rouse to physical risk the capitalist, the landowner, the brainworker, the penman. Hitherto the poison of the Native Press has not infected any but these passive readers. But nous avons changé tout cela. Of late years the Anglo-Indian Government has strenuously busied itself upon the primary education of the masses. A generation is growing up consisting of countless millions of robust yeomen, martialists, and artificers—in short, of sturdy handworkers—who, unlike all previous generations, can read with facility. No one can doubt that these men will, before long, acquire a taste for newspaper reading. The distance which separates thought from action is to these simple intelligencies short indeed. It is impossible to doubt that the propaganda of sedition, which a contemptuous indifference has hitherto permitted to exist uncontrolled, becomes an appalling stimulant to insurrection when addressed, as but for the Regulation Bill it must have been, to so widely different an audience.

I observe in your columns an account of a meeting of Indian gentlemen in London to protest against this measure. Am I wrong in supposing that the "Indian gentlemen" in question consisted mainly of the lads who have come from Bengal or Bombay for the sake of educational advantages, to obtain Government appointments, or to be called to the Bar? I do not think that the resolutions of young gentlemen whose average age is somewhere about twenty years calls for serious consideration; but it must be admitted that the report has a most imposing appearance, and will doubtless be quoted with much respect by certain Liberal members.

Something has been said in various quarters about the "inalienable rights" of British subjects. This, like many other inapposite but pompous phrases, no doubt serves a disingenuous purpose by mystifying the "average reader." But I am not aware that a Free Press is any more an "inalienable right" than "Representative Government," "Church and State," or "Grand Juries," institutions infinitely more ancient than a Free Press, but which nobody has yet imported into British Asia.—I am, Sir, yours, &c., A BENGAL MAGISTRATE.

THE DEBATE ON TAXATION IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—As many persons may not have time to read the full report of the very lengthy debate which recently took place upon Professor Fawcett's motion condemning certain taxes recently imposed in India, I would beg leave to draw attention to some highly interesting remarks which were made on the occasion, with regard to the Salt Tax.

Dr. Playfair brought forward an array of facts illustrating the appalling evils which are engendered by the tax in question; its unequal incidence, scarcely touching the rich, but weighing oppressively on the poor; and its effect, in restricting the use of an article essential to health, when it has justly been stigmatised as "a tax entailing misery on unborn generations." In France the salt duty produced more insurrection and wretchedness than any other tax, and was an effective cause of the Revolution. Regardless, however, of these facts, the Indian Government raised the salt-tax from eight annas in 1839 to forty annas in 1878. In Madras and Bombay the poor cannot afford to buy pure salt, and are reduced to cure their fish with salt earth scraped from the sea-shore, and to boil their food in the washings of such earth. This practice, however, being considered injurious to the revenue, has been prohibited; and officers have gained credit with the Government for seizing quantities of this salt-earth in the hovels of the poor, and for punishing 2,000 people for using it. Smuggling, encouraged by the high duty, necessitates a large augmentation of the Police force, and Dr. Playfair read passages from the Report of the Madras Salt Commission, descriptive of the extraordinary means which are adopted for protecting the salt revenue. The speaker went on to observe that the Indian Government ought to know that, as a rise in price diminishes consumption, so a reduction in price increases it. The salt duty in England was abolished in 1823, and, in a few years, the consumption had risen 470 per cent., partly by individual consumption, but greatly through the development of manufactures. Salt is required in bleaching, making glass, glazing pottery, extracting metals from ores, salting provisions, improving agriculture and feeding animals; and all these industries are crippled in India by the salt-tax. It is impossible for India to be prosperous under these conditions. The true insurance against famines is the employment of surplus labour in the development of industries, and we cannot expect India to be prosperous while we impose a tax which must strangle all manufacturers in their infancy.

The public are much indebted to Dr. Playfair for thus prominently bringing to light facts which, in a great measure, account for the financial difficulties of the Indian Government, for the rapid impoverishment observable among the people of India and for the growing discontent manifested by populations hitherto loyal and well affected towards British rule. The remedy which has just been devised against such manifestations of discontent, viz., the Press law, may by closing the only channel through which the Government were kept informed of the feelings and opinions of the people, add to the dangers and difficulties of the Administration; while the discontent itself, as long as the grievances which cause it are maintained, is not likely to abate, merely because its public manifestation is checked.—I am, Sir, your obedient Servant,

KABUL CAPTIVES.

A CORRESPONDENT has addressed us with reference to a Summary Note, in our issue of the 16th ultimo, on the survivors of the Kabul captivity; and takes the opportunity afforded to mention that one of the number, Colonel Robert Waller, of the Bengal Artillery, only recently died at Shirley, near Southampton. The retirement into private life of the deceased officer in 1859, nearly twenty years ago, explains the omission of an obituary notice in the Indian military papers; and we readily give insertion to the record of services, now forwarded to us, of one who is described as "an earnest, true, and much-valued friend, and a distinguished soldier, worthy of his country." Colonel Waller died on the 17th October last, leaving a widow, of whom our correspondent writes, that "she bears her sad loss with the same Christian resignation and courage she displayed when a Kabul captive." We may add that the note to the record is suggestive of a possible, and not very costly proceeding:—

OFFICIAL RECORD OF THE SERVICES OF LIEUTENANT-COLONEL R. WALLER, BENGAL ARTILLERY.

Landed in India, 13th August, 1827; appointed to Horse Artillery, 26th September, 1832; promoted First Lieutenant, 29th July, 1833; promoted Captain, 3rd July, 1845; appointed to command Second Troop, First Brigade, Horse Artillery, 31st January, 1846; promoted Major, 20th June, 1846; Lieutenant-Colonel, 20th June, 1854.

WAR SERVICES.

Served during the War in Afghanistan, 1840, 1841, and 1842.

Served with a force under Major-general Sir R. Sale, K.C.B.; employed at the forcing of the Koord Cabul Pass, and afterwards with General Elphinstone in the different actions prior to the retreat and during the siege of Cabul; twice wounded. Present during the retreat of the British Army from Cabul in January, 1842; horse killed in action at the Pass of Koord Cabul; made prisoner of war until September, 1842, when he effected his escape from Bamian, and joined the army under Sir George Pollock, K.C.B., before Cabul; and present during the evacuation of Afghanistan by the British Army through the Khyber Pass.

Served during the Sutledge Campaign under Lord Gough, and present in command of the Second Troop, First Bengal Horse Artillery at the Battle of Sobraon; medal and brevet majority.

Served during the Punjab Campaign of 1848-49, and detached in command of a force engaged with the enemy at Deena Nuggur, and subsequently in the suppression of rebellion in the Hill Country north of Jullundhur; medal. Employed with a force under Sir Colin Campbell, K.C.B., against the Mohmunds and Hill Tribes on the Frontier west of Peshawur in December, January, and February, 1851 and 1852.

N.B.—Medals for North-West Frontier were distributed in 1871: but Lieut. Col. Waller having retired in 1859, his name may have been overlooked. His children might wish to have the medal, if not too late.

VERNACULAR PRESS BILL.

We glean here and there the more salient passages of the debate on this subject in the Viceregal Council of the 15th March, as showing cause for so strong a measure as that introduced. They form, however, but a small portion of an able and interesting discussion:—

Sir Alexander Arbuthnot: Newspapers printed in the vernacular languages are published in most of the large towns in Bengal, Bombay, the North-Western Provinces, and the Punjab, are read and studied by considerable numbers of people, and exert an influence over the popular mind which it is difficult to exaggerate. My Lord, it is not my wish to include the whole of the Native Press in the charge which I am about to prefer against individual members of it. I know that that Press includes many respectable papers, which are doing a useful work, and which are entitled to every encouragement that the State can afford to them. It is not against this class of newspapers that the present measure is directed. But there is a large and increasing class of native newspapers which would seem to exist only for the sake of spreading seditious principles of bringing the Government and its European officers into contempt, and of exciting antagonism between the governing race and the people of the country. This description of writing is not of very recent growth, but there has been a marked increase in it of late, and especially during the last three or four years. During the past twelve months it has been worse than ever, the writers gaining in boldness as they find that their writings are allowed to pass unpunished. Their principal topics are the injustice and tyranny of the British Government, its utter want of consideration towards its native subjects, and the insolence and pride of Englishmen in India, both official and non-official. There is no crime, however heinous, and no meanness, however vile, which, according to these writers, is not habitually practised by their English rulers. According to them, "the Government is not a just, but a monstrous Government. As monsters are said to eat their own children, the English Government is destroying its own children, viz., its subjects." According to them, "avarice, frugality, and cunning characterise all the acts and measures of Englishmen." According to them, "their rulers violate with pleasure the laws and regulations which they have enacted." According to them, "the British Government is continually breaking its promises." A history of the non-fulfilment of promises by the British Government would "be the whole history of the last hundred and fifty years." . . . My Lord, these are Mr. Prinsep's words:—"I do not go quite so far as to say broadly, and without reserve, that I do not apprehend danger to the State from the Press of India being free. I see no immediate danger in the present state of things, nor, in the future, danger such as the existing laws would provide for better than the laws made especially for the purpose when the danger threatens. Therefore, I cordially assent to the repeal of the laws; but I think the eye of Government would require to be kept continually upon the Press, and especially upon the Native Press; for it is capable of being made an engine for destroying the respect in which the Government is held, and so undermining its power. At present, this Press is nothing, and the controlling or influencing it would be an easy task, were Government disposed to direct its efforts to do one or the other; but if we let it grow till the danger from it is imminent, we may then find it a giant to wrestle with.

Newspapers and other publications in the English language, published by natives, are as much exempted from the operation of the Bill as are similar publications published by Englishmen. As a rule, all publications in the English language are addressed to, and are read by a more educated class than are the readers of Vernacular publications, and consequently, even if they were obnoxious to the same objections as characterise several of the Vernacular papers, they would be far less mischievous. But, as a matter of fact, there is an essential distinction between the tone and language adopted by the most hostile of the English newspapers, and that adopted by the worst section of the Vernacular Press. The vast majority of papers published in English, including those published by natives, however violently they may attack men or measures, always attack them on their individual merits, treating them as accidental blots upon our system, whereas the Vernacular papers too frequently treat the persons and the things which they denounce as the types and necessary results of a foreign rule, and assail our system as a whole.

The Hon. Mr. Morgan: I have in my hand a translation of upwards of one hundred and fifty extracts from papers published in the vernacular languages, which I have very carefully read, and that reading has satisfied me that these publications contain matters which fall under one or other of the following heads:—

1. Seditious libels, malicious and calumnious attacks on the Government, accusing it of robbery, oppression, and dishonesty, and imputing to it bad faith, injustice, and partiality.
2. Libels on Government officers.
3. Contemptuous observations on the administration of justice, pointing to its alleged impurity and worthlessness.
4. Libels on the character of Europeans, attributing to them falsehood, direct cruelty, and heartlessness.
5. Libels on Christians and Christian Governments, and mischievous tendencies to excite race and religious antipathies.
6. Suggestions and insinuations which their authors believe fall short of seditious libels by reason of the absence of positive declarations.

In addition to these general characteristics, I find that mis-statements, exaggerations, and allegorical tales intended to sketch real incidents, but based purely on imagination, have been introduced to support, or give colour to the varied (and I might almost add) inexhaustible calumnies to be met with. Other prominent features must not be lost sight of, such as bestowing praise on the late Mohammedan rule, maintaining its superiority over British rule, representing the dominant race as debased, demoralised, and ignorant.

The Honourable Maharaja Jotendro Mohun Tagore: As an advocate of the liberty of the Press, and as one who would not like to see any restriction put upon it, I cannot but express my great regret that some of the low-class vernacular papers have taken to a course which, to say the least, is extremely reprehensible. I must take this opportunity most emphatically to repudiate, on the part of the educated natives of India, all sympathy with such writers, who, from whatever motive, attempt to excite something like a feeling of disaffection against British rule. The educated natives do not even know of the existence of most of these newspapers. It is, however, I believe, a known fact that much of this class of writing proceeds from folly and a spirit of braggadocio rather than anything else. Yet that some sort of check should be put upon this abuse of the liberty of the Press I cannot deny; but whether the provisions of the existing laws are not sufficient for the purpose is what I am not in a position to judge. Those who are responsible for the good government of the country seem to think that, considering present circumstances, they are not. For this reason, without giving any opinion regarding the detailed provisions of the Bill just placed before us, I deem it my duty to give my humble support to the action of Government, the more so as it is not likely to affect the better class of our journals.

The Hon. Sir John Strachey: I have a special reason for wishing to add a few observations of my own to those that have already been made in the Bill before the Council. Not long ago I was Lieutenant-Governor of one of the great provinces of India, and some years previously the government of another province was entrusted to me. The questions which are dealt with in this Bill have consequently been frequently brought home to me in a very practical shape. I have had to look on powerlessly at the mischief that has been going on, and have deplored the neglect with which it has been treated by the Government. I have known that this neglect has not been caused by indifference but by the natural disinclination which happily all Englishmen feels to do anything which shall have even the appearance of interfering with the liberty of the Press, and if I myself now thought that this Bill was really open to such a charge I should have been unable to give it my support. I deny that this measure will infringe that liberty. Liberty of the Press means liberty of discussion, liberty for the free expression of thought and opinion. But liberty does not mean unbridled license; it does not mean unlimited permission to let loose on the land a never-ending stream of and abuse of all the institutions by aid of which society is held together ; abuse of those things respect for which is indispensable for the preservation of the lives and property of every one, abuse of the Government, of the administration of justice, of the whole English race, and of all it does or desires to do. Respect for the liberty of the Press does not require that we should permit the writer of these scurrilous pages, which it is a misuse of language to call newspapers, to go on constantly telling the loyal and honest, but ignorant people of India, such things as those of which we have heard examples to-day.

His Excellency the Viceroy : We have endeavoured to base our rule in India on justice, uprightness, progressive enlightenment and good government as these are understood in England, and it is at least a plausible postulate which at first sight appears to be a sound one, that so long as these are the characteristics of our rule, we need fear no disaffection on the part of the masses. It must, however, be remembered that the problem undertaken by the British rulers of India—(a political problem more perplexing in its conditions and as regards the results of its solution more far-reaching than any which since the dissolution of the Pax Romana has been undertaken by a conquering race),—is the application of the most refined principles of European government, and some of the most artificial institutions of European society, to a vast Oriental population, in whose history, habits, and traditions they have had no previous existence. Such phrases as "Religious Toleration," "Liberty of the Press," "Personal freedom of the subject," "Social supremacy of the Law," and others, which, in England, have long been the mere catch-words of ideas common to the whole race, and deeply impressed upon its character by all the events of its history, and all the most cherished recollections of its earlier life, are here in India, to the vast mass of our native subjects, the mysterious formulas of a foreign, and more or less uncongenial, system of administration ; which is scarcely, if at all, intelligible to the greater number of those for whose benefit it is maintained.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

HINDOO LAW.

In these days of codification and numberless enactments, it is somewhat to be wondered at, and deplored, that so few of the eminent legislators through whose astonishing zeal the land has been inundated with new statutes have bethought themselves of directing their energies into a field of inquiry where those energies are so greatly needed ; namely, that of Hindoo law. Would they but do so, there would be fewer new laws to perplex the people and enrich their expositors, and less bad law of ancient date. This strange neglect of a subject of vital importance to so many millions is now giving way at last before the researches of Sanskrit scholars, who have brought to light facts that have of late aroused a spirit of dissatisfaction with the present administration of Hindoo law likely to produce important results. Two recent publications that express this feeling lie before us, namely, a digest of Hindoo law by the Honourable H. S. Cunningham, and a review of Hindoo law by Mr. J. H. Nelson, a District Judge in Madras. Mr. Cunningham, considering the present administration of Hindoo law utterly unsatisfactory, would replace it by a code of new civil laws, suited to the supposed existing requirements of the Hindoo community, while Mr. Nelson, equally dissatisfied with the modern Hindoo law, would purify it from the spurious principles that have become engrafted upon it, and would limit its application to genuine Hindoos. Mr. Nelson's work is of special value, as it is mainly based upon the researches of Dr. Burnell (a District Judge in Madras, and a Sanskrit scholar of European reputation), supplemented by the author's own observations and experience as a judicial officer of long standing. He points out how utterly at variance the leading maxims of the so-called Hindoo law, adopted by the Madras High Court, are with the principles contained in the pure Sanskrit original texts, and what pernicious effects these perversions of Hindoo law have had, and may be expected to have. Moreover, he fully exposes a still greater blot in the system, namely, the application of this so-called Hindoo law, not only to genuine Hindoos, but also to the numerous aboriginal tribes and castes, who never, in reality, adopted in their entirety the customs of their conquerors, and whose own peculiar manners and customs are, to the present day, utterly inconsistent with the Hindoo religion, and abhorrent to the orthodox Hindoo. This is evidently an outcome of the comparative ignorance of early English administrators with the religions and customs of the masses, whereby they were led generally to class as Hindoos all who were neither Christians nor Mohammedans. That an elaborate system of civil law essentially connected with religion should be applied to semi-barbarian tribes and castes, each possessing their own peculiar customs regarding marriage, adoption, inheritance, and the like, and for the most part little accustomed or inclined to pay respect to, or acknowledge, the authority of Brahmins, is an anomaly so palpably ridiculous, that Justice Holloway, with his usual outspoken bluntness, could not forbear denouncing its absurdity from the bench. Few will be inclined to doubt that the sooner this extraordinary state of things is altered the better, while there can equally be no question that it is the duty of the Government to provide for the administration to genuine Hindoos of an unadulterated law, instead of the eminently questionable law that is at present judicially recognised by the High Courts. Towards the achievement of this object Mr. Nelson's work is undoubtedly a step in the right direction, and its utility has been already acknowledged by more than one Sanskrit scholar of renown. Professor MacMüller considers that the author has "hit the right nail on the head ;" while Professor Joly, of Wurzburg, pronounces the work to be an acute one, and agrees with the author that the fundamental error of the so-called Hindoo law now administered consists in the fact that it has not been drawn immediately from the old English law books, but from the Mitakshara, and still later commentaries, which are of value simply as commentaries, and little more. Another fruitful source of confusion is to be found in the critical inaccuracy of some of the translations of these commentaries, which the judges, ignorant of Sanskrit, as a rule, failed to detect, while their training, as English lawyers, tended to impart to their interpretations and rulings in many cases a character foreign to the genuine principles of the Hindoo shastras. Mr. Nelson's work is by no means exhaustive ; but in it enough has been said to render it clear that our administration of Hindoo law may be vastly improved, and that it is incumbent upon the Legislature to take immediate steps to relieve the very numerous non-Mohammedan castes and tribes, who are not strictly speaking Hindoos, from the questionable boon of having applied to them a law of which they are not only ignorant, but which also clashes with their own immemorial customs and usages. Whether this is to be effected by adopting Mr. Cunningham's plan of creating a new system of civil law, especially applicable to them, or by adopting Mr. Nelson's plan of ascertaining, and legally recognising, the peculiar customs of each particular tribe and caste, will have to be carefully considered.—Indian Daily News.

STATION TALK.

LAHOR, March 11.—No report submitted to Government has had the honour to present a comparative statement of the gaieties of the various cities of this fair province. . . . Delhi has a certain rough vigour and vivacity in the expression of its feelings at times, which would seem to indicate a more healthy flow of animal spirits, but Peshawar has the liveliest badminton ground, Mooltan has great seasons and rushes of diversion, Sialkot achieved a rink before all the rest, Umballa's race-stand is the finest in India, and I am told there is a sweet domesticity and unity in the joys of Jullundur which make it the most delightful family party in the world. But why all look down on Lahor is more than I can understand. They had a fancy ball at Peshawar the other day, but it is doubtful whether it was as successful as ours at the Lawrence Hall on Monday night. It occurred to Mr. Atkinson, newly arrived from Calcutta, that the place was just a little dull, and with all the ardour of youth he proposed sky-races and a calico ball, and being endowed with perseverance and a faculty for managing, both were successfully carried through. I mentioned last week the interest taken in the preparation for the ball, and the result was worth all the pains. I am afraid it would not convey any very vivid impression of the scene to enumerate the costumes, and, to confess the truth, my recollections are somewhat mixed. . . . In Mr. Lepel Griffin's exhaustive paper on the Punjab frontier a modest reference is made to the literary contributions to the popular knowledge of the border folk and countries by officers in the service of the Punjab Government, and by the missionaries. It is doubtful whether the extent and importance of the literary work produced in the province is at all understood by the public at large. And it would not be difficult to show that in this respect the Punjab is entitled to an eminence which can scarcely be claimed by other provinces. The appreciative review recently published in the Pioneer, of Mr. Fry's settlement report, showed how full of interest of a wide and many-sided kind work of this sort may be. But there are other settlement reports equally valuable as descriptions of the people, the soil, and other conditions of existence which seem to be known only to officers in the service. And when the Government prints a book for general information, it does it in a shamefaced way which rather reminds one of an erring housemaid furtively dropping her baby on a door-step and running away. Major Bates, for example, compiled a Gazetteer of Kashmir, which for fulness and accuracy of information and extent of range it would be hard to match. The difficult archæology of the Happy Valley was treated with the same care as the statistics of trade, population, and products. Scenery, routes, manufactures, history, all were carefully studied, and the result of the incessant labour of many months was a book of which the author might fairly be proud. . . . Mr. H. B. Baden-Powell's valuable works on Punjab Products and Punjab Arts and Manufactures, which ought to be known over the length and breadth of the country, are practically confined to a few bookshelves in the Punjab. The Government can hardly be expected to push and advertise as if it got its living by its publications, but it is surprising that two volumes which contain the most complete account yet published of Indian arts and manufactures, and of the raw products of the province, should not be more generally known. For the truth is, they are the only books which give any reliable information as to Indian craftsmanship in general. The glossaries alone are of great value, and the illustrations are by far the best that have yet appeared in any Indian book. A smaller matter was Dr. Thornton's handbook to Lahor, which having been prepared for the Prince of Wales's visit, and presented on that auspicious occasion, was never more seen of men. The results of Sir Douglas Forsyth's mission to Central Asia were not very tremendous in a political point of view, but there is instructive reading in the report, and in its appendices by Dr. Henderson, Captain Trotter, &c.; and though the photographic illustrations are not triumphs of the art, they help the reader to form vivid pictures of Yarkand life. But this report is rather rarer than the Nuremberg Chronicle. Mr. Lepel Griffin's works on the history of the great families of the Punjab have a wider reputation, but they were put out to nurse with a publisher. Of a lighter nature are Major Harcourt's "Lahoul, Kulu, and Spiti," and Mr. Philip Egerton's amusing and lavishly illustrated travels in those regions. Dr. Leitner's book on Dardistan has not been allowed to hide its light under a bushel; but it is the only example I can call to mind of a locally-produced work which has received sufficient publicity.

Miscellaneous.

COLLEGE AT ALIGARH.—The Governor-General in Council has authorised the affiliation to the Calcutta University of the Mahomedan Anglo-Oriental College at Aligarh, with effect from Jan. 15 last.

EMIGRATION.—Dr. V. Richards is appointed to act as Protector of Emigrants and Superintendent of Emigration in Calcutta, in the place of Major R. Beadon, who goes as Superintendent of Jails to Hazirabagh.

NORTH BENGAL RAILWAY.—As the rails for the length of the Northern Bengal State Railway from Jalpaiguri to Silliguri have not as yet arrived in Calcutta, it is not likely that that part of the line will be open for traffic so soon as was expected.

SALT REVENUE.—The inland salt revenue for eleven months of the current official year is less by over 1½ lakh than the revenue for the same period of last year. The collections on sugar, too, show a decrease of over two lakhs.

TREASURY GUARDS.—A correspondent of the Rangoon Times draws attention to the fact that the police Treasury guards at Shuaygyeen are composed almost entirely of Panthays. Too much trust, it is said, should not be placed in these men.

GENERAL KEYES.—The Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab has publicly expressed his warm acknowledgments of the services of Brigadier-General Keyes, Commandant of the Punjab Frontier Force, on the resignation of that officer.

PESHAWUR COMMISSIONER.—In consequence of Sir Richard Pollock's approaching departure from Peshawur, Major Waterfield succeeds to the Commissionership, and the latter officer's appointment as Sessions Judge will be taken up by Lieutenant-Colonel Johnstone from Bunn.

LICENSE TAX.—Opposition to the License Tax Bill has sprung up in an unexpected quarter, Sir William Robinson, senior member of the Madras Legislative Council, having expressed his disapproval of the exemption of the professional and official classes from the payment of the new impost.

CHANGES.—Mr. G. H. M. Ricketts, C.B., Member of the Board of Revenue, N.W.P., goes home by this mail on leave that will extend to the end of October. Mr. C. P. Carmichael replaces him on the Board, and Mr. Cairns Daniel acts as Commissioner of Benares.

THE VICEROY.—Their Excellencies the Viceroy and Lady Lytton left Calcutta from Howrah on the 18th March at ten o'clock by special train, accompanied by Mrs. Barnett, Miss Urquhart, Colonel Villiers and the Hon. S. C. Bayley, and Lord William Beresford and Captain Rose, A.D.C.s.

LORD CANNING'S STATUE.—The equestrian statue of Earl Canning at Calcutta was unveiled on the 18th March by the Viceroy, who made a speech, in which he said the Government of India hoped to see more fully developed the policy initiated by Lord Canning, of entrusting native gentlemen with a large share in the administration of the empire.

THE PRESS BILL.—The Vernacular Press Bill, which has lately been passed by the Viceregal Legislative Council, is condemned by several of the European papers, as well as by the vernacular journals, who say that the measure will in the long run prove more disadvantageous to the British Government than to themselves. At Calcutta there is to be a public meeting with a view to Parliament being memorialised on the subject.

OPIMUM.—It has now been officially notified that by order of the Governor-General in Council, during the calendar year 1879 sixty thousand chests of Bengal Provision Opium in all will be sold. The number of chests to be sold at each monthly sale, and the proportion of Benares and Behar Opium to be sold on each occasion, will be fixed by a supplementary notification.

DISTRICT JUDGES.—No fewer than three of the present District Judges have already announced their determination of spending the ensuing hot weather elsewhere than in the Plains, and these are the Judges of Saharunpore, Allahabad, and Ghazipur. The Judge of Shahjehanpore must also bow to the inexorable rule of thirty-five days, which closes the Indian civilian's career.

NEW DISTRICTS IN THE NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.—Several new administrative districts are to be created in the North-West Provinces in accordance with the recommendations of a committee which sat at Allahabad last year—the Secretary of State having now sanctioned the proposals. The office of Commissioner of Stamps will not be abolished, however, as the committee proposed.

THE UTMAN KHEYL.—The Zirak and Pakhi Kheyl villages of the Utmán Kheyl tribe, concerned in the Swat Canal outrage, were attacked by the Guides at daybreak on March 21. The enemy lost ten killed, and others wounded. The Guides had two men wounded. The enemy submitted at once to terms. The other sections had previously submitted, and did not join the enemy. The Utmán Kheyl rupture is now at an end.

BISHOP OF RANGOON.—The newly-arrived Bishop of Rangoon preached his first sermon in Rangoon on February 24, in the Town Church, which was crowded to excess. His lordship referred to the movements which are causing such disturbances in the Church at home, and hoped to be there free from such disputes, and be able to work in harmony together, as fellow Christians should. He likewise stated that he hoped soon to call a meeting for the purpose of raising funds to build a cathedral.

STOLEN AND LOST GRAIN.—In consequence of large losses of grain sustained by the G. I. P. Railway Company, by thefts in transit and otherwise, a commission has been ordered by Government to inquire into the matter, and devise means to prevent future losses. Mr. Arthur Crawford has been appointed as president of the Commission, the members of which will be Major Wise, and a Railway official to be hereafter named by the Railway Company. The compensation paid by the G. I. P. Railway Company for losses in grain, &c., to different merchants for the past year amounted to upwards of three lakhs of rupees.

PARIS EXHIBITION.—We see that at the meeting of the Asiatic Society Dr. Brandis exhibited a collection of Indian woods, which Government are about to send to the Paris Exhibition. In Madras the articles to be sent to the Exhibition were shown to the public for some days, but in Calcutta a most mysterious reticence has been observed about everything connected with the Exhibition. No one, except a few favoured officials, knows anything as to how India is to be represented at the Exhibition, beyond the fact that the Prince of Wales's presents are to be shown, and space in the Indian department has been allotted to several of the Prince's London tradesmen.

ROBBERY.—The Pioneer gives the following story received from an Agra correspondent:—"A daring robbery was perpetrated at Secundra on last Sunday night. Some thieves managed to enter the garden enclosure, through a sewer in the garden by enlarging it, and, climbing up the mausoleum built over the tomb of Akbar, they took down the four gilded kulases, and made away with three quite unobserved, leaving the fourth and the heaviest in the garden compound, perhaps on account of their inability to carry it. The kulases are made of copper, gilded with gold, weighing about a maund or more each."

INDO-PERSIAN MSS.—At the last meeting of the Asiatic Society of Bengal a curious Persian Manuscript was exhibited by Captain Waterhouse. It contains the poetical works of a Delhi poet of the name of Mir Kamaruddin, poetically styled "Minnat." Warren Hastings conferred on him the title of "Poet Laureate." Minnat died in Calcutta in 1793, A.D. He left numerous poems and several works on general literature. Among the poems are several well known odes, one in praise of the Nizam of Hyderabad, for which he received a present of Rs. 5,000, and two odes on Warren Hastings and Mr. Richard Johnson. Among the illuminations with which the work is illustrated are two portraits, one of Warren Hastings and the other of Richard Johnson. The likeness of Warren Hastings is very good.—Bombay Gazette.

PORT OFFICER.—Referring to the question of the supervision and control of the Port establishment, the Government is said to have decided that the Port Officer is to be placed under the local Government, instead of under the Port Commissioners, and the cost for maintaining his establishment is to be included in the provincial budget. The Government of Bengal has sanctioned an establishment for the Port Officer amounting to a total of Rs. 3,516, rising to Rs. 3,616 per mensem. The salary of the Port Officer has been fixed at Rs. 1,200, with a house-rent allowance of Rs. 200 a month. The first Assistant to the Port Officer is to draw Rs. 750, and the salary of the Head Assistant or Registrar has been fixed at Rs. 300, rising to Rs. 400 per mensem. As regards the appointment of a Second Assistant to the Port Officer, which Captain Warden is said to have recommended, the Government of Bengal has remarked that the subject will be taken into consideration after the expiration of six months, when the Port Officer is to submit a report on the working of the scheme already sanctioned. It has also been decided that, for the convenience of the public, the office of the Port establishment is to remain, as previously arranged, in the new building of the Port Commissioners, a portion of which has been taken up by Government for the purpose at a rental of Rs. 500 a month.—Indian Daily News.

A MADRAS COLLECTOR.

In the departure of Mr. Andrew Wedderburn, Collector of Coimbatore, for Ceylon, en route to Europe, the country has lost a most useful public servant. He was the oldest member of the service, his name ranking first in the list of public servants published at the beginning of this year. After serving in a subordinate capacity in South Arcot, Malabar, North Arcot, and Cuddapah, Mr. Wedderburn was gazetted Collector of the latter district in 1860. Having witnessed the sore distress which drought inflicted in some of the districts, he turned his attention to the extension of well-cultivation, which seemed the only alleviation when tanks were dry. He obtained a remission of the tax on the old well-lands of Cuddapah, which were out of cultivation by reason of the excessive impost placed on them by the former Native Government, and continued in our régime. He was afterwards appointed acting Collector of Bellary, in 1863, and was asked to report on the assessment of the well-lands of that district, which he pointed out were charged with double assessment if the crops were raised by the extra labour of the ryots. He succeeded in getting an abatement of this double impost. His health having suffered in the Cuddapah district, Mr. Wedderburn obtained leave of absence on sick certificate, and was appointed to the district of Tinnevely, whence he was transferred to Bellary in June of 1866. That district was just beginning to be afflicted with a severe famine, and the new Collector organised works all over the district, and encouraged the benevolence of the wealthy merchants of Bellary, who had made large fortunes in cotton during the American war. One individual in Bellary was known to have contributed one-third of a lakh of rupees to gratuitous relief. By metalling the roads of Bellary district a great improvement to traffic was the result of the famine expenditure. In 1868 Mr. Wedderburn obtained the favourite Collectorship of Coimbatore, which then included the Neilgheri plateau, now constituted a separate district; and here the best labours of his life, as an administrator, were passed. His forte was sanitation, and in Coimbatore he carried it out to the highest degree. Spots of waste land were acquired and made into sewage gardens, and now, we understand, there are about fifty acres with thriving plantations. Mr. Wedderburn's last improvement was carrying out, during the famine—when some two thousand unfortunate weavers of Coimbatore could get no sale for their goods—a sanitary scheme of tank reclamation. Six months was the interval allowed for the work before water came into the tank, and twenty-five acres were reclaimed from the swamp and turned into most productive gardens with the silt excavated from the bed of the tank. Excellent crops of tobacco, wheat, and other cereals were obtained, while the system of growing green fodder for cattle was introduced. Twelve wells were fitted with the improved water-lift, and few towns in this country exhibit such a marked improvement as Coimbatore. Latrines, carts, and water-lifts have been adopted as models. After having served his full time, Mr. Wedderburn was appointed by the Secretary of State to hold office for another year. His knowledge of the district, and his acquaintance with the administration of famine relief, were reasons for his being requested to devote another year's labour in this country. . . . The late Collector of Coimbatore leaves the country without decoration of any kind, while he has been one of the men who most richly deserved to be supported in the course he had adopted. Lord Lytton's visit to Madras enabled him to gauge the worth of many Madras officials, Mr. Wedderburn amongst others, and we have little doubt that, when famine honours are distributed, the services we have been attempting to record will not be forgotten. Meanwhile, till occasion comes to offer congratulations, we can but hope that much ease and happiness in his "aim countree" will be Mr. Wedderburn's portion for many years as compensation for the toil he has endured in this land.—Madras Times, March 9.

STATION TALK.

WYNAAD, March 8.—It is rather amusing to notice how experience changes opinions, with regard to coffee-planting as well as in other matters. Two or three years ago, when the shade question was becoming a topic of universal interest amongst us, there were many who were most strongly in favour of the charcoal tree as a shade. It is a very quick growing tree, and plants itself in profusion unless checked. In less time than one could suppose possible, it covers the ground so thickly with its shade, that, at any distance, the estates under it look more like an even-topped jungle than any thing else. This appearance became the pride and delight of those who, possessing it, believed that charcoal was "the finest shade out." But experience apparently has much altered their views on the subject, and it seems pretty well proved that charcoal shade not only damages, but, in many cases, entirely destroys, the coffee, which it was supposed to protect. The consequence is that, on all sides, we see these young jungles being ruthlessly destroyed, and it is surprising to notice how the coffee improves after their removal. I do not think, as far as I have been able to remark, that the various figs planted some two years or so ago have grown as quickly as was at first expected, though, where they have succeeded well, they have fulfilled anticipations, by proving very desirable as shade. Very many people are planting chinchona largely for the same purpose, and, of course, thereby combining several advantages; first that of shade, then the quantity of large leaves which fall from them and, like the jack leaves, form excellent manure, and last, but certainly not least, the chinchona trees themselves, which every year must add so considerably to the value of the estates. I hear of sundry new openings to be commenced this year; this is very encouraging, and shows that hope has by no means yet died out amongst us. Tea is also being tried in small quantities, more as experiments than anything else. It seems a terribly slow-growing thing, and the preparations being so utterly different to that of coffee, and so much more elaborate, will, I should fancy, in a great measure prevent its being generally cultivated in Wynaad, at any rate for some time to come. Our rain, alas! has vanished; the clouds were so hopefully heavy last week that we quite thought they were coming down in a good shower, and we now watch the pitilessly blue sky with anxious eyes. I especially dislike this time of the year in Wynaad for this reason. But we might be worse off, for we still have the sea breeze every day. It is fearfully hot at noon; one feels fit to be folded up neatly, and put away till the evening, for all the consistency one seems to have is one's bones! I dare say you in Madras would laugh at the idea of calling our climate hot, but you must remember that we have no punkahs but the sea breeze, and that ice is a luxury hopelessly unattainable, and even water just fresh drawn from the filter is most unrefreshingly tepid. The coffee up to the present seems to be bearing the heat bravely; the spike in our neighbourhood is hardly sufficiently forward to be much affected, and if the showers will only come soon our mental barometer will have good reason to rise considerably. I don't know any more thirsty looking object than the rain-gauge, as it appears before me now, lying on its side on the parched brown grass, with its top off, as if it were positively gasping for "something to drink." A good many people are down with fever, and there is a general sort of longing to "pay off" and run away to more refreshing climes; not that I should think those who have chosen Calicut for their "change," will benefit much, as far as the heat is concerned. The general meeting of the Association came off at Pookote on Wednesday. The gathering was nothing like so large as that held in October last, but it was hardly to be expected. The great gold meeting which was to be held this week in Davala has, I hear, been put off, and is now to be held in Ootacamund for the greater convenience of those most concerned in its results.—Madras Times Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

LORD HOBART.—A sum of Rs. 900 has been collected by the Mohammedans of Madras to meet the expenses for the portrait of the late Lord Hobart.

FAMINE IMMIGRANTS.—Government have sanctioned, as a famine charge, the sum of Rs. 10,58-10-2, expended by the Travancore Government in sending back to their homes famine immigrants.

THE HON. G. N. GAJAPATHE RAO.—The Honourable G. N. Gajapathe Rao, a member of the local Legislative Council, who proceeded to Vizagapatam some time ago, returned to Madras by the steamer Baghdad on Saturday last.

CURRENT PRICES OF GRAIN.—The Athenaeum is glad to notice a slight fall in the price of grain by the local bazaar merchants. Since the past fortnight the ordinary rice which was retailed at four and a-half measures is now sold at five and a-half to five and three-quarters measures for the rupee.

BINNESE TIMBER.—A question some time ago arose as to the possibility of supplying timber for Her Majesty's Navy by the Forest Department of British Burmah; but on inquiry it appears that the Forest Department is not in a position to meet the requirements of the Admiralty from the Government supplies available.

THE NEW MUNICIPAL BILL.—We (Madras Times) learn that it is not likely that the new Municipal Bill will become law as soon as was expected, the Government of India being unwilling, it would appear, to give sanction to the measure without due and careful consideration.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—The Madras Government will leave Madras for the Neilgherries two months earlier than was expected. The Commander-in-Chief, Lady Chamberlain, and the head-quarters staff will leave Madras in the first week in April, and will be followed on the 10th by the Governor, his Grace's family and household.

GORED TO DEATH BY A BULL.—On the evening of Thursday, the 14th March, a native woman was knocked down and gored by a bull near the Chintadrepettah market. The woman received some severe injuries and died shortly afterwards. Two boys were also gored by the same bull, but they escaped with a slight hurt. The bull and the owner are in the custody of the police.

MADRAS RAILWAY.—The Athenaeum learns that the railway authorities, to prevent disappointments to passengers, have decided upon selling dinner-tickets at the terminal station here. The cost of a ticket is Rs. 1-8, and the holders of same will find no difficulty in being provided with dinner at the Arcot Junction. Wines and other refreshments will have to be paid for separately as hitherto. This new system is to come into force shortly.

THE LATE MRS. ISACKE.—The friends of Mrs. Mary Jane Stanley Isacke, wife of Lieutenant Col. S. Isacke, officiating Staff-Officer and Superintendent of Details, Fort St. George, will regret to learn of her death. The deceased lady was ill for some time, and arrangements had been made for her departure to England by the P. and O. Steamer which left the roads on Tuesday last, but she was unable to go on board. The late Mrs. Isacke was for a long time a Directress of the Civil Orphan Asylum, in which, and in the Friend-in-Need-Society and other kindred institutions, she took a deep interest.

THE GOVERNOR'S VISIT TO THE PRESIDENCY WORKSHOP, P.W.D.—His Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, with Colonel Shaw-Stewart, Consulting Engineer for Railways, paid a visit to the Presidency Workshop, P.W.D., at the Seven Wells, last Wednesday evening, at five p.m. His Grace was taken through by Mr. Grainger and Mr. Faulkner. His Grace inspected the working of the machines and the store rooms. This is the fourth time his Grace has visited the shop.

MEDICAL INSTITUTIONS.—The Government expenditure upon Medical Institutions in the Madras Presidency for seven months in the official year of 1877-78 is as follows:—Medical Establishment, Rs. 53,689; Vaccination, Rs. 13,890; Hospitals and Dispensaries, Rs. 228,408; Lock Hospitals, Rs. 8,250; Medical Colleges, Rs. 25,684; Lunatic Asylums, Rs. 51,578; Chemical Examiner, Rs. 12,199; grants for Medical purposes, Rs. 7,724; and Sanitary Commission, Rs. 44,845; making a total of Rs. 5,10,337.

A MAN-EATING TIGER.—We hear from a correspondent that a man-eater has frequently made its appearance on the Balpully Ghaut, Madras Railway, and has destroyed the lives of two native pointsmen of the company, besides walking away with two children of eight to ten years of age. The Resident Engineer being informed of the circumstances, reported the same to Mr. H. R. P. Carter, Acting Chief Engineer, who, accompanied by Mr. Bowstead, Resident Engineer of the Division, and Mr. Hewette, have left their respective Divisions on a search of the animal.

BERMAH.—Grand preparations are being made for the marriage of the Thee Baw Prince with the second daughter of the present Head Queen. They are both of pure Royal blood, and it was this young Prince only that was eligible to aspire to the hand of the lovely "Supyah." The house is being built for them, and the only thing remaining is the auspicious day to be fixed by the fortune-telling Brahmins. It is moreover reported that there is every probability of the Prince becoming the Crown Prince and Heir Apparent to the Throne of H.M. the King of the Rising Sun.—Indian Mirror.

ASSAULT ON AN ENGINE WHILE IN MOTION.—Between the Central Station and Veysarapaudy Junction the fireman of the 6.15 p.m. mail train of the 14th March was thrown off the engine, and narrowly escaped being killed by a blow from the driver, who it would appear struck him for using abusive language. On arrival at Perambore Station the train was detained for twenty minutes, as the driver refused to start with one fireman; intimation had to be sent to Mr. Parkes, the Assistant Locomotive Superintendent, who ordered a fireman to be taken off the local train running between Royapooram and Perambore, which happened to be at the Perambore Station at the time.—Athenaeum.

BARQUE "UMVOTE."—The fine A1. iron barque, Umvote 412 tons register Cap. C. Reeves, Commander, built especially for the Natal coolie trade, left Natal on Jan. 2, and experienced a hurricane near the Mauritius, lasting three days. She has not suffered from the effects of the hurricane, but one of her boats was slightly broken. She left Mauritius on Feb. 7, and arrived here yesterday, the 11th inst., after a passage of thirty-one days and a-half, which must be considered a good passage at this time of the year, in which calms are frequent. She brought with her the following passengers:—From Natal: Apothecary J. Sykes. From Mauritius: Mrs. C. Broom, Mr. J. Caldwell, Assistant Colonial Secretary for Mauritius, Dr. G. Currie, two native servants and one returned emigrant (a lunatic) from Natal.

CULTIVATION AND COLLECTIONS IN THE NELLOR DISTRICT.—The area cultivated up to the month is 311,433 acres, exhibiting a decrease of 139,549 acres as compared with the average cultivation of the corresponding period of the three years ending 1875-76. The decrease appears in all the taluqs. The collections up to November amount to Rs. 2,96,723, and exhibit a decrease of a little more than 77 per cent. as compared with the average collections of the same period in the three years ending 1875-76. The Collector's attention has already been drawn to the backward state of the collections in the district. It is observed that the collections up to the month as given in the statement differ by Rs. 100 from those given in the progress statement for November. This should be explained and care taken to avoid similar difference in future.

GENERAL HOSPITAL.—Lady Mary Grenville, accompanied by His Grace the Governor's Aide-de-camp, Captain Montgomery, Sir William and Lady Robinson, and the Misses Carmichael, visited the General Hospital on the evening of Thursday last. They were received by Doctor and Mrs. Farnell, and Drs. Ratton and Branfoot, the Lady Superintendent, and the Apothecaries of the General Hospital. The party inspected the new kitchen and the working of the steam-cooking apparatus very minutely. They then sat down to a table, and tasted some of the meat and other eatables that were prepared and served out to them, and pronounced the same to be very good and well done. Lady Mary Grenville and party, after going through the several wards, visited Captain Johnstone at his quarters. Lady Mary kindly enquired as to his state of health.

THE BOMBAY VOLUNTEERS.

The progress made by the Bombay Volunteers since the formation of the regiment eight months ago is so great, even in the opinion of dispassionate military critics, as to afford a fair justification for those compliments with which the ardour of a civilian soldiery requires to be and ought to be occasionally caressed. The strength of the various companies at the inspection parade before the General of the district on Saturday last, and again yesterday morning before the Honorary Colonel, Sir Richard Temple—though, of course, owing to the great distances the men of the suburban companies have to travel the muster at a morning parade can never be so good as in the evening—and the very creditable way in which the different manœuvres were gone through, show that volunteering has now taken a firm root in Bombay, and that we have good grounds for hoping it will continue to grow and flourish abundantly. The present success of the movement, achieved after the complete failure of two previous efforts, may be ascribed to several causes. At the breakfast given by the Governor to the officers yesterday much stress was laid on the satisfactory results of the personal interest his Excellency has from the beginning taken in the Volunteers; and this was not the mere language of courtiers. Whatever may be Sir Richard Temple's faults, he undoubtedly possesses the compensating virtues of ceaseless energy and real good nature; and the genial earnestness with which he has taken the Volunteers, as it were, by the hand, has certainly gone a great way towards keeping alive the enthusiasm with which the movement was first started. The military authorities, too, and especially the Commander-in-Chief, have cordially co-operated with the Governor in making things easy for the Volunteers as regards the administrative routine which usually causes so many delays, and have also taken frequent opportunities of watching the progress of the men at drill. But it would be unwise and unfair to suggest that the Bombay Volunteer Rifles owe their success simply to official patronage. Their prosperity is mainly due to the growth of the European resident population, and the development of a healthy and vigorous public spirit in the community. According to the Census of 1872, there were then about 5,000 male Europeans in Bombay, and we are all conscious that this number must have been very largely increased during the last six years. The proportion of fighting men amongst this part of the population must be very large, for their numbers include very few old men or children, and it may be said that three-fourths of the male Europeans of Bombay are men in the prime of life. Of late years, too, there has been a noticeable tendency on the part of this class to regard Bombay as a place of permanent residence rather than a temporary refuge; and the very facilities of intercourse with England which are now so freely offered have helped to reconcile Englishmen to life in Bombay, as they can run home and come back again whenever they wish to do so. We think, therefore, that Sir Richard Temple was probably within the mark when he said that on an emergency the strength of the Volunteers would quickly be increased to 1,500 men. We should expect to see double that number of European civilians in Bombay take up arms in case of need. His Excellency appealed yesterday morning to the feeling of fellowship which should make Europeans of all ranks in this country remember in the hour of danger that they belong to one stock, and are equally interested in maintaining the honour, power and glory of the Empire. This sentiment is always present to the minds of non-official Englishmen in India. Whatever else they may lack, they never forget the pride of race; and if, in Bombay, the non-official European community is sometimes accused of demanding its rights in too imperious tones, at least it may be relied upon never to repudiate the obligations of citizenship. Sir Richard Temple urged the officers of the Volunteers yesterday to remember that, after his family and fortune, every good citizen owes a duty to his country, and in times of peace patriotism may perhaps be treated as only a secondary duty; but a soldier would not be worth much who was not prepared to fight for his country first of all, and to prefer it to both family and fortune, and we have no doubt that the Bombay Volunteers would, if called upon for active service, be found to be animated by this spirit. Much, however, remains to be done before the Volunteer force of Bombay becomes as strong in efficiency and numbers as it ought to be. It seems to us that every English resident here should make it a point of honour either to join the regiment as an active member, or to assist with his purse in making the service more attractive. The busy men whose time is so much occupied that they cannot spare an hour or two a day to learn their drill, the unfortunate men who are the victims of some bodily infirmity, the lazy men who have a constitutional dislike to getting up early in the morning, and the fine gentlemen who disdain to join any Volunteer regiment in which they might have to occupy a lower rank than that of a captain, can all help in their various ways to advance the good cause, even if they do nothing beyond subscribing to the Band Fund, and so enabling the Volunteers to maintain a band which would play in public once or twice a week. Let anyone consider what an unspeakable relief it would be to the Government of this country to know that in all the great Indian cities the non-official Europeans were not only able to protect themselves, but to maintain order and crush sedition, without the aid of the regular army. No one can say how soon the occasion may arise when the stress of foreign war will put the Government in sore need of such help from Europeans in India; and this reflection should stimulate every Englishman in Bombay to do all he can for the Bombay Volunteer Rifles.—Bombay Gazette, March 14.

Miscellaneous.

DRAINAGE.—The proposed extensive drainage works in Bombay are likely to be entered upon without further delay.

FRERE-FLETCHER SCHOOL.—The Governor of Bombay publicly opened the new Frere-Fletcher School at Bombay on the 18th inst.

MR. HOPE.—The Hon. Mr. T. C. Hope, C.S.I., is allowed privilege leave to proceed to England for three months from the 21st instant or such date thereafter as he may avail himself of.

FINE ARTS EXHIBITION.—The Exhibition of Fine Arts, which was to have taken place in Bombay during the present month, will not be held until December.

MEMORIAL TO THE VICEROY.—The proprietors of the alienated villages in Salsette, who have been affected by the Abkaree Act, have addressed a memorial to the Viceroy.

GOA.—At Goa the discontent which has been caused by the conduct of the new Governor-General continues, and a petition protesting against the fresh taxation has been forwarded to Portugal.

SENTENCE OF DEATH.—It is announced that Sella, the notorious Kotagherry murderer, was found guilty on March 5th, and sentenced to death. It is supposed that Sella has killed about twelve people.

STRIKE OF SCAVENGERS.—There has been a strike at Bombay, nearly 700 natives employed by Government as scavengers leaving their work, on the grounds that they were underpaid, overworked, and treated with severity in the way of cutting and fining.

PRIVATE COMPANIES.—The proposal of the Indian Government to purchase the foreshore rights of all the private companies in Bombay is attracting much attention in that city, and the local Chamber of Commerce has conditionally approved the negotiations, but asks to be consulted with reference to the constitution of the new Port Trust and the readjustment of its debt.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR.—On the night of the 19th March, his Excellency Sir Richard Temple, accompanied by Captain Frith, A.D.C., Dr. Waters, and Lieut. Sheik Cassim, native A.D.C., arrived at the Grant-road Station, where he had dinner before leaving by the mail train for Ahmedabad, en route to Deesa and Mount Abou. Three saloon carriages were placed at the Governor's disposal, and a large scarlet cloth was spread over the platform opposite to them.

Captain Portman, the B.B. and C.I. Railway Police Superintendent, Mr. F. Mathew, the Agent, Sir Frank Souter, Mr. Nugent, Under-Secretary to Government, Mr. Hart, Acting Private Secretary, and Major Rivett-Carnac, were also at the station. Sir R. Temple is expected to return to Bombay at the end of the month.

CONSOLIDATION OF SALARIES IN THE SURVEY DEPARTMENT.

Extract from the proceedings of the Government of India, in the Department of Revenue, Agriculture, and Commerce, dated Calcutta, the 25th February, 1878.

RESOLUTION.—The old system of salaries in the Survey Department, based on a combination of military pay and allowances with staff salaries, having proved inconvenient, inasmuch as it resulted in some instances of junior officers drawing larger salaries than their seniors, while the civil members of the Department were placed at great disadvantage compared with their military colleagues, a scheme of consolidated salaries was substituted for it. This scheme came into operation from the commencement of 1874.

2. It was in force for a little more than a year and a-half, when the Government of India found it necessary, in consideration of the other demands on the public revenues, to reduce the annual cost of the Department to Rs. 20,00,000, or by over four lakhs of rupees.

3. The carrying out of this reduction in the expenditure of the Department has involved the absorption of a number of survey parties, and of several appointments in the different grades of the Department, and has also necessitated the stoppage of all promotion.

4. As the cost of the Department has now been brought down almost to the limit decided on, the Governor-General in Council is of opinion that the Department should be placed on a definite basis in view of the reductions that have been effected and in modification of the orders reorganising it.

5. His Excellency in Council has accordingly determined that the offices of deputy superintendents and assistant superintendents in the Topographical, Revenue, and Trigonometrical Branches shall be amalgamated into one list.

6. There are in the three branches thirty-one parties actually at work, requiring at least one officer to each party, and there are seven officers employed at the two head-quarters offices at Calcutta and Dehra. These are not at present susceptible of reduction. Thus the number of officers required on duty cannot be less than thirty-eight. Some of the parties need more than one officer for the proper carrying on of the work, e.g., for a cadastral survey party two officers are absolutely necessary. It is estimated that on the average there should be ten officers on duty in excess of the thirty-eight, making an effective strength of forty-eight. Adding one-fourth for absentees, the entire strength of the Department is sixty. The Governor-General in Council is pleased to distribute this number as follows:—

13	" " 3rd "
11	assistant superintendents, 1st grade.

7. No officer shall be brought in to officiate unless the number of effective officers available is less than forty-eight.

8. The nominal list attached to this Resolution has been arranged on a strict calculation of the seniority of each officer taken on the mean of his length of service in the above grades and of the period since his last promotion. The only exceptions are in the cases in which this calculation would reverse the present relative position of officers in the same branch of the department, and in those of Mr. James and Captain Waterhouse, who, in accordance with paragraph 7 of the orders in this department, No. 731, dated Oct. 31, 1873, are placed next below Captain C. Strahan and Captain Holdich, respectively.

9. In every survey party in either of the three branches which may hereafter be reduced, the above scale shall be reduced by the complement of officers for each such party, and by a corresponding proportion of the twelve extra officers. Any officers in excess of the sanctioned scale shall be held to be supernumeraries.

10. The Governor-General in Council has further resolved that the maximum salary to be drawn by a deputy superintendent shall be Rs. 1,600 per mensem, by whomsoever the office may be held.

11. All officers who may have received temporary promotion shall revert to their substantive rank whenever they become supernumeraries.

12. Temporary or officiating promotions shall be granted under the existing rules from grade to grade in a class, and from class to class.

13. Should the salary of any officer be reduced under these orders below the substantive pay (including personal allowance, if any) to which he is at present entitled, the difference shall be made up to him by a personal allowance.

14. The number of absentees on furlough shall not exceed 20 per cent. of the entire strength.

15. The Surveyor-General shall perform, in addition to the duties hitherto attaching to the appointment, those of superintendent in the Great Trigonometrical Survey, the separate post being abolished.

16. These orders shall take effect from Jan. 1, 1878.

ORDER.—Ordered that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the Surveyor-General of India, with the request that he will be good enough to take the necessary steps at once for carrying out its provisions.

Ordered also that a copy be forwarded to the Financial Department.

Miscellaneous.

THE COMMERCIAL BANK OF ALEXANDRIA announces that an interim dividend of 1s. 6d. per share (being at the rate of five per cent. per annum) will be paid to the shareholders on the 1st of May.

DELHI AND LONDON BANK.—At the half-yearly meeting of the shareholders of the Delhi and London Bank, held on the 10th inst., the report of the directors, showing a profit of £10,730, was adopted, and a dividend at the rate of four and a-half per cent. per annum declared.

INDIAN OFFICERS.—It has been intimated to officers of the Indian army who have made known their desire to be employed in case of European war that the War Office cannot, at present, at any rate, entertain the application of any but officers of the Imperial army.

WAR OFFICE.—General Lord Napier of Magdala and Major General Sir Garnet Wolseley continue in daily communication with the War Office authorities on the subject of our war preparations, but the latter officer remains in the performance of his official duties at the India Office, notwithstanding his appointment as chief of the staff of the proposed British expeditionary force.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £500,000 in bills on India were received on Thursday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £300,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8-657d.; and to Bombay, £200,000, at an average of 1s. 8-657d. Tenders on Calcutta at 1s. 8-11-16d. will receive about 48 per cent.; on Bombay at that price 50 per cent.

COMMITTEE ON ARREARS OF PAY FOR ORDNANCE CORPS MAJORS.—This Committee sat on April 5, when the Duke of Cambridge was examined. His evidence was favourable to the claimants, inasmuch as he stated he had never known substantive rank being given without its carrying pay. The Committee adjourned until May 17, by which time it is hoped the report may be ready for submission to the members.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.—The Report of the directors of this bank for the year ending December 31 last states that the net profits (with the addition of £6,307 brought forward) amount to £99,310. The interim dividend declared in October last absorbed £24,000 of that sum, and after appropriating 5,000 to reduction of premises account, there now remains an available balance of £70,310, out of which the directors propose that a dividend be declared for the past half-year at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum free of income-tax, and that £40,000 be added to reserve fund, raising it to £150,000. The balance to be carried forward is £6,310.

DEATH OF SIR FRANCIS WHELER.—The death is announced of General Sir Francis Wheeler, Bart., C.B., late of the Bengal Cavalry, aged seventy-seven. The deceased entered the Indian army in 1818, served in Bundelcund in 1821-2, in Afghanistan in 1839-40, and throughout the Punjab campaign of 1848-49, including the siege and capture of Mooltan. In the Indian Mutiny he served as brigadier in command of the Saugor district, and he subsequently commanded the Meerut division of the Bengal army. He is succeeded by his eldest son, Colonel Sir Trevor Wheler, Bart., late of the Bengal Staff Corps, who was born in 1828, and served in the Indian army from 1844 to 1873, when he retired on a pension.

LOSS OF THE "CHILDWALL HALL" STEAMER.—A telegram was received at Lloyd's on the 11th inst. from Lisbon, announcing the loss of the fine new steamer Childwall Hall, on the coast of Tagres, near Cape St. Vincent, Portugal. The steamer was outward bound to Bombay, via the Suez Canal, and left Liverpool on the 6th inst., with a general cargo. The telegram states that two boats, having on board twenty-seven persons, had landed at Tagres, but as the steamer had a crew of at least forty-eight men, and it is presumed a number of passengers, there is a large number of lives still unaccounted for. The steamer was the property of Mr. J. Wood, jun., of Liverpool; was built of iron, at Glasgow, in 1876; classed 100 A 1 at Lloyd's, and registered 2,060 tons gross, 1,361 net, 2,107 under decks. She was constructed with five bulkheads. Captain Putt was the commander. The value of the steamer alone may be estimated approximately at £40,000.

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.—At the meeting of the Royal Geographical Society, over which Sir R. Alcock presided, on the evening of the 8th inst., papers were read by Captain W. Gill, R.E., on "Travels in Western China and on the Eastern Borders of Thibet;" and by Mr. T. W. Goad, on "The United States Topographical Survey of New Mexico." Captain Gill's paper described a journey from Shanghai to the eastern borders of Thibet, and entered into several details as to the geographical features and natural capabilities of the country. He had found the district traversed to be rich in oil wells and mines of various descriptions. Thibet he spoke of as a land flowing with milk and butter. Both China and Thibet he found to be very mountainous over certain parts of his route, but Thibet had many fertile valleys. He had met with eighteen tribes on the border lands of Thibet, seventeen of which were governed by men and one by women. The people were industrious, polite, frugal, and friendly.

INDIA AND ENGLAND.—The East India Association having reached its decade, has issued an address to the Princes and Chiefs of India, calling attention to the fact that the action of the Association and the extension of its influence have been checked by its having no permanent place of residence where the friends of India can meet in any considerable numbers to discuss the many and increasing subjects in which India and England are mutually interested. To provide a suitable and permanent local habitation on a convenient site—that is, in the vicinity of the Houses of Parliament—where members of both Houses could conveniently attend, and to increase the efficiency of the Association, whose only object is the disinterested advocacy of all public interests of India, would demand an outlay of not less than £20,000. This sum, it is hoped, will be subscribed by the powerful and wealthy Princes and Chiefs of India, who are aware that India stands in the greatest need of such a channel for communicating the wishes of its people. There is good reason to believe that the various rulers and nobles of India, many of whom have liberally aided the East India Association, will provide the means to erect the proposed hall in a manner worthy of the great ends for which it is intended.

CAPTAIN HENRY TROTTER, R.E.—At the Council meeting of the Geographical Society on Monday last the Royal medals for the present year were awarded as follows:—1. To Baron Ferdinand von Richthofen, President of the German Geographical Society, for his scientific explorations in China, in the course of which he mapped a great portion of the northern and central provinces, and made valuable observations on their physical geography; also for his great work on the Chinese Empire which is now in course of publication (see p. 315). 2. To Captain Henry Trotter, R.E., for his surveys in Eastern Turkestan, by which the work of the Great Trigonometrical Survey of India was connected with that of the Russian surveyors; and also for his important services in connecting his own work on the Upper Oxus with the explorations of the Mullah and Havildar further to the west, by which means he has made a most valuable contribution to the map of Central Asia. It is understood that Mr. H. M. Stanley's name would have been brought forward for one of the Royal medals, but for the fact that he had already received one in 1873 for the discovery of the late Dr. Livingstone. At the same meeting of the Council of the Society Mr. Stanley was elected an honorary corresponding member.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, MONDAY, April 8.—THE QUEEN'S MESSAGE.—Lord KIMBERLEY said he hoped that this country would not embark in a war against a great Power upon such chimerical notions as that a Russian army would march across the desert to Egypt.—Lord STRATHNAIRN was of opinion that the destruction of the Ottoman Empire would place India in a position of considerable danger, and hoped that effectual means would be devised for averting that danger.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, April 9.—BOMBAY REVENUE.—Mr. HARDY, in reply to Mr. POTTER, said that out of a total revenue in the Bombay Presidency of £3,624,000, there had been collected up to the 31st of August, £2,334,000. There had been £21,000 allowed as remissions, leaving a balance of £274,000 to be collected. The Marquis of Salisbury had given instructions that the greatest moderation should be used in the collection of these arrears, so as not to interfere with the recovery of the famine districts from that visitation. In some districts the reports were not this year as favourable as he could have wished.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY CAPTAIN FRED. BURNABY
 Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fu were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was insuperable to all native medicines, when I administered to him five

COCKLE'S PILLS will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

LAMPLOUGH'S PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.
Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

H. LAMPLOUGH, Consulting Chemist, 113, HOLBORN, E.C.,

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, April 1; Allahabad and Madras, March 30; Calcutta, March 29.

THE Telegraph is far in advance of the Mail as regards the reported Licence Tax riot, so that we are yet without particulars of that occurrence. But, according to the Pioneer, a correspondent of the Jam-i-Jamshid, writing from Surat, shows that the inquiry instituted into the occupation and incomes of the trading classes had excited the people greatly; and that the spirit of opposition to authority was prevalent. The date of the letter is not given, but we gather from it that on March 22, two officials of the Licence Tax Department were severely handled by the populace in the Chhipwad quarter; and that, on or about the same day, 7,000 people were assembled to prevent the execution of a warrant which had been served on an inhabitant of the town. These occurrences had naturally made the governing powers uneasy, and a Municipal Committee was to have met to consider the state of affairs and apply, if possible, a remedy.

WE are glad to notice the statement that the numbers on relief at Agra were diminishing, and that the Government of the North-West Provinces had empowered the Collectors of Bareilly, Budaon, Agra and Farukhabad to remit or suspend rent in those parts where the crop had been destroyed. According to district reports, however, prices continued to rise in the Central Provinces; and in the Madras Presidency, together with a rise in prices, general prospects are said to have shown no improvement. The number of persons on relief in the province of Maisur had increased; but the accounts from the districts were hopeful.

THE Friend of India quotes the following from the Deccan Herald. The picture is a gloomy one, and seems to comprehend a vast extent of country:—"There are hundreds who would be glad to work who have nothing to do. Whenever an opening is heard of, crowds of applicants rush to the front, even though there should be only Rs. 5 of pay attached to it. The times are the most trying we have seen during our thirty years' experience of the country; and yet we do not see the end of it, for the rubbee harvest is almost a failure in many of the talookas in our neighbourhood, while the scarcity of water is now becoming very serious in some of them."

THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM is ready to acknowledge good service in emergencies. His Grace has headed the subscriptions which are being collected for the purpose of presenting a testimonial to Mr. W. Digby, Honorary Secretary of the Madras Famine Fund.

ACCORDING to a telegram dated April 18 from Bombay, published in London this morning, the force to be sent to Malta will be placed under Brigadier-General Ross, commanding the first brigade. The second brigade will be commanded by Brigadier-General Macpherson, the cavalry by Major Watson, and the sappers by Major Prendergast. The Governor of Bombay has chartered numerous transports for the conveyance of the troops. It is also reported from Calcutta on the same date, that General Ross was about to start for Malta via Bombay.

A FURTHER telegram of the 18th inst. from Calcutta states that a meeting, attended by about 4,000 natives, was held here last night, at which speeches were made condemning the Vernacular Press Act. It was resolved to petition Parliament, through Mr. Gladstone, against the measure.

WE observe the following among the latest movements reported and anticipated:—Sir Edward Bayley is permitted to resign the Civil Service. Sir Samuel Browne will probably succeed Lieutenant General Stewart in the acting command of the Lahore Division. Lieutenant-Colonel Couper, Superintendent and Agent for Army Clothing, will very likely be transferred to the Directorship of the Remount Department. The Hon. G. G. Morris, of the Calcutta High Court, takes six months' leave; and Mr. L. R. Tottenham officiates for him.

THE Bombay Gazette states that Colonel Thomason, after completing his duties at the Madras Harbour, has paid visits to Vizagapatam, False Point, Coconada, Madras, Tuticorin, Colombo, Cochin, Karwar, Goa and Bombay. From the last port he proceeds to Karachi, returning eventually to Madras. Commander Taylor, Superintendent of Marine Surveys, has also been engaged in inspecting the ports on the Eastern coast, and Major Baird, of the Great Trigonometrical Survey, is to be associated in the same work.

THE question of marriage expenses is still under agitation among distinguished natives. It seems that Babu Keshab Chander Sen asked for and obtained Rs. 10,000 from the Kuch Bahar State on that account, and returned Rs. 1,500. Munshi Piari Lal's proposal to reduce the outlay on these occasions has the support of the Maharajas of Darbhunga and Hatwa, the first of whom has made a handsome donation of Rs. 1,000 and the second recorded a monthly subscription of Rs. 30 in aid of the cause advocated.

AMONG the early results of the Vernacular Press Bill, one worthy of record is the appearance of the Amrita Bazar Patrika in English only, this paper having been formerly a diglot, i.e., English and Bengali. Another native paper, already English, advises the whole Vernacular Press to follow suit.

It is satisfactory to find that the study of Arabic and Persian has not been abandoned by officers of the Indian Army; only we wish that a reward for proficiency in either were not made a simple matter of rupees. A smart officer and good Persian scholar would benefit the State as well as himself in the capacity of a military attaché at Tehran: whereas his acquirements are likely to "waste their sweetness" in the dreary routine work of an Indian Cantonment. Money is a very practical inducement to prosecute these useful studies; and has, doubtless, in many instances, had the effect of encouraging the student to reach the mark of proficiency; but the grant of rupees is, we take it, not purely a disinterested one. Government, it is apprehended, looks for a return in value of some kind. How, then, is this to be obtained? Hardly by putting Persian and Arabic scholars to work on duties in which their linguistic attainments are of no possible use, and which could be performed equally well by men who never heard of the Anwari Sohaili or Alif Laila.

WE republish the list of officers serving under the several Local Governments and Administrations subordinate to the Government of India, including those of the Bengal, Madras, and Bombay armies, who have passed the High Proficiency or Degree of Honour tests in the Arabic and Persian languages, or either of them, between September 1, 1876, and August 31, 1877:—

Government of India.—Lieut. A. C. Talbot, degree of honour in Arabic; Capt. R. H. F. Rennick, Persian H.P.

Bengal Army.—Lieut. A. C. Le Quesne, Persian H.P.; Lieut. J. H. Sadler, Persian H.P.; Lieut. E. F. J. de C. Rennick, Persian H.P.; Lieut. G. Shields, Persian H.P.

Madras.—Lieut. col. F. H. Tyrrell, degree of honour in Persian; Capt. A. V. Chick, Persian H.P.; Surg. J. M. Beamish, M.D., Persian H.P.

Punjab.—Mr. J. G. Silcock, C.S., Persian H.P.

Nine in Persian and one in Arabic during the twelvemonth is a fair number. Could not Turkish be added to the curriculum? It is very useful in Central Asia and, roughly speaking, is current from Constantinople to Kulja.

THE London evening papers on Wednesday were in great demand owing to the announcement that "the Indian Government had received orders to despatch troops to Malta." This important fact was communicated by telegram from Calcutta of the 17th inst. We learn further that the following regiments had been selected:—The 9th Bengal Cavalry, the 1st Bombay Light Cavalry, the 2nd Goorkhas, the 13th and 31st Bengal Regiments, the 25th Madras Regiment, two regiments of Bombay Native Infantry, two field batteries of Artillery from Bombay, two companies of Sappers and Miners from Bombay, and two from Madras. The Native Infantry was to be brigaded with the British Infantry at Malta. Major Adams, Assistant Quartermaster-General at Calcutta, and Major Keays, Assistant Commissary General, had proceeded in advance to make arrangements for the reception of the troops. Moreover, the above intelligence was supplemented on the same day by telegrams, addressed to some of the leading Tyne steam-shipping firms, requiring immediate tenders (to send out to India) for steamers now in Indian ports, to embark troops at Bombay, Madras, or Calcutta forthwith, for the Mediterranean. It is said that several owners who have boats in India unchartered have already made offers.

THE Times of the 15th inst. contains a telegram of the day previous, stating that the Raja of Puri, who, on the charge of murder brought against him, had been sentenced to transportation for life, had appealed to the High Court; and that the case had excited great interest. According to the Correspondent, the distinguished criminal is entitled to the hereditary charge of the Temple of Jagau-nath as Head Shaiv or Shivaite, and is regarded as the incarnation of Vishna; the Uriyas prostrate themselves before him; and the practice of incantations against his person or power is the alleged motive of the murder committed.

THROUGH the same channel we learn that "a rather serious riot recently broke out at Surat on the occasion of the imposition of the licence tax. The military had to be called out and fired on the rioters, several of whom were wounded and one killed, after which the disturbance was quelled. Strikes and riots also occurred simultaneously in other towns of Western India, though they were of a milder type. The Times Correspondent thinks the Vernacular Press primarily responsible that the tone of native feeling in India is not so healthy as could be desired. He sees in the "assertions which it has constantly reiterated regarding England's decrepitude, coupled with as oft-repeated eulogia of the resources and power of Russia," a means of unsettling the native mind, of arousing an expectation of change which he rightly considers "not conducive to good government." But he leads us beyond the sphere of seditious utterances by the Press when acquainting us that this particular mischief has been encouraged by the "conviction that the Indian Government has, to a considerable extent, during past years sunk to the position of a mere State machine for carrying out the wired instructions of the Secretary of State." We naturally ask whether such conviction is general, and how has it arisen? Without denying its existence in some sense, we are glad to believe that it is only partial. As regards the remedy to be applied, it is discussed in our columns elsewhere.

THE Indian Daily News of March 21 contains an interesting paper on Kelat, taking up the thread of events from 1873, in which year the withdrawal of our Political Agent inaugurated a system of non-interference with the affairs of that disturbed little State. It is chiefly a review of Lord Salisbury's recent despatch, allusion to which was made in our issue of the 8th inst.; but there are comments which must be considered editorial. The whole history merits the study of the Indian politician—because it embraces considerations most important to the security of our frontier; and, to arrive at a clear appreciation of the present status, it is essential to know the events of the last forty years, commencing with, say, Lieut. Leech's Mission in 1838. When, in these later days, we took into our hands to negotiate with, or keep in order the plundering tribes, notably the Maris, independently of the Khan, we reverted in a measure to the line of policy adopted on our first occupation of Shikarpur, and before the Treaty of 1854. And this arrangement proved so far successful that outrages, directly affecting ourselves, became comparatively infrequent; only we could not make up our minds to an inaction and an indifference which were, at best, of questionable propriety. We naturally felt interested in a neighbouring country with which he had had intimate relations for many years; the ruler of which had accepted a Resident Agent of our own in 1856; and where the British name had fairly recovered from the serious effects of the disastrous advance into Afghanistan, and its concomitant mistakes and misfortunes. Nor could we close our eyes to remain quiet spectators of the plunder and anarchy rampant beyond our proper limits. At the end of 1875 we saw sufficient grounds to make "Our purpose necessary and not envious."

So, setting aside the policy of non-intervention, after a three years' trial, the Indian Government sent Major Sandeman to settle the disputes between the Khan of Kalat and his Sardars.

PASSING over the results of Major Sandeman's mission, and the "armed intervention," as it is called, which followed, we come to the next step, a treaty thus described:—

It binds our Government to protect the Khan against every foreign and domestic enemy, thus giving to him a complete guarantee, both for the integrity of his dominions and the submission of all the tribes within them. It provides for the garrisoning of Kelat by our troops during our pleasure. We make the Khan an allowance of five lakhs a year,—a sum which probably exceeds the total amount of his revenues, and the latter he still retains for his own use. The Khan appears, in return, to have taken no pledge to rule justly, or according to the advice of our Resident, as is usual in cases where we take military possession of an Indian state, and leave the administration in the hands of the native ruler. But he undertakes to submit all serious disputes with his nobles to our arbitration, and in Kelat this is probably sufficient to give us the entire control of the Government.

We do not agree with the opinion that this amounts to the "Sale of Kelat to the British Government for an allowance of five lakhs a year;" because, do what we may with the Khan, we cannot dispose of his turbulent barons as we should do where we lords paramount. But we have purchased an immediate interest in the country which should be used with discretion and vigilance. One of the first measures to be taken is to secure, by accurate survey, that knowledge of our ally's dominions which his Highness ought to possess on his own account; and with this knowledge, we should be careful that under our guardianship he lose none of his acres by encroachment from without, whether from Persia on the West or rebellious subjects and Afghans in the North.

MR. ROBERT ELLIOT supplies the London Times with an apt illustration of the advantages to be looked for in an improved system of Land Tenure in India. He says that in the Cuddapah District of the Madras Presidency in the very midst of the greatest drought and when the tanks were all dry, there was a certain narrow tract of country which seemed like a paradise. On every side were splendid crops of maize, with fine large cobs of grain. This was due to deep wells, in which even then the water was from eight feet to ten feet deep, with a good spring at the bottom, and nine-tenths of the wells were due to the fact that the land was private property, subject to an annual quit rent, or held rent free for various reasons. The lesson he would inculcate is that by giving the people tenures that will induce them to dig wells, a step in the right direction is taken towards the mitigation of famine. To ensure success much must of course depend on the quality of the particular tracts accorded, and, therefore, much on the discrimination of those who dispose of them. But the subject is worthy of continuous attention.

WE notice that the Sanitary Commissioner of the North-West Provinces and Oudh has been investigating the drainage system prevailing at Cawnpore, with a view to making a report on the subject, which has been required by the Secretary of State. According to the Indian papers, the main features of the system are "the removal of the heavier refuse by cart to the model-farm, where it makes splendid manure; while the fluid portion is washed down the drains by means of water let in from branches of the canal, and finally emptied into the Ganges just above the Government Harness Factory."

A TELEGRAM from Singapore, dated the 21st March, announces that the Legislative Council had held its first sitting this year, on which occasion the members had taken the oath of allegiance. The new Governor, Sir W. C. F. Robinson, K.C.M.G., in concluding his address announcing the Bills for consideration, acknowledged the kind reception he had met with during his visit to Malacca and some Native States. The same telegram states that in the Revenue and Expenditure report of the Resident at Perak for 1877 there is observed an increase in the revenue of $39,829 over that of 1876. The total revenue is $312,862, against an expenditure of $292,712.

THE Japanese are indeed a go-ahead people. It is not so many years since that they made the then bold venture of starting a steamer on their own account, manned by a native crew. The story goes that, after accomplishing the start, a greater difficulty presented itself in the question of how to stop. Now they have arrived at an advanced stage of progress in such matters. We have learnt this week that a Japanese war-vessel, named the Seiki, built in Japan, had arrived as far west as Colombo, and saluted the Fort on arrival; also, that she might be expected in English waters; for she was eventually to call at Portsmouth. On Thursday we read that she was at Malta on the 11th inst.

A LETTER in the Times of the 18th instant, under the heading of "Cavalry from India," shows that, according to the "Official Army List," there were present 122 officers with the nineteen regiments of Bengal Cavalry, thirty-five with the five Panjab Cavalry Regiments, and eleven with the brigade of two regiments of Central India Horse; exclusive of eight officers on "famine duties" who would no doubt rejoin if their corps were ordered on service. But there are also shown to be thirty-five officers on furlough or sick leave in Europe; and it is reasonably inferred that half of these would rejoin on an emergency. We should thus have a total of 193 officers for twenty-six regiments, or nearly eight officers per regiment. The writer thinks that with such a number—which it would not be difficult to maintain complete—no further arrangements as to officering are needed; and that we may "quite rely upon our native cavalry proving itself a most valuable portion of our army out of India, as it has always been in every description of service in that country." He is opposed to the system of pitchforking Europeans into corps, for the subordinate duty of troop commanders, on the eve of service, and we quite agree with him if such new hands are to be "raw," and likely to "dishearten and disgust the native officers under whose command troops have been ever since the regiments were raised." But among the many unemployed officers of the Staff Corps—or officers of the Staff Corps who would join from Civil appointments in the event of war—there would surely be found men whose coming would be an accession of strength in every sense, as well as a mere numerical addition; men who may have already been cavalry officers, or whose antecedents fit them for irregular cavalry duties. Nor do we see the objection to attaching one or two smart young officers to Cavalry regiments, without allowing them to supersede native officers of the stamp described. Supersession should, in such cases, be cautiously exercised, and never, except when in the Commanding Officer's opinion, it adds to efficiency and brings with it manifest improvement.

THE following statistics taken from the Bombay Times Summary will interest military readers. But although we rejoice at the diminution in the number of courts-martial shown, it need scarcely be said that one year's results such as these, whatever their force in the present instance, are not always to be accepted as conclusive evidence of better discipline:—

Last year there were twenty-eight courts-martial in the European, and eight in the native army in India. Of the first, two were on European officers (of whom one was acquitted), and three on medical subordinates; in the native army, six of the courts-martial were on officers. In the European army two of the charges were for murder, and the men expiated their crimes by death; one was for disobedience of orders; and the remaining twenty-five were for the prevailing crimes of insubordination and personal violence. In the native army, the charges were various; one was for drunkenness and neglect of duty; two for making false and malicious accusations; one for un-officer-like conduct; one for murder; one for desertion when on sentry; and one for falsehood and leading money to subordinates. In seventeen cases, where the accused were charged with crimes of various degrees of heinousness, the same sentence was pronounced—five years' penal servitude. It is gratifying to state that the total number of courts-martial in the Indian army, both British and native, was less during the past than it has been for several previous years.

THERE is an exceptional stress laid upon a visitation of spiders in the Indian gossip lately received. Whether the appearance of these creatures be supposed to forebode good or evil we are not informed; but we have a recollection of nursery notions about their presence being a happy omen, commonly accompanied by warnings not to destroy them. In the Darjeeling district, for instance, where there has been timely rain, where tea manufacture has begun, and where the settlers have the cheery prospect of a fair season; the red spider is reported to be very prevalent. But this little insect is thrown into utter insignificance by something as remarkable as the Aranea Aricularia or gigantic bird-catcher; it is the visitor in Assam, stated by the local paper to be "a spider capable of making a noise . . . known as Mugale Stridulans . . . as large as a small mouse." We are further informed that its bite is very venomous, and that the noise which especially distinguishes it is a grating or stridulating one, produced by rubbing together some of "the organs attached to the mouth." The Greco-Latin name is puzzling; because we are led in its consideration from Aranea and arachnida among rodent quadrupeds and digitigrada carnivora; but we leave the expert naturalist to find the true classification. In any case it must be to the dwellers in Assam quite a relief to know that this creature has attracted authoritative notice; and we accept the fact that it has been "described before the Entomological Society" much in the same way as the inhabitants of a suffering neighbourhood welcome the intelligence that a burglar or garotter, who had made their neighbourhood his favourite haunt, had been brought before the sitting magistrate in Bow-street.

WRITING of a Calico Ball given lately at Lohor, at which his Highness the Nawab of Bahawalpur appeared as Louis XIII., and another Highness and Nawab as Charles II., the Madras Athenæum says that a similar "anachronism in dress and complexion" was perpetrated in the Southern Presidency in February, 1876. The term used is not perhaps a happy one, for something which is rather an absurd anomaly than an inversion of time or events. Had the Mahratta Sivaji disguised himself as the Merry Monarch, the absurdity would have been equally marked; and yet the true and the fictitious Charles would have been contemporaneous personages. But the sense of the ludicrous and impossible herein arises out of a nutshell. Had it been as easy to make a dark skin fair as a fair skin dark, by cosmetics or ordinary appliances, there is no reason why an educated Nawab should not be as eligible to wear the dress of an English or French historical character as for an Englishman to be Othello, or a Frenchman Nelusko. Nine out of ten representatives of distinguished characters, walking through the mazes of ball-rooms in the nineteenth century, care little to identify themselves further than in outward show and traditional mannerisms with the models they have chosen. It is perhaps not more difficult to be Louis XIII. or Charles II. than Taimur the Tartar, or a modern Indian juggler, for the purposes of a fancy ball.

GENERAL OFFICERS.—In the Royal Warrant of August 13, 1877, the following number of General Officers was laid down as the proportion for the Indian Staff Corps, viz., Generals 14, Lieutenant-Generals 21, Major-Generals 35, as shown at page 182 "Bombay Army List." In the Royal Warrant, dated Jan. 28, 1878, for the Indian Local Army, published at pages 208-209 of the Bombay Government Gazette of March 14th the 7th para. reads thus:—"The fixed establishment of General Officers (including the names of officers of the Staff Corps) shall be the following:—Generals 23, Lieutenant-Generals 35, Major-Generals 59, total 117. Therefore, deducting the number of General Officers apportioned to the Indian Staff Corps, the portion for the Locals will be Generals 9, Lieutenant-Generals 14, Major-Generals 24. Now in the War Office Gazette, dated Feb. 15, the Bombay Times finds the retirements of the Local General Officers under the Royal Warrant, dated Dec. 31, 1877, and the promotions in consequence under the Royal Warrant, dated Jan. 28, 1878; and according to the 7th para. of the last quoted Royal Warrant, there should be 9 Generals, but it finds only one General, viz.: Story, Bengal Cavalry, not retired, and 7 Lieutenant-Generals promoted, total 8 Generals in lieu of 9. Again, commencing with Barrett and ending with Brown, it finds but 22 Major-Generals in lieu of 24 (that is including Beale, deceased since Oct. 1), so that one Lieutenant-General and 2 Colonels have to be promoted to complete the establishment.

TROOPS FROM INDIA.

THERE was a long and remarkable telegram in the Times of April 16, dated from Calcutta on the previous day. It conveyed the particulars of a "rather serious riot" at Surat on the occasion of imposing the License Tax; and suggested that the Indian Executive, being too weak for its high and comprehensive purposes, should be made strong enough to overcome the "various phases of political fermentation to which all efforts at reform in India have hitherto given rise." We seem to apprehend the writer's meaning, though it be in some measure vague; but allowance must be made for a message passing through the wires from Calcutta to London. A telegram in the Times is not expected to carry the literary weight of a leading article in the Times.

It is, however, to the second part of the communication that we have to solicit attention; a consideration of the state and probable uses of the Native Army in the event of European war. Date, matter, and address will readily account for the full extract which will be found in our columns, for the benefit of those readers who may not have already digested the telegram. The opinion expressed is not impossibly the prevailing opinion in India; it is certainly not one indulged in by the correspondent alone. For ourselves, we believe it to be that of men commonly referred to by newspaper contributors on these occasions—that class which is held to be "well-informed"—that class to which a correspondent himself, and notably a special one, may belong. Moreover, it comes from far, conservative Calcutta; and is not yet a week old.

If India can, at a brief notice, recruit her native military force to a million, it is clear that, in an equally brief period, the said million can be fully and efficiently officered. But while the choice of recruits, and the mode of recruiting, for the ranks, may be safely left to the Government of India, with its staff of advisers on the spot, it is only the nucleus or at best the minimum proportion of the higher grades that can be furnished in that country: the recruiting of officers "to complete" must be done in England. This is not such an easy matter, because it strikes at the root of established custom. The traditions of the old East India Company, good as well as bad, splendid as well as shabby, proud or peddling, have been ruthlessly banished from the administrative mind; and, to achieve our new objects, we should seek a revival of the spirit freely displayed within the last century in men whose training in sipahi regiments was the groundwork on which they built a lasting reputation. Officers who accept service with an Indian soldiery should be taught that the duties to be fulfilled are high and responsible; that knowledge of character, prejudice, and habit, is as imperative as acquaintance with the language of their men; and that drill and discipline, however essential are insufficient qualifications, in the abstract, whether for themselves or those to be instructed by them. Caste is not confined to India, though we detect and decry it there. It is not unknown in civilised Europe; and where it has taken deep root, as with ourselves, it is perhaps better to utilise than attempt to destroy. In plain language, there should be no loss of social or professional caste incurred, either really or apparently, by service with sipahis.

The telegram sees danger in leaving the command of companies to native officers, subject only to European supervision, and so "building up a body" of skilled leaders to intervene between the rank and file and English officers. It also points out that by the operation of the Staff Corps System, and the "reckless" transfer of English officers from regiment to regiment, the old cordial understanding between the several grades of the Anglo-Indian army has ceased to exist, and the Sipahis are thrown for sympathy and guidance on their own fellow-countrymen and co-religionists holding British Commissions. If this be so—and we do not dispute the local opinion of well-informed and competent men—there appears to us no better solution of the difficulty than to be found in the suggestion we have just put forward. Officers well selected in India, and well instructed in England, would work hard to repair the damage done by the so-called "recklessness," and, if a nail be wanting to secure the good effect of Reform, it could be had in the issue of an Order to make the postings permanent.

Reforms in the British army are carried out on the best and soundest principles. They receive the fiat of the most able and experienced, as well as the most distinguished officers of every branch of the service. In the Indian Army, it is to be feared that a theory, born in one part of India and applicable to that part, is put into practice for the whole vast Empire; and we cannot but see, in an irregular or "irregularly officered" Madras Regiment, as much an anomaly as would have been the conversion of the Sind Horse, or a Nizam's or Punjab corps, cavalry or infantry, into tightly-buttoned and uncomfortably equipped sipahis—with full complement of officers from Lieutenant-Colonel to Cornet, Ensign or Second Lieutenant, as the case might have required. We are unable to say who or what originated the system of separate companies of different sects: but we are not surprised at its reported failure. At the same time, we do not subscribe to the proposal of introducing into the native ranks "a small percentage of British soldiers" to serve as a "guarantee against seditions and combinations," and eventually to "leaven the whole native army," for we have no faith in the likelihood of any such outcome resulting from such a measure. Experience of the difficulties of amalgamating Europeans and Asiatics, as represented in British India, teach us that an association of the nature indicated would have a two-fold danger. Firstly, out of the small disputes and differences which must arise in sudden and forced companionship, something akin to class-dislike would ensue; and secondly, a too-friendly feeling if produced, as probable in some cases, would be destructive not only to caste prejudice, but to what may be called caste advantages, i.e., the independence and amour propre which characterise many good native soldiers in India. But these are only a small part of the objections which might be brought forward to the scheme outlined in the telegram.

As regards military officers in civil employ returning to military duty, we think that each case should rest on its own merits. Much depends on the nature of the civil appointments filled, on the character of the individual filling it, and on the general exigencies of the service, to allow of a fair decision being passed. But no unjust or unwise supersession should ever be sanctioned; and examinations, or a period of probation, might be always exacted in instances of the kind contemplated.

We have but glanced at an argument which we propose shortly to take up in greater detail. Meanwhile, we may remark that three days after date of the telegram under notice, the important announcement was flashed through the wires that orders had been received by the Indian Government to despatch troops to Malta. Two regiments of Indian Cavalry, six regiments of Native Infantry, two field batteries of Artillery, and some Sappers and Miners had been named for this service. It is not improbable that the correspondent had some fore-knowledge of these results when he telegraphed on April 14. In any case, it is satisfactory to note the working of the once absurd Indo-European telegraph. The first-mentioned message to the Times, of more than one column in length, is dated Calcutta, six P.M., and is published in London early on the following morning.

THE NATIVE ARMY OF INDIA.

The following remarks by the correspondent of our leading journal are dated Calcutta, 14th April, and were published in this country on the day following. No apology will be needed for their reproduction:—In view of the probability of their being employed in a European war, the state of the native army has occasioned considerable discussion. The Indian press has little doubt but that, if England so willed it, the native military force might in a comparatively short time be recruited up to the strength of a million. If fully and efficiently officered it would, in fighting qualities, be second only to an army of English soldiers, while in respect of endurance and power of bearing privations it would be second to no military force in the world. An auxiliary army raised in India, where for all practical purposes our resources are limitless, would give England a military preponderance in almost any European war in which she engaged. On this account it especially behoves the English Government jealously to guard that so important an auxiliary force should not be wasted through defective organisation. The question of Indian army reform has been agitated for years, and the longer a solution of the problem is delayed the more complicated and difficult it will grow. It must be borne in mind that not only does the efficiency of the army in war depend on the solution of this problem, but that the Government can never hope to rule India except by absolute Imperialism until loyalty is established in the heart of the country beyond the reach of suspicion. To effect this some very radical changes must be made in the system hitherto practised, which is to leave the command of companies to native officers, subject only to the regimental supervision of English officers; native officers are commissioned and formally gazetted, the intention being to educate a skilled class of native commissioned regimental officers who would serve as substitutes for English officers. That so a dangerous a policy could have been deliberately planned and adopted, with the lesson of the Indian Mutiny fresh in the minds of its authors, is almost incredible. The failure of the Mutiny lies in the fact that the native regiments were destitute of English officers, and consequently degenerated into an armed rabble. This policy of building up a body of skilled native officers to intervene between soldiers and English officers is also to be condemned when we consider that the only feeling of loyalty which practically actuates the sepoy is that of personal allegiance to English regimental officers, arising from long service in the same regiment. Now the Staff Corps system has destroyed all this. For the last eighteen years English officers have been so recklessly transferred from regiment to regiment that a cordial understanding between officers and men has entirely ceased to exist. The sepoys are, therefore, thrown for sympathy and guidance wholly on the native commissioned officers. The fact cannot be too soon realised that we cannot afford, with any regard to the stability of English rule in India, to tolerate the existence of a large unnecessary native army, except it be entirely under English influence. The present system is costly, worthless, and dangerous.

Some statistics lately published show that at present the Bengal Staff Corps has 491 field officers against 175 subalterns, the latter filling the offices of lieutenants, colonels, and majors. The Staff Corps has been thoroughly tried and found so completely defective that it must sooner or later be abolished; and an immediate reform is necessary to render the native army efficient in war by the substitution of English for native company officers; and in order to revive the feeling of regimental esprit de corps the old system of regimental promotion must be reorganised. There is, however, one reform in particular which, if effectively carried out, would at once give new and thorough coherence to the native army and inspire lasting loyalty. After the mutiny the plan was adopted of forming regiments with separate companies of different sects, and it was hoped that in this way each company would act as a check upon every other of a different sect, and that thus seditious combination would be rendered impossible. This expectation has been entirely unrealised. The esprit de corps has proved itself paramount over all considerations of religion and race, so that by the present system we have been fostering a unification of native feeling, overcoming the barriers of caste and prejudice, so valuable as a safeguard in case of mutiny. The danger here pointed out might be entirely nullified by specially enlisting as recruits for England those who have had long service in the native army and adding to each native regiment, company, or troop a small percentage of British soldiers, which would serve as a guarantee against seditious and combinations, and in a short time wholesomely leaven the whole native army. The extra cost which this reform would involve might be met by withdrawing half of the present number of English troops in India, and in time of peace reducing the strength of the native army, maintaining merely skeleton battalions, so that in the event of war an army might be easily mobilised. British companies might, again, in case of need, be drafted into separate battalions. I believe a composite Indian army formed on this basis would prove all but invincible, and could be relied upon with perfect security either when serving in India or engaged as an auxiliary British force in a European war. From a political point of view, on the other hand, the fact that Europeans and natives were serving in the same regiments would conduce more to draw the two races together than any other means that could possibly be devised. There is one other reform which, though not so immediately necessary, is urgently required. No military officer ought to be allowed to take civil service and yet be retained in the Army List. There are Generals in the Indian Army who have never done a day's soldiering since they were ensigns. Civil employ is infinitely more lucrative than military service, consequently the ambition of most young officers is to obtain civil service. This has induced a feeling of dissatisfaction in officers holding military appointments, who find themselves in inferior positions to those in civil employ. No state of things could be more destructive of proper military aspiration and the ambition to attain the utmost scientific knowledge of their profession. In whatever way this great problem of native army reform may be solved, it is a question which must soon force itself on the notice of Parliament, as not only vitally affecting the government of India, but as one which will in future be intimately connected with the Imperial policy.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

The following has been sent to us, in the shape of a printed Post-office card, as the Eastern Question, "Its Fit and Durable Solution:—"

SIR,—The Kingdom of Greece.—(Albania inclusive)—to be extended to the Balkans, its natural northern frontier.

Bulgaria to be a constitutional and independent Government, under an elective President or Monarch. The will of the people, by free election, being accepted and confirmed by the European Powers—exclusive of Russia.

Roumania to be extended to the Dniester; its natural, ancient and ethnologically national boundary.

Bosnia and Herzegovina to be independent, under same form of autonomy as Servia.

Constantinople to be a Free Port, and placed under the delegated protectorate of Great Britain, as representing France, Austria, Germany, Italy and Greece, its occupation terminable by treaty, on their demand; as in the instance of the Ionian Islands in 1864.

This group of Independent States, in confederation, and protected by the liberal and free Governments of Europe (the absolute religious equality of the peoples being recognised as a fundamental condition of Government) would effectually baffle the designs of any foreign Despot!

DIRECT COMMISSIONS IN THE NATIVE ARMY.

The scheme of direct commissions for the Native Army has now been in force for five years, and the public are not unnaturally anxious to know what measure of success has attended it. The object for which it was designed by the late Commander-in-Chief was that of inducing men of position and family to enter the Native Army. But competent men, from the first, entertained serious doubts of the practicability of this laudable purpose, and from all we can hear, the result has been to justify these doubts. There is but too much reason, in short, to fear that, while failing to effect the object aimed at, the scheme has developed other consequences, which are already spreading discontent in the Native Army, and bid fair to prove otherwise detrimental to its efficiency. The fact is that, instead of the scheme having attracted the class of men contemplated by Lord Napier, there is hardly a man on the list who, if sent to a cavalry regiment, would not find men of superior family to himself serving in the ranks; and there can be no question that the spectacle of men thus brought in on the score of family over the heads of others with superior claims, is calculated to cause, and is causing, most serious discontent in the regiments affected. The scheme may work better in infantry regiments where the men are of inferior birth; but then again the better class of candidates would not take commissions in infantry regiments. The original idea was to induce young noblemen to enter the army, educate them, and gradually improve the position of native officers until they became of some real use to regiments, instead of being merely a political necessity as at present. It was also thought that a discontented, because unemployed, class of the population might obtain an outlet to their ambition. A native officer, a man of family himself, was asked about the working of this scheme the other day, and gave the following opinion:—"You will never get the class of men you want. A man who has riches and position won't come into the service. Why should he, to be sent to riding-school and drilled by a man of inferior caste; to be put shoulder to shoulder with men he despises; to have to get up at night and go round guard, to hold his tongue and do what he is told, and many other things he dislikes as much? Any one who knows what our young men of wealth and position are, must know they will never become soldiers in an army where the discipline was as strict as the Sirkar's. I was poor when I became a soldier, and the discipline was easy and lax compared with what it is now. The sahib log interfered very little with the Native officers, so they had everything in their hands, and what they said was law, and they were big men. But all that is changed now; the sahib log almost live in the lines, and everything is expected to be as smart as in an English regiment. Thus, instead of the army being an easy, comfortable life as it used to be, every one is worked morning, noon, and night, and the sahib log hardest of all. The only class who will come in are the same who would have entered the ranks in former days, sons of Ressaldar Majors, Subadars, rich Amlah, who value the official position for their sons, and base-born, beggarly Pathans with lying pedigrees. It is the Sirkar's hukum that they should become officers at once, therefore everyone is content. If I can get my son in as an officer, it will be a great gain." The truth of the above is obvious to most officers with any knowledge of Native character. We shall have to change the nature of the people before we can get the class of men we want, or we shall have to change the service. If there is good pay, a pleasant, easy, comfortable life, we may obtain a few young noblemen for the officers' grades. But is the Government willing to give good pay for no work? Will it consent to have its cavalry return to the days of charjamas, pink tails, rusty matchlocks and irregular musters, when promotions and rewards were made on the recommendation of native officers, and sentries relieved themselves? Utopian ideas of the native gentleman, burning with martial ardour and prowling about his domain with the restless energy of the confined tiger, being given the opportunity to develop his warlike aspirations by regular drill, study of English, and garrison class examination, are about on a par with the hope that he will play football with his villagers in the same way as English gentlemen, and spend his leisure hours in water-colour painting and writing for the papers on social subjects. The art of war is a highly civilised art, and to have even a small knowledge of it in the present day requires the training and ability of a tutored mind. If one of our ancestors, say of the fifteenth century, were pitchforked into the position of a light infantry officer of the present time, there would be small matter of wonder if his commanding officer reported that he was a most inefficient officer and perfectly useless in the regiment; and yet it is proposed to make light cavalry and infantry officers out of less promising materials.—Englishman, March 15.

From the latest district reports from the Panjab, we see that mention is made of slight damage by hailstorms in a few districts, and by damp and too much rain in others; but, on the whole, the prospects are favourable.

THE UNIVERSITY CONVOCATION.

The yearly Convocation of the University of Calcutta for conferring Degrees was held last Saturday-afternoon at the Senate-house, College-square. After the usual ceremonies, the Hon. Justice Markby, the Vice-Chancellor, said:—

"Mr. Eden, Fellows, Graduates, and Undergraduates of the University of Calcutta: I regret to state that the result of the examinations which have just been held in the University have not been satisfactory. When, however, I say that the results have not been satisfactory I do not mean that they have been unsatisfactory to the University itself. So far as the University is concerned, the object of these examinations has been attained when it has once been secured that they have been conducted with integrity and purity, and that the standards of sufficiency have not been capriciously disturbed. It is of the utmost importance that every candidate who presents himself to our examinations should feel that he has nothing to fear from prejudice, nothing to hope from corruption or favour: the actual number of candidates who pass is to us, as a University, a matter of comparative indifference. It is of course a very serious matter to the Colleges from whence our candidates come, and I have no doubt it will receive full attention in the proper quarter. Gentlemen, in the past year we have lost two of our oldest and most distinguished members—Dr. Duff and the Maharajah Romanath Tagore. Of Dr. Duff I can only speak from hearsay. Although he only died within the past year, he left India finally in 1863, and in the Convocation of 1864 his character was drawn by Sir Henry Maine in language so terse and discriminating that I feel I should only be doing an injustice to Dr. Duff's memory if I were to attempt to add anything of my own. I can, however, say this, that Dr. Duff is one of the very few men remembered with affection fifteen years after they have quitted the scene of their labours. I have never heard Dr. Duff's name mentioned without receiving some fresh proof of the veneration in which his name is held throughout all classes of society. Maharajah Romanath Tagore died in the midst of us a few months ago. His youth fell in a time when the means of education at the command of natives of this country were what we should now justly deem inadequate. But nevertheless by making the best use of the opportunities at his command, Romanath Tagore when he grew up had a full right to call himself a well-educated man. He was moreover a man of no prejudices. He never dreamt that it [was] beneath the dignity of a well-born and well-educated man to betake himself to the pursuits of commerce, and he nevertheless attained the highest position of dignity and influence in the rank of his fellow countrymen. The career of the Maharajah Romanath Tagore may teach more than one useful lesson to those of you who are now just beginning life."

Then alluding to Dr. Elliott and Mr. Geoghegan, two distinguished Fellows who had died in the course of the year, after a brief association but full of promise, and expressing his sense of the loss sustained by the University in their death, the Vice-Chancellor proceeded to the discussion of certain matters of detail which appeared to call for observation. One was the sufficiency of the teaching staff, as regards those new subjects which the Council has been pressed to admit into the course of study. The danger to be avoided was holding out a temptation to the "acquisition of superficial knowledge, and frittering away that thoroughness" which they had already declared to be "the very pith and marrow of the University systems." The Hon. Justice Markby continued:—

"I have some hope from the efforts of the people themselves in this matter. A good example has been set by our colleague, Dr. Mohendra Lal Sircar and his coadjutors in their efforts to establish an association for the cultivation of science. Science is the common ground, probably the only common ground, of Eastern and Western thought; and I sincerely hope that this highly useful association may be able to co-operate cordially with the University in giving that scientific education which I for one would gladly extend if we can only find the means for doing so. Gentlemen, I think upon this, as upon many other subjects, we should be safer if we had a little more of the advice of men who have had some practical experience in education. As you all know, the principal control of the University is vested by the Act of Incorporation in the Senate. But nearly all subjects of a really educational character are, in fact, disposed of, not by the Senate, which is too large and heterogeneous a body to take much interest in such matters, but by the Faculties and by the Syndicate. Now upon these educational questions, our real guides must be the persons actually engaged in teaching. Outsiders may be useful to hold the balance between conflicting opinions, but questions of this class are mostly professional questions, upon which we require the guidance of men of special skill and experience. It certainly does appear to me that the teachers by profession have not at present sufficient influence in our Councils. We attempt to get advice by circulating papers to the heads of Colleges, but this is not quite satisfactory. We want the benefit of their advice and experience in the course of our deliberations, and we want their votes at the final decision. This is a matter which deserves, I think, serious consideration at the hands of the University. Gentlemen, the last subject to which I desire to advert is one which has engaged the attention of the University for a considerable period, and one on which I may venture, perhaps without presumption, to think it worth while to leave my opinion on record. Lord Northbrook, three or four years ago, in his address to Convocation, suggested that the time had come for the establishment of University Professorships, especially in Law. Lord Northbrook probably spoke from his knowledge of the policy of the English Government in respect of education, and from general considerations only; but I am satisfied that from a purely educational point of view also Lord Northbrook was right. I cannot of course enter here into the full consideration of a question of this kind, but may touch upon one or two salient points. Whenever we consider the subject of legal education, we must bear in mind that the English Government has impressed one feature indelibly upon this country, that the administration of justice shall be a technical and not a popular one. We have made the lawyer not only useful, but absolutely necessary. That is a state of things towards which every civilised country must necessarily tend, and is only a branch of the great process of division of labour. But there is no doubt that the progress towards the ultimate separation between lawyers and laymen has been, and is at this moment in the course of being, greatly accelerated by the policy of our rulers. The great experiment in legislation now going forward will, I do not hesitate to say, be a most disastrous failure if the law education of the country is not kept up to a very high standard. Ideas gathered from Germany, France, Italy, America, and England are being introduced here with a very great rapidity. Every judge and practitioner will make a miserable failure in the application of those principles unless he has been thoroughly well trained in the schools before he enters upon his duties in the forum. I say also with equal confidence that it will tax all our efforts to the utmost to establish even one such school of Law in Lower Bengal. I, of course, am wholly indifferent where that school is placed; but as it must be under the control of the University, it seems obvious that it should be established in the University itself. It may be somewhat a hardship to abolish the law classes in the Colleges of Bengal, but if we are to have any teaching worthy of the name, it must be done. We must have at least five or even six of the ablest lawyers we can find, and we cannot be satisfied with a portion—we must have all their time. They must therefore be very highly paid, for we come into direct competition with a very lucrative profession. But it will be a most unwise economy if money is stinted for this purpose; for I again repeat the great scheme of legislation now going forward can only bring misery and confusion into every family, if the new laws being now created are left to be administered by any other than thoroughly trained men. Men may find themselves entangled in the meshes of litigation from which neither Judge nor advocate has the skill to extricate them. I trust, therefore, that the discussion which Lord Northbrook initiated upon this subject will not be allowed to drop until something effectual has been accomplished. Gentlemen, this is the first, and it will, in all probability, be the last, time that my duty calls upon me to address a large assembly in Calcutta. I am glad that it has happened to fall upon such an occasion as the present. I am convinced that the one boon for which the people of this country are deeply and sincerely grateful is the higher education superintended by our Universities. They feel, as we must also feel, that it is this alone which really draws them nearer to ourselves. I also maintain that it is this, and this alone, which can enable us to solve the problems of almost superhuman difficulty which lie before us. I am proud, therefore, of having been permitted during the past few years to take a part in the councils of this University, in the success of which I shall always take the warmest interest.

The Vice-Chancellor then declared the Convocation closed.—Friend of India, March 22.

STATION TALK.

JESSORE, March 19.—My last bi-monthly budget appears to have somehow never reached its destination, and I write this in the hope that it will have a better fate. To-day is the Holee festival, the saturnalia of the Hindoos, and the Courts are closed. The red powder, known as abeer, prepared from the root of the so-called wild arrowroot plant (curcuma zedoaria, Roscoe) and dyed with the pulverized root of the casalpinia sappans, is now steeped in water, and flung on all comers. The weather is, on the whole, rather cool and pleasant, as we have had several storms and some rain twice, accompanied with showers of hail-stones, but of very moderate size. Of course, the mangoes have suffered from the showers of hail, but not, I am glad to be able to state, to any great extent. On the whole, the fruit season is likely to prove a fair one, and will be of material assistance to the people of the district, who are by no means as well off as usual. A further quantity of moisture will enable the ryots to prepare their lands for the spring crops, and indigo planters are anxiously on the look-out for rain. The price of rice is still very high, and the tendency of the prices is to advance further, but there does not appear to be any actual distress anywhere. The health of the inhabitants is by no means good, as fever is greatly prevalent throughout the district, and cholera cases occasionally occur here and there. A heavy downpour of rain would probably abate both diseases—to some extent at least. The Sessions work is proceeding, and the acquittals appear to be numerous, thus evincing the carelessness of committing officers. Our worthy Judge, Mr. C. A. Kelly, is ever alive to the interest of poor prisoners, and they cannot complain of receiving aught than fair treatment from him. His arrival here has been hailed as a blessing by many an innocent prisoner, and his stay in the district prayed for by all, except, perhaps, the subordinates of the Police Department, as the proportion of acquittals to convictions has risen abnormally high, and their efficiency is usually judged by these results. There is a prospect of the return of our District Magistrate, Mr. A. Smith, at no distant date, when the present officiating officer, Mr. W. H. Page, who has earned the good-will of the people, will, probably, be transferred elsewhere, or act as Joint-Magistrate here. The District Superintendent of Police, Mr. Kilby, has been, I hear, for some time in the interior of the Soonderbuns, in quest of illicit manufactured salt, &c., but his zeal does not appear to have been rewarded with success in any way. May better luck attend his efforts the next time! Perhaps the first case under the recently enacted law of treasure-trove has cropped up in Jessore. A large quantity of gold and silver coins appear to have been discovered by some labourers some time ago, who have quietly sold the same for trifling sums, and they have been melted down. This hoard was discovered on the estate of Mr. J. Rudd Rainey, Zemindar of Khoolna, and reported by him to the sub-divisional officer, who has delegated the duty of conducting the investigation on the police, who do not appear to have done much, or anything in the matter, thus far. Of course, it is the object of all parties concerned to hide all traces of the hoard, and it is not unlikely that they will be successful in so doing, under the circumstances of the case. A coin was found on the spot—a silver one, and presented by Mr. J. Rudd Rainey to the Asiatic Society. It is pronounced, I hear, by Mr. Blochmann, the well-known Persian scholar, to be only a little more than a century old, or of A.D. 1765.—Indian Daily News Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—Some thirty natives have been drowned by the capsizing of a boat in a stream in the Sutlej Bridge Division Indus Valley State Railway.

GURGAON.—The last published district returns from the Panjab inform us that cattle were dying from want of fodder in Gurgaon, and that rain was very urgently wanted in Karnal.

DISCOVERED COINS.—The Kulu correspondent of the Agra paper writes of the discovery near Rupar of Greek copper coins, silver coins of Akbar, two hundred swords, and some double-edged swords.

BARRISTERS' LIMITS.—The High Court of the North-Western Provinces refuses to enrol Mr. Henderson, C.S., Officiating Government Advocate, Punjab, as a barrister, he not intending to practice within the Court's jurisdiction.

SCARCITY OF WATER.—A scarcity of water is thus early in the season beginning to be felt at Darjiling, and the municipal authorities have issued an order limiting the hours at which water may be obtained from the hydrant.

THE BRAHMO SOMAJ.—There has been a disturbance at the Church of the Brahmo Somaj in Calcutta, occasioned by a number of Keshub Chunder Sen's opponents (called the protest-party) trying to get possession of the pulpit. The aid of the police had to be sought to procure order.

PRIVILEGE LEAVE.—It is reported that, on the recommendation of the Commander-in-Chief, there is now some prospect of three months' privilege leave being granted to all military men, as a rule of the service, and that no restrictions will be placed on the place where it is to be spent.

FRONTIER NEWS.—The Zirak and Pakhi Kheyl villages of the Utman Kheyl tribe concerned in the Swat Canal outrage were attacked by the Guides at daybreak on the 21st. The enemy lost ten killed, and others wounded; the Guides had two wounded. The enemy submitted at once to terms; other sections had previously submitted, and did not join the enemy.

THE VICEROY.—His Excellency the Viceroy arrived at Dehra late on the 23rd March, and took up his quarters at Major Herschell's house. His Excellency remained at Dehra on Sunday, and started on the following morning for Rampore Mandy on the Jumna, en route for Nahan. His Excellency will reach Simla on the 5th proximo.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.—On the morning of the 22nd March a destructive fire broke out in a basti at Bhawanipur, Calcutta. The fire brigade were on the spot within half an hour of the occurrence, and, with the aid of the local police, succeeded in extinguishing the flames within an hour from the time they first broke out. Owing to the strong breeze which was blowing at the time the flames spread very rapidly, and no less than sixty-one huts were completely burnt down. There was fortunately no loss of life.

HOSPITAL SURGEONS.—At the instance of the Superintendent of the Sealdah Hospital, the Government of Bengal has authorised the employment of four assistant surgeons, out of the number of medical officers who have rendered distinguished services in connection with the late famine in Southern India, as resident surgeons at the Sealdah Hospital, in the place of the former officers, who are now to be retained as supernumeraries, and has also sanctioned the reduction of the existing number of the resident surgeons in that hospital from six to four.

RAILWAY TRAFFIC.—The weight of goods carried by the Eastern Bengal Railway, during the four weeks ending the 23rd ult., amounted to 7,89,173 maunds. This, as compared with the corresponding period of 1877, shows an increase of 86,708 maunds, which is accounted for mainly by the increased traffic in jute, miscellaneous goods, piece-goods, foreign railway materials, turmeric, and salt, over-balancing a decrease of nearly 1,98,000 maunds in the rice and grain traffic, 23,000 maunds in sugar, nearly 21,000 in seeds, and over 6,000 in tobacco.

A DARING ROBBER.—The notorious mail robber, Bu-ali Ahir, was captured by Inspector Mookund Lall, on the 19th February, at Mouzah Kirni, Pergunnah Bhojpore, outpost Nowanugger. This daring desperado is one of the Ahirs who robbed the mail near Ranchi on the night of the 12th January, 1875. He also appears to have been concerned in the Motiharee mail robbery of the 28th April, 1873, and it is very probable that he took an active part in the mail robbery at Mozufferpore in January, 1873. His other accomplices are already captured, and are in jail. He was for some time one of the chowkidars of Chowgain.

KACHA WORK.—It is rumoured that the majority of the bridges and culverts on the road between Bankipore and Gya will have to be reconstructed, as on examination lately by the State Railway authorities it was ascertained that the masonry work was almost all kacha, and that they would not stand the traffic of even light trains running over them. This will, to a certain extent, retard the completion of the new line of railway, to say nothing of the enhancement of expenditure incidental thereto. An extravagant sum has already been thrown away on these bridges and culverts, and the local paper observes that it is not very creditable to the Public Works Department to turn out such work as that in question.

POST-OFFICE FRAUD.—A Sylhet correspondent writes to the Pioneer:—One Dulal Chandra Datta, despatching clerk of the Sylhet Post-office, having been found guilty of interception of certain letters and opening them for their contents, has been sentenced by the sessions judge to seven years' rigorous imprisonment. It appears that for a long time he had been carrying on this nefarious practice clandestinely, and that, a police inquiry having been instituted, letters were found under the prisoner's bed. He, moreover, extracted some currency notes enclosed in ordinary covers. A delivery peon has also been punished with three years' imprisonment, as some letters were detected in his house, which were made over to him for delivery. There was another peon of the local post-office lately imprisoned for six months for some similar offence.

STEEPLECHASE AT MIRAT.—The Friend of India regrets to hear that two unfortunate accidents occurred in the steeplechase for the Hog Hunter's Cup run on Saturday at Mirat. Captain Humfrey, who was riding Badger, fell at a natural water-jump, and the horse falling across his thigh, broke it half way between the knee and the thigh-joint. The fracture is a simple one, and not supposed to be serious. Captain White, also of the 15th King's Hussars, came to grief with Rocket at the next fence, and dislocated his shoulder, which Tas, however, set on the spot. Both the sufferers are doing well. The race itself was full of falls; for, besides the two above mentioned, Mr. Holland and the Hon. Rupert Leigh came to grief, the former being only stunned, and the latter slightly cut about the face. Four accidents out of seven starters in a race is an unprecedentedly large average.

Madras.

A NEW CHURCH AT MADURA.—Mr. F. Chisholm, the Government Architect, has got the contract for building a new church at Madura.

HARBOUR WORKS.—These works are progressing very favourably; the left wall has proceeded beyond the length of the pier. The whole length now completed is about 1,000 feet.

GOVERNMENT CENTRAL MUSEUM.—The visitors to the Government Central Museum in the month of February, 1878, amounted to 14,217, averaging, exclusive of Sundays, 592 daily.

THEFT IN A TRAIN.—A servant belonging to General Strachey, while on his way by train from Bangalore, was eased of his purse, containing twelve rupees and sundry other articles, valued at five rupees.

GARRISON INSTRUCTION.—It is notified in General Orders that after the 1st of October next, no more classes for sub-lieutenants to attend the long course of garrison instruction to qualify for promotion to the rank of lieutenant will be formed in India.

GENERAL POST-OFFICE.—Mr. Percy, the Postmaster of Madras, having obtained the sanction of the Director-General of Post-offices in India for the appointment of a Superintendent to supervise the working of the whole office, has appointed Mr. Richard Jones to the post.

A NEW DISTRICT REGISTRAR.—Government have sanctioned the appointment of a District Registrar for Salem. The work had been hitherto performed by the Treasury Deputy Collector, but as it was pointed out that it interfered very much with his own legitimate duties, a separate officer has been appointed, who will enter on his duties on the 1st inst.

FLAG STAFF AT VELLORE.—Capt. C. H. Rowland, Assistant Master Attendant, has been instructed to proceed to Vellore, in order that he may take proper measurements for renewing the rigging of the old flag staff of Vellore Fort. The military authorities did not think it requisite, but his Grace the Duke insisted on having one, as he thought it very essential.

MR. JAMES CRAIK.—It is believed that Mr. J. Craik, Assistant Traffic Manager of the Madras Railway, is about to proceed to England on three months' furlough, for the purpose of recruiting his health, which was greatly impaired owing to the heavy work imposed on him during the pressure of the grain traffic in the late famine.—Madras Athenæum.

DRAFTS FOR H.M.'S 43RD REGIMENT.—A draft corps of seventy-three men and two women, in command of Captain Miller, and in medical charge of Dr. Walter from England, arrived on the 2nd March for her Majesty's 43rd Regiment of Foot. The band of the regiment was in waiting at the station, and the drafts were duly played into the Fort.

A GRAND MASONIC FUNERAL SERVICE.—A grand Masonic funeral service will be held in the Lodge at Vepery, for the late District Grand Master, Mr. J. Miller, on Monday evening, the 25th March. The members of the several Lodges are to be present, and the ceremony will be conducted by Major Swanston, the Deputy District Grand Master, who is expected from Bellary.

CIVIL SURGEONCY OF NEGAPATAM.—In consequence of the removal of Surgeon J. B. Thomas from Civil Surgeoncy of Negapatam to the medical charge of the 3rd District, Madras, it has become necessary to appoint another officer in his place. We hear that Surgeon William O'Hara, engaged on famine duty in the East Coast Canal, has been nominated Civil Surgeon of Negapatam.

RELIEF OPERATIONS IN PONDICHERY.—The relief operations in Pondicherry were closed by the order of the Governor on the 25th of February last, having been carried on since the 17th of December, 1876. The number of persons relieved was upwards of 7,000 a day, to whom 2,170,000 rations were distributed, besides money and cloths. It is not shown how much money was spent.

PLUNDERED ON THE WAY.—The other day, as a range officer was proceeding by a cart from Avady Station, inspecting the masonry works within his range, he was stopped by a gang of robbers, when he quietly gave up his purse and fled for his life, leaving his poor servant to the mercy of the robbers. The servant was belaboured in a most unmerciful manner, and all property from the cart was removed.

MUSIC.—A correspondent writes:—I hear we are to have a grand musical concert in a few days, at which the great masters are to be represented by the Governor's and 43rd Bands. Why could we not have such a treat frequently? I am sure with two such fine bands as the above a very interesting entertainment could be got up at least once a fortnight, and I feel sure the public of Madras would be delighted with such a performance.

THE GYMKHANA.—The Bangalore Gymkhana appears to be a most prosperous institution, and is said to include everyone who is anybody. Its income is now over Rs. 6,000 per annum, which speaks well for the energy of the gallant R.H.A. officers who formed it. All Bangalore meets every Thursday and Saturday at the Gymkhana grounds, which form an exceedingly pleasant rendezvous, and where a variety of amusements are provided, among others, Ladies Golf, a great blessing to many chaperons, who get tired of looking on for hours at others amusing themselves.

MORTUARY RETURN.—The last published official mortuary return shows that there were four hundred and twenty deaths from the 2nd to the 8th March, the average of the corresponding weeks for ten previous years being three hundred and thirty-seven. There were nine deaths from small-pox, one hundred and thirteen deaths from fevers, eighty deaths from dysentery, forty-one deaths from diarrhoea, one death from cholera, one hundred and seventy-six deaths from other diseases. And of those who died four were Europeans, eight East Indians, three Native Christians, forty-five Mahomedans and three hundred and sixty Hindus.

THE LATE MR. H. T. RICHARDSON.—It is with regret we have to announce the death of Mr. Herbert Timesfield Richardson, late Deputy Collector, Coconada, on the evening of the 14th March, at the residence of his brother, Mr. James Richardson, Poonamallee-road, Madras. It would appear that deceased was suffering for a long time with fever, and came down to Madras on a month's leave to recruit his health, but succumbed to the disease. Mr. Richardson originally was a partner in the firm of Mr. Aston Richardson and Co., Mount-road, and finding business gloomy, entered the Government service on a small salary, and through his own exertions was promoted to the rank he held last. Deceased was well respected and liked by one and all of his friends. His remains were interred on the evening of the 15th March in St. George's Cathedral burial-ground.—Athenæum.

ENGLISH INFLUENCE IN INDIAN POLICY.

Recent Indian legislation, and our late Bombay memorials to the supreme tribunal of the House of Commons, give at all events a temporary interest to a paper read a month ago at a Conference of the East Indian Association in London, by Mr. James Routledge, who has often been before the English public in connection with Indian interests. Mr. Routledge, though he scarcely acquired much reputation as an Indian journalist, and was never regarded here as a high authority upon Indian matters, has necessarily gained weight through his connection with the London Times. And it is refreshing to find that a gentleman who is understood to be the chief writer on the regular staff of that influential journal nevertheless holds strong views of his own, which though diametrically opposed to those of the paper he represents, he invariably has the courage to express as often as he can obtain a hearing. . . . Mr. Bright and Sir James Stephen, whose last utterances are still fresh in the public mind, may be taken to represent the two extreme classes who are most interested in the controversy raised by Mr. Routledge. Mr. Bright would have India governed according to the popular English sentiment, uninformed by special knowledge; Sir James Stephen, by a trained bureaucracy, unfettered by responsibilities to the Home Government. But as usual, both extremes are dangerous. Whenever there were bad times in Lancashire for either mill-owner or weaver, the popular English sentiment, straitened into selfishness, according to the usual law of self preservation, would demand export duties and restriction on our cotton industries. While the officials who themselves possess rights and privileges which the Cabinet Ministers can scarcely touch, and who appeal to the House whenever patronage is abused or vested interests ignored, would come to believe in the infallibility of their sacred caste. But the main principle of English political life is a sleepless watchfulness, and our Viceroy, our Governors, our Commissioners, can no more claim to be taken on trust for the course of their natural lives, or to free alike from criticism and rebuke than a Chancellor of the Exchequer, or even a bank clerk can hope to pass his accounts without a formal audit. In India this popular watchfulness is almost wholly wanting. . . . And though the English Press exerts what watchfulness it can, the people of India are always driven at last to appeal to the English Parliament whenever legislation becomes aggressive, or unbearable, or inconsiderate. The telegraph cable and the Suez Canal have wrought a change that is yearly becoming more apparent, and as all legislative measures are now apparently drawn up in the Foreign Office, it is more and more necessary that they should be intelligently criticised by a well-informed public at home. But, at present, even those who take pains to qualify themselves for the consideration of Indian matters labour under great difficulties, while the people at large know absolutely nothing about the poverty of the country, or the desires of the natives, or the principles of Indian taxation. Sir George Balfour tells us that he has only just succeeded by a formal motion in the House in getting papers on the salt-taxes which have been in existence for years, and he complains with justice that the portentous and undigested mass of documents regarding the Famine, without order or index, are apparently arranged to conceal the facts they contain. Yet it was never more necessary that some means should be devised to inform the English mind on Indian matters, and do away with the impressions wrongfully, if not designedly, conveyed. For the last twelve months there has been a perfect mania for over-legislation. Laws are made or unmade every day. Each member of Council must needs leave his Act, or his Code, or his supplementary Code in the archives of the country. And the result has been a steady retrogression; until we are gradually losing in India the rights which our English ancestors acquired through long centuries, and much constitutional struggle, at home, and which our very contemporaries succeeded in acclimatising in India. In a year, nay in the first three months of this year, our rulers have succeeded in restoring the discarded principles of class-taxation, in extending this principle of class legislation to the Press Laws, and thus abolishing the liberty of the Press for ninety per cent. of her Majesty's Indian subjects, and in increasing our obnoxious Salt Tax under the vaguest possible pretence of a final reduction, and in spite of repeated assurances that it never would be increased again. If Mr. Routledge and his fellow workmen will only din these facts into the ears of the English public, they will do something to awaken the feeling they desiderate.

STATION TALK.

MUSCAT, March 8.—I have rather stirring news to relate this mail. The s.s. Hallamshire, owned by Messrs. Steel, Young and Co., London, went ashore about fourteen miles to the southward of Ras-ul-Had on the midnight of the 22nd ult. She had 260 pilgrims on board returning to Basrah and 600 tons of piece-goods and coal for Government, and consigned to W. J. Towell and Co., Muscat. Fortunately, the shore where she was stranded was sandy, and she came off on the 26th after her coals had been thrown overboard to lighten her. The chief officer was sent away in a life-boat on the 23rd, accompanied by a passenger. Meeting bad weather, they put in at Tawee, a small place on the coast. The officer came on to Muscat overland, and arrived here on the 27th. But unluckily there was no man-of-war here at the time, the Arab having just left for Jask. The mail steamer Patna was, however, due on the morning of the 29th, and on her arrival she was just about to start for Ras-ul-Had, when the Hallamshire hove in sight. She is not injured, and makes no water. The Arabs at Ras-ul-Had swam off to the steamer, and it was only by firing all night long that they were prevented from boarding. The Hajis on board behaved admirably, kept regular watches, and fired over the heads of the Arabs, and gave the captain every assistance they could in the way of throwing the cargo overboard, putting out anchors, &c. They were indeed most orderly, and the captain speaks very highly of them. The boat has not been picked up yet, and is still with the unfortunate passengers. Our Political Agent sent assistance at once by native boat, with his own man, and also some of the Sultan's soldiers, and letters to the Shaikh of Ras-ul-Had, to assist in every possible way in recovering the boat and cargo. The Hallamshire, after the court of inquiry to be held here, will proceed to Bushire, and go down the coast to pick up her boat. The s.s. Rokeley, from Jeddah, with pilgrims, arrived here on the 28th ult. The captain informed the Consul that he had slaves on board, who were shipped at Jeddah. There being, as I said, no man-of-war here, the Consul sent off and had them brought ashore. They turned out to be three little boys and a girl. After landing them the Rokeley proceeded up the Gulf. We have had cool weather in the Gulf lately.—Times of India Correspondent

Miscellaneous.

GOA.—There is still a good deal of distress at Goa, in consequence of the smallness of the grain crop.

HON. MR. GIBBS.—H.E. the Governor has been pleased to re-appoint the Hon. Mr. Gibbs to be Vice-Chancellor of the University of Bombay.

MR. HOPE, C.S.—The Hon. Mr. Hope, C.S.I., arrived in Bombay on the 25th March, and was to leave for England by the mail steamer of April 1.

MARINE.—Capt. Searle, Superintendent of Marine, Bombay, will act for Capt. G. T. Robinson as Superintendent of Marine at Calcutta, during his absence on leave to England.

MR. EGERTON.—Mr. R. Egerton, Lieutenant-Governor of the N. W. Provinces, will arrive in Bombay on Wednesday. During his stay here he will be the guest of H. E. Sir Richard Temple.

THE "MEIKONG."—Some of the passengers wrecked last monsoon near Cape Gardafui in the Messagerie steamer Meikong are about to try to recover from the French Company the value of the baggage and personal effects lost by them at that time.

SUICIDES.—The Chief Constable of Shalhpore, in the Tannah district, committed suicide a few days ago by poison. It would appear that he was about to be prosecuted regarding the alleged torturing of a prisoner whom he had in custody.

QUARANTINE.—According to a recent telegram from the Resident at Aden to the Political Secretary to Government, Bombay, quarantine being still imposed on arrivals at Suez from Red Sea ports, restrictions continued on arrivals from the latter at Aden.

KARACHI HARBOUR.—The Government of Bombay has issued a notification that, on the expiration of sixty days from the 14th of March, the port dues to be levied in the port of Karachi on all vessels chargeable therewith, the burden of which exceeds two hundred tons, is to be at the rate of three annas per ton, and on all other vessels at the rate of four annas per ton.

VERNACULAR PAPERS.—The Dnyan Chakshoo of Poona informs us that according to the invitations issued by the City Magistrate, all the publishers of the vernacular papers on the 26th instant assembled in the Magistrate's office, where a Kharita from his Excellency the Viceroy was read to them, and they were informed that their respective journals ought to be conducted in such a manner as not to compel the Government to enforce the Act lately passed by the Government of India.

ICE.—One of the ice ships, which was due at Bombay in January last, has not yet arrived, and as she is now 182 days out, fears are entertained for her safety. At present there is scarcely more than a fortnight's supply of ice in stock, but another ship is due in about a month. In the event of the first ship not turning up the Tudor Company will make arrangements to get a supply of ice from Madras, so that there is no fear of an ice-famine, although large consumers may possibly have their supplies curtailed for a time.

LICENSE TAX.—Ahmedabad is now sending its petition to Parliament on the license tax; and not satisfied with pointing out the injustice of the measure, the inhabitants propose that the Indian Government should curtail its expenditure by reducing the pay of the officials under Government, such pay being in their estimation much too high for the amount and kind of work done per month. They suggest that Government should reduce all salaries above Rs. 500 per month by 10 per cent. or 20 per cent., and that certain unnecessary highly-paid posts might, without loss to the public at large, be entirely abolished.

OYSTERS.—Captain Donnan, Master Attendant of Colombo, now on a visit of inspection to the pearl banks off Aripo, has been most fortunate in his examination, having found the large deposits of oysters last visited safe, and promising a splendid fishing in 1880. In addition to this, he has discovered a bank altogether new to the westward of any previous fishings, of considerable extent and richness, the oysters in which are estimated at many millions, and aged from six to nine months, capable, therefore, of yielding a fishery in 1882.—Ceylon Times.

Home.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Mirzapore has left with £72,700, of which £3,000 is in gold coin for Calcutta, £24,700 in dollars for Penang, and £45,000, also in dollars, for Shanghai. The Tasmania, with the West India mails, has taken £70,830, which consists almost entirely of sovereigns.

TROOPS FROM INDIA.—Her Majesty's Indian troopship Malabar, Captain Percy P. Luxmore, C.B., arrived, on the 15th inst., at Portsmouth from Bombay, with thirty-eight officers on leave of absence and sick leave, fourteen officers' wives, and twenty officers' children, 741 invalids and time-expired men from different regiments and corps in India, seventy-five soldiers' wives, and 154 children.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.—The report of the directors of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China states that after making allowance for bad and doubtful debts a profits is shown of £74,842. 13s. 3d. Out of this sum a dividend of 4 per cent. was paid in June last, and a similar dividend is now declared, making together 8 per cent. for the year; and £14,842. 13s. 3d. is to be carried forward to reserve fund, which will then stand at £151,560. 10s.

THE LOSS OF THE "CHILDWALL HALL."—A telegram from Gibraltar was received in Liverpool on the 17th inst. by the owners of the Childwall Hall, stating that the Government steamer Express had arrived there with W. Royle, passenger, the boatswain, the second steward, and thirteen of the crew. Fifteen are reported to have been lost, including three passengers and a child, the master, the first and third officers, the second engineer, the stewardess, the carpenter, Wright and McWag, firemen, the fourth and fifth steward, and the second cook.

CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA.—A remarkable movement is reported among the natives of India, east of Tinnevely. No fewer than 16,000 have sent in their names to Bishop Caldwell and placed themselves under instruction for baptism. His lordship writes:—"Village after village is laying aside its heathenism, and seeking admission into the fold of Christ." The four evangelistic tours of the bishop last year and gratitude for English help in the famine are assigned as probable causes. The Bishop asks the Propagation Society to send ten additional clergy and seventy additional catechists. For this purpose the society has just made a special appeal.

GEOGRAPHICAL GLEANINGS.—The Academy hears that Capt. W. J. Gill, R.E., is preparing for publication an account of his recent journey through Western China, and along the Tibetan Frontier into Burmah. We further learn from the same paper that, as the result of a journey of exploration made by Messrs. Horner and Bauer, of the French missions at Zanzibar, in August last year, a French Mission Station has been established at Mhonda, on the Eastern slope of the mountains of Ngura, near the Walé, a northern tributary of the Wami River, about midway between Saudani, on the coast and the village of Mwapura, on the route to Unaiwezi.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £500,000 in bills on India were received on April 17 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—To Calcutta, £288,900, at an average rate of 1s. 8<sup>6</sup>/<sub>32</sub>d.; to Bombay, £200,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8<sup>6</sup>/<sub>31</sub>d.; and to Madras, £11,100, at an average rate of 1s. 8<sup>6</sup>/<sub>33</sub>d. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 8<sup>6</sup>/<sub>32</sub>d. will receive about 7 per cent., and on Bombay at that price about 14 per cent.; all above in full. The present allotment is rather weaker, and the Council have had to accept almost  $\frac{1}{4}$  per cent. less for their bills than they got last week. The whole of the £500,000 nominal advertised for tender has, however, been taken up at the reduction.

CAVALRY ORGANISATION.—In Major Boulderson's recent lecture on "Cavalry Organisation," a tribute was paid to the excellence of the irregular cavalry of India. The suggestion to arm the front and rear rank differently has generally been regarded as a serious error. As a general principle such mixtures are apt to destroy cohesion. Lord Elcho expressed the same opinion against the lecturer's proposal, and thought that a long range rifle would be advantageous. General Steele coincided with his lordship.—General B. Walker argued that whether lance or sword were the weapon used, the weight and force of the men were the deciding conditions in a cavalry charge. The momentum, no doubt, is an important element of success, but a skilful antagonist would always be able to neutralise its effect.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA AND CHINA.—The twenty-fourth ordinary general meeting of the shareholders was held at the Cannon-street Hotel, Wm. Paterson in the chair. In their report the directors stated that the net profits for the year ended 31st December last (including £6,307 brought forward) were £99,310. The interim dividend declared in October had absorbed £24,000 of that sum, and after appropriating £5,000 to reduction of premises account, a balance of £70,310 remained. Out of this amount they proposed to declare a dividend of 6 per cent. per annum for the past half-year, and to add £40,000 to the reserve fund, which would then stand at £150,000. The balance to be carried forward was £6,310. The dividend was duly declared.

IN RE CARNEGIE, AN INFANT.—In this matter a petition has been presented to the Master of the Rolls by Major-General Fullerton Carnegie, for the removal of his infant son, Edward Hugo Wakefield Fullerton Carnegie, aged seven years, from the custody of his mother into his own custody and charge. It appeared that the parents in January, 1877, entered into a deed of separation, one of the provisions of which was that the father should have the custody of the daughter and elder son, and that for a period of two years the mother should have the custody of the younger boy, after which further arrangements were to be made as to him. But an Act of Parliament (36 Vict. c. 12) enables the Court of Chancery to set aside such an agreement if it is for the interests of the child that it should be done, and the Master of the Rolls, being satisfied upon the evidence in support of the petition that it was for the interest of the child in this case that he should be removed from Mrs. Carnegie's custody, made an order for his delivery to General Carnegie, with the usual liberty of access.

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—At the meeting of this society, held on Monday, 15th inst., Sir E. Colebrooke, Bart, M.P., President, in the chair, the Rev. Henry Jones was elected a Resident Member. A paper was read, contributed by Major Mockler, "On the identification of places on the Mekran Coast, with the notices in Arrian, Ptolemy and Marcan," in which the writer showed, by his own personal surveys and experience, in how remarkable a degree the brief notices of antiquity coincide with the more careful and scientific surveys of modern investigators. A very large number of Major Mockler's identifications agree with what we learn from classical sources; and, when they differ from those of Dr. Vincent, it is but fair to believe that the occasional errors of that great scholar are mainly due to the imperfection of the few modern charts to which alone he was then able to have access. A second paper, by Mr. R. B. Shaw, "On the Canton of Salar," was interesting as showing the existence, at the present time, of a Mahomedan Turki Tribe, shut in in the extreme East, between the Mongolians and the Chinese, and subject to the latter as the Suzerains of the adjacent countries.

ROBERT AT THE AGRA BANK.—At the Mansion House, on Wednesday, Mr. James Robert Irving Wynn, who had been for many years cashier at the Agra Bank, was brought before Alderman Sir B. Phillips for further examination upon the charge of stealing and embezzling nearly £4,000 belonging to the bank, and William Othniel Ward and Charles Frederick Graves were charged with receiving the money knowing it to have been embezzled and stolen. Mr. Besley appeared as counsel in support of the charge. Mr. Montagu Williams appeared for Graves, and Mr. Elborough and Mr. Chandler for the other prisoners. The prisoner Ward, who is brother-in-law of Wynn, carries on business with the other prisoner Graves as printers in Crown-court, Milton-street, and it was alleged by the prosecution that Wynn, knowing the affairs of his brother-in-law were in an embarrassed state, had taken large sums of money from the bank till, which he had handed over to the other prisoners to assist them to overcome their pecuniary difficulties. The specific charge against Wynn was that he had embezzled £1,400 on the 28th of March, and the notes then abstracted were traced to the possession of the other prisoners. It was stated, however, that Graves took the chief share in the financial part of the printing business. Sir B. Phillips committed all the prisoners for trial, but consented to admit Ward to bail as before.

IN RE THE BOMBAY AND BURMAH TRADING CORPORATION V. MIRZA ALLY SHWIZEE AND OTHERS.—Sir R. Collier gave judgment in the above appeal case, which had occupied the Council nearly a week in August. Mr. Butt, Q.C., Mr. Harrison, Q.C., and Mr. Doyme were for the appellants; Mr. Benjamin, Q.C., Mr. Corrie, Q.C., and Mr. Elwes for the respondents. The case involved the right of the respondent Mirza Shwizee to a large quantity of timber which had been cut from forests belonging to the King of Birman, and which he alleged had been taken from him. The case was peculiar from the correspondence which had taken place. The letters printed in the proceedings were remarkable for politeness and abuse. A writer began by saying "May your great shadow ever be the same," and stating that the writer was his "slave," and in speaking of another person concerned in the matter said, "May he be sent to hell." The evidence was voluminous, and counsel addressed their lordships on the cross-appeals which both parties had presented. It appeared that the King of Birman read all the newspapers sent from Rangoon. Their lordships varied the orders of the lower Court, and gave directions in the matter.

DARAB ALY V. ABDOL AZEEZ.—Judgment was delivered in this case, which was argued last month by Mr. Leith, Q.C., and Mr. C. Arathoon for the appellant, and Mr. Cowie, Q.C. (with whom were Messrs. Doyme and Graham), for the respondent. The appeal was preferred from a decree of the Calcutta High Court, dated Aug. 23, 1875, which upheld the decree of the Court of First Instance. One Mohceooddeen (represented by the respondent) had obtained a decree from the late Supreme Court of Calcutta against certain parties. He obtained a writ of fi fa from the High Court, directing the Sheriff of Calcutta to seize and sell any property and effects of the judgment debtors within the provinces of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa. The Sheriff, directed by Moheecooddeen, seized and sold some villages of the judgment debtor in the province of Oudh, at which auction sale the appellant's testator purchased for Rs. 26,000 which was duly paid by the Sheriff to Moheecooddeen. Subsequently, the Oudh judicial authorities held that such sale was ultra vires, and null and void, and the appellant's testator was ousted from possession, and the villages restored to the judgment debtor. Under these circumstances this suit was instituted to recover the said sum from Moheecooddeen as money had and received. Both the Indian Courts dismissed the suit, on the ground that no cause of action was shown as against Moheecooddeen. Their Lordships did not concur in these findings, and reversing the decrees under appeal, remanded the suit for trial on the merits.

SHEN SING RAI V. DAKHO AND ANOTHER.—Judgment was given by Sir M. Smith in this appeal, in which some curious revelations were made as to religious sects in India. The question was whether a Jain, a dissenting sect from the creed of the Vedas, differing as they did from the Brahminical Hindus, could adopt a son to inherit considerable property without the consent of her late husband's relations. A Jain named Lall, who had greatly assisted the Government at the time of the Indian Mutiny, died in 1867, and the widow adopted a son of her own daughter. The appellant, who was a relative of the husband, alleged that such adoption was invalid, and that he was entitled to the property as brother of the deceased Jain. The case turned on the customs of the sect, there being no written law of inheritance on the subject among them. The subordinate Court and the High Court held, after the opinion of the learned doctor of the community, that a widow could adopt a son, as for some twelve centuries the Jains had dissented from the Vedic creed, and had no written law of inheritance. The Crown had granted the deceased, who was an army contractor, the life interest in a seminary of considerable extent, which his widow has since his death purchased of the Crown, and the question was whether his brother or his daughter's son could inherit the same. Their lordships decided against the appellant, holding that the widow of a Jain could adopt a son without the consent of her late husband's relations. The decision of the High Court was affirmed, and the appeal dismissed, with costs.

INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.—A letter from Mr. Ashton, in the Times of the 18th inst., reviews the changes about to take effect in the examinations, both with regard to the subjects and the candidates who treat them. This is the opinion passed upon the first:—"It will scarcely be denied that here the change is for the better. In order to exclude the mere snatterers, a deduction will be made from the marks gained except in mathematics and English composition. This is as it should be; for if a candidate knows thoroughly, say, Euclid, Algebra, and Trigonometry, then, so far, his knowledge of mathematics is complete, and he should receive credit for that knowledge. In a less degree, it is so with English composition. A youth can write his native language grammatically or he cannot. If he cannot, he deserves no credit whatever; if he can, he deserves credit, irrespective of the matter of his essay. Again, French and German occupy a more prominent place in the new scheme, so no doubt they should do. Looking at the marks assigned to each, it is easy to see that the subjects of examination are in the following order of importance:—1. Mathematics; 2. Latin; 3. Greek; 4. French, German, Arabic, Sanskrit, and Chemistry (all equal); 5. Italian, &c., I do not mention English composition, for every candidate will try his hand at that. In the new scheme the sciences are rather at a discount, and a clean sweep has been made of geology and mineralogy." On the candidates, it is stated:—"They must be under nineteen years of age; thus there seems a danger of choosing precocious youths rather than those who reach maturity a year or two later. After passing the entrance examination a candidate will have an inducement to go to some University, but when there he will probably associate with other selected candidates, as he does now in London, or he will get into some past set, and do no work at all. As to his going through a University course of study, this would be too much to expect, for no man can serve two masters in this case, unless he be a very clever fellow indeed." Mr. Ashton believes that these regulations will please the "Public Schools, as no doubt they were designed to do, for the Public Schools will be able to send up successful candidates direct, and the monopoly which two or three establishments have enjoyed for the last seven years will probably come to an end."

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, April 15.—INDIAN MAILS.—Lord JOHN MANNERS informed Mr. Horwood that the whole question of the carriage of the mails on the approaching termination of the contract with the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company was, together with the petition from Bombay asking for more rapid transit, at present under the consideration of the Treasury.

TRADE WITH INDIA AND CHINA.—Mr. GRANT asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether any decision had been arrived at by her Majesty's Government as to the exploration of a route between Rangoon and Western China, in order to promote trade between India and China, particulars of which had been furnished to the India Office by various Chambers of Commerce.—Mr. E. STANHOPE: My noble friend now the Vice-President of the Council answered a similar question last year. Since that time the circumstances have not materially changed, and the same reasons exist as existed then for deferring the completion of the survey of this particular route.—(Hear, hear.)

NOTICE OF MOTION.—Sir H. HAVELOCK: On Tuesday, May 21st, to call attention to certain defects in the organisation of the native army of India.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA

Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.

Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa of the Finest Quality,

with the excess of fat extracted.

The Faculty pronounce it "the most nutritious, perfectly digestible beverage for Breakfast, Luncheon, or Supper, and invaluable for Invalids and Children."

Highly commended by the entire Medical Press.
Being without sugar, spice, or other admixture, it suits all palates, keeps better in all climates, and is four times the strength of Cocoa thickened yet weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and is REALITY CHEAPER than such Mixtures.

Made instantaneously with boiling water, a teaspoonful to a Breakfast Cup costing less than a Halfpenny.
COCOATINA A LA VANILLE is the most delicate, digestible, Cheapest Vanilla Chocolate, and may be taken when richer Chocolate is prohibited.

LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 18s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.
postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.;
postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Postoffice, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,
&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness
and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c.
It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS. Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, April 8; Allahabad and Madras, April 6; Calcutta, April 5.

THE condition of the North-West Provinces and Oudh is slightly changed for the better; prices have fallen a little, and in Lucknow it has been found possible to close all the relief works. Meanwhile, we learn that the Governor-General in Council is unwilling to sanction all the precautionary measures proposed by the local authorities. To the above, the Pioneer adds that from Madras the reports are not so good; and that there has been an increase, within the last week, of over 15,000 in the numbers on relief works. On the other hand, the Madras Famine Report of the 2nd inst. shows a decrease, on gratuitous relief, of 8,642. The Times of India reports that there have been heavy showers in Maisur, but hardly heavy enough to fill even the smaller tanks, which are running dry, to the detriment of the rice crops.

IN the London papers of this morning will be found a telegram, dated yesterday in Bombay, reporting the daily arrival of troops for embarkation. The first detachment was to leave for Malta on the 29th inst., and the second on the 1st of May. They were not to stop at Aden. Fifteen ships and twelve steamers had been engaged for the conveyance of the expedition, which would be conveyed by a man of war. Great enthusiasm was said to prevail throughout India, and native troops were volunteering for service.

A SOMEWHAT mysterious statement appeared recently in the Standard, that a party of Russian officers and engineers—a colonel, major, and eleven others of inferior rank—had arrived at Rome, and were on their way to Suez and the Persian Gulf. On Thursday last a telegram from Rome reported that these officers had met at Naples the captains of two American steamers chartered by them, and were waiting orders in the Levant, probably at Rhodes or Cyprus, so that the party would sail under American colours. The superior officer was going with some others direct to the Piræus; the second officer, with the rest, to Brindisi and thence to Alexandria. Nine cases of surveying instruments had been sent by them to Egypt. The superior officer had in his possession the famous French staff map of the Lower Euphrates given to him in Berlin, where it had been obtained by M. D'Oubril. The party carried German passports, in which the names Indemann and Flessenberg appear. They had also American papers, in the names of Wilson, Cleark, and Maclinworth.

A SECOND telegram, dated from Rome yesterday, further reported that the American ships chartered by, or now at the orders of the chief of the aforesaid party, were the Simrock, of Bristol, 1,800 tons, Captain Gibson; the Hawk, of Boston, 1,600 tons, Captain Littleton; the Charlestown, of Boston, 1,600 tons, Captain Gardener; and the Freedom, of New Orleans, 1,600 tons, Captain Blount. The start Eastward was fixed for Monday next. Meantime the chief officer had gone to Genoa, with a view to purchasing or hiring additional vessels.

WE learn that Mr. C. T. Buckland has been appointed to succeed Mr. Steuart Bayley in the Bengal Council; that Mr. H. A. Cockerell succeeds Mr. Reynolds, and that Mr. A. B. Inglis will succeed Mr. H. F. Brown; moreover, that Mr. Lepel Griffin, Secretary to the Punjab Government, takes three months' furlough to Europe from the beginning of May.

THE strike at Surat is reported as at an end on the 7th April. Should this indeed be the case, the telegram reporting the riots must have referred to occurrences of a week previous.

AMONG the noteworthy items of the mail just received we remark that the Viceroy, Lord Lytton and suite reached Simla all well on the 3rd inst.; and that the Commander-in-Chief had preceded the Viceroy by ten days. Captain A. C. Crookshank was to officiate as Secretary to the Government of India at the Presidency, and Captain F. Deane as Deputy-Secretary during the absence of Colonel Burne at Simla. It is also notified that her Majesty is about to confer the Order of St. Michael and St. George upon the King of Siam.

THE Friend of India trusts that, with regard to the rumoured benefit to be granted to officers of obtaining three months' privilege leave to England, the option may be left to them to take their two months' leave as heretofore. It suggests that, if Sir Frederick Haines desires to confer upon the officers of the army of India a real boon he should obtain for them permission to accumulate their privilege leave, so as to go to England for four months, the public service permitting. Three months' leave involves such a breathless scurry, that it can hardly be called an enjoyment; and, according to the Friend, the shadow of an impending departure clouds the English sun from the first moment of arrival.

WE are given to understand that the King of Burma has been lately much annoyed by some of his European employes calling at the palace to ask for their pay, which is more than four months in arrear. This is distressing; but the root of the evil has been fairly reached; for his Majesty has issued an order that none of these importunate persons are, in future, to be allowed within the precincts of the palace.

THE fortnightly statement of the Executive Committee of the Madras Famine Fund, dated March 30, shows that a comparative lull had occurred in the operations of the various committees in the Mofussil, and that all were carefully reserving such balances as remained in their hands for distribution during the sowing season commencing in May. It was felt on all hands that far more and lasting good would be done in that way than in any other. Meanwhile, the duty of supporting life, where Government arrangements need supplementing, was not neglected. Several reports received, notably that from the Rev. Joseph Grand, of Palnad, served to indicate the intensity of suffering in many parts of the country. No rain, not even the "mango showers" due at this period, had been reported from any of the districts; only on the hills had there been downpours, and these very partial. The statement of the General Famine Fund account to date showed an available amount of Rs. 4,56,690, after deducting Rs. 50,000 reserved for the Salem Committee. A new remittance of £5,200 had been received from the Mansion-house during the fortnight. From the Government returns for the week ending March 26, the following particulars had been obtained:—On works, 113,243; gratuitously fed, 109,226; total, 222,469.

A TELEGRAM under date Calcutta, April 23, notifies that the Indian Government has ordered the Local Governments not to enforce the Vernacular Press Act without the sanction of the central authorities in Calcutta. It is further ordered that the Act is not to be made retrospective as regards the previous character of a newspaper, and the Local Governments are recommended to issue a circular warning the Press, as has been done in the Panjab and North-West Provinces.

THE Friend of India, in notifying the appointment of the new Governor of Malta, states that Sir Arthur Borton was in command at Bangalore two or three years ago, and is generally regarded as an excellent officer. We observe that Lieut.-Colonel Crichton, of the Grenadier Guards, has been appointed Assistant Military Secretary to his Excellency.

THE important telegram, which appeared in the Times of the 22nd inst., is dated from Calcutta on the previous afternoon. It may be divided into three parts: the martial, the practical, and the poetical. We begin with the first:—

All the energies of the Indian Government are at present concentrated on war preparations. The Native regiments have all been ordered to recruit at once up to their full war complement. Factories for small arms are working treble time, day and night, Sundays and week days. Military and medical stores are also being collected on a large scale. The Sepoys, it is reported, have responded with cheerful loyalty to the summons for foreign service. A number of regiments have even spontaneously volunteered their services. The best proof of the general good feeling of the troops is the alacrity with which Native soldiers abruptly re-called from furlough are rejoining their regiments.

As regards the movements of troops and appointment of officers to command, we are told that "the Malta Division is put under the very efficient command of General Ross, well known in 1857 as Ross of Ross's Camel Corps. He is ably supported by Brigadier-General M'Pherson, v.c., a very distinguished officer; Colonel Watson, v.c., commanding the Cavalry Brigade, who has already achieved brilliant reputation as a Cavalry leader; and Colonel Prendergast, v.c., commanding the Sappers and Miners. The First Bombay Cavalry is commanded by Colonel Blair, v.c., and the Goorkhas (Prince of Wales's Own) by Colonel M'Intyre, v.c. The Goorkhas make splendid fighting men, and performed capital service during the Mutiny. The 9th Bengal Cavalry was formed after the Mutiny from remains of the famous regiment of Hodson's Horse. The 13th Infantry consists of Brahmans, Rajpoots, Hindustanees, Mussulmans, and Jats. The 31st is the Punjab regiment formed of Sikhs, Punjabis, Pathans, and a few Punjabi-Hindoos and Mahomedans—a fine body of men, of grand physique." This regiment leaves Cawnpore for Bombay to-day. Certainly we have here a goodly array of noble names and gallant regiments.

PASSING over the mention of military enthusiasm, and telegraphic applications of officers desirous, as they ever are on these occasions, to serve their country and promote its honour, we come to passages which may be fairly called poetical, though we are ready to sympathise with their laudable intent:—

The proposed employment of the Native Army in Europe has given to the Indian military service a lustre in the eyes of the Hindoos, which may in future render it one of the finest military forces in the world, and will doubtless prove of great benefit to India in various ways. The English military authorities will now find it necessary to set themselves in earnest to the task of carrying out a thorough reorganisation, so loudly clamoured for in years past. The English officers of the Indian Army, spurred by the hope of gaining European distinction, will emulate with each other in acquiring as perfect a scientific knowledge of their profession as possible, while the spectacle of English and native regiments fighting side by side in Europe will have a powerful effect in breaking down the barriers of race.

There is a little confusion about the "lustre" in the first sentence, and perhaps a little more further on; but telegrams need not be too closely criticised.

THE same telegram reports that an Agitation Meeting was held at Calcutta, on the 17th inst., to protest against the Vernacular Press Act. It is added that the Sheriff declined convening it, and the remark made that this kind of investment has at this moment a mischievous tendency to excite native popular feeling. Such demonstrations, we are told, "are got up chiefly by Calcutta Bengalis; but the fact ought to be borne in mind in England that but a small section even of Bengal native opinion is represented at these meetings. They are, indeed, chiefly composed of Calcutta youths of the Presidency College."

THE Standard of this morning has authority to state that the Bishopric of Lichfield has been offered to, and accepted by, the Rev. William Dalrymple MacLagan, M.A., vicar of Kensington. We quote the full paragraph:—

Mr. MacLagan took the degree of B.A. at St. Peter's College, Cambridge, in 1856, and that of M.A. in 1860. He was ordained deacon and priest in 1856 and 1857 by the Bishop of London, served the curacies of St. Saviour, Paddington, and St. Stephen, Marylebone, up to 1860, when he was appointed secretary to the London Diocesan Church Building Society, his name having been brought to the notice of Bishop Tait by the late Bishop Cotton, who had known him when he was in India. He was curate in charge of Enfield from 1865 to 1869, when Lord Chattercellor Hatherley appointed him to the vicarage of St. Mary Newington, a parish which had been much neglected, but which, under his auspices, was brought to a high state of efficiency, a new parish church being erected, and a chapel of ease built by the alms of those to whom Mr. MacLagan had ministered in missions. In order not to lose him from his diocese when Newington was transferred to Rochester, the Bishop of London promoted Mr. MacLagan to the vicarage of St. Mary Abbots, Kensington, where he has effected great improvements. The benefice now falls to the gift of the Crown.

The public, generally, will doubtless approve the wisdom and discretion exercised in this appointment; although the loss to Kensington will be much felt. Our own congratulations are two-fold; first to the Bishop himself and the diocese over which he has been placed, by a nomination which opens out a new field of spiritual usefulness; and secondly to the Indian Army, of which the distinguished prelate was once an officer, on the Madras Establishment.

THE SHAH's announcement of intended movements is issued in ample time to ensure efficient preparations being made for his reception. We read that the Persian Embassy at Pera has been informed that his Majesty will first visit St. Petersburg, then Berlin, Vienna, Paris and London; and, after a short tour in Spain, will return by Turkey, Egypt, Mecca, and the Persian Gulf. Were it not impossible to foresee what questions of haute diplomatie may arise at the Russian capital to interfere with the fulfilment of the after part of the programme, Mr. Cook's aid and experience might make his services desirable, to facilitate the Royal tour.

THE heat in Sind and the Panjab, even in the month of March, is not what many would suppose it to be. Those residents in India who pass the cold weather in a Presidency town, and the rest of the year some 7,000 feet above the level of that town, have probably never felt anything like it. In fact, we have no hesitation in saying that many of our accepted authorities on climate and people in British India, have no more knowledge from personal experience, of what the Indian climate can be at certain seasons and certain places, than they have of the real feelings peculiar to large sections of Indian humanity with which they have never been in close contact. We are led to these perhaps rather morbid reflections by reading that the 2nd Baluch Regiment was in tents at Mittri on the 13th ult., with the thermometer standing at ninety-five degrees, waiting to know where it was to proceed, when the hot weather set in. Now the locality of Mittri may not be generally known. It is neither Sind nor the Panjab, but it may be somewhat hotter than either. The place, once the residence of Mulla Muhammad, of Sarawan, a Sardar of local repute, is to be found on the road from Jacobabad to the Bolan, one march on this side of Dadur, and two marches beyond Bhag.

ACCORDING to a telegram, dated Alexandria, 24th inst., in the Times of the day following, Captain Richard Burton, commanding the "Khedivial" Expedition, for the survey of mines in the land of Midian, had returned to Cairo. This indefatigable traveller, who seems never to have ceased from exploring and recording his explorations, since visiting Goa and the Blue Mountains, some thirty years ago, is now reported to have travelled 500 miles by land in pursuit of his latest discovery. We are told, moreover, that he "brings back 25 tons of specimen ore, comprising gold, silver, copper, tin, and lead;" having found "three sulphur centres, three turquoise mines, extensive deposits of gypsum, saltpetre, and rock-salt." Captain Burton is certainly one of the most wonderful of men, whether regarded in point of general ability, or as a linguist or traveller. Who can say or write so much on so many and such a variety of subjects? who speak so many languages with such marvellous fluency and precision? who has visited so many and such unfamiliar countries? By the way, as he is to come home to arrange for working the Khedive's mines, could he not arrange at the same time for formal admission into the English language of "Khedivial," a strangely-sounding adjective for which we hardly like to hold the gallant officer responsible.

BEFORE receipt of the telegraphic intelligence, the Correspondent of the Times of India had, in a letter dated Alexandria, March 1, given us some recent information on Capt. Burton and his mining expedition from the Gulf of Akaba and the land of Midian. The caravan was said to consist of sixty soldiers, of which thirty were engineers, or sappers and miners, with of course the usual camp followers, and some Europeans. It was thought not unlikely that the Bedouins would prove troublesome, though such had not been the case up to date. The explorers had arrived at Mayer-Schweib, about one hundred miles from the coast, where the nature of the soil was all that had been expected. Several borings and sounding had been made with satisfactory results. The entire district showed traces of ancient mining operations; gold and silver quartz were found in the mountain ranges; and old furnaces gave evidence of former works. The Correspondent further stated that, without being too sanguine or predicting a second California on the Arabian Coast of the Red Sea, those competent to form an opinion believed in the realisation of valuable returns, if capital and machinery were but judiciously applied. We write the name of the station reached, as it is found in the letter; but the orthography savours of Mittel-franken rather than of Midian.

FROM a letter in the Indian Daily News, dated Raniganj, March 26, it appears that small-pox and cholera were both prevalent at that station, and that there were ten to fifteen deaths daily. The writer complained of the want of medical officers, and suggested that Government send some of those practitioners who had passed the high standard examinations at home, to earn distinction in so good a cause.

WE quote the following from the Pioneer, as a good pendant to the story of the marriage in the house of Babu Kishab Chandar Sen:—

The law, as a profession, will, no doubt, continue attractive to Hindu students, in spite of the penance of Mr. Monmotha C. Mullick. But per se this constitutes an ordeal which it must seem hard to go through in addition to a course of Temple dinners. The learned barrister referred to was summoned a few days ago before the elders of the Kaista Society, to which he, as a casteman belongs, and it was solemnly debated whether he could be re-admitted a Kaista after the sins he had committed. These sins consisted in having crossed the kala pani, and in eating and drinking publicly with the Malachos, or Europeans, in direct opposition to the Hindu Shasters. His "cause was very warmly advocated by fiery eloquence and vehemence," and Mr. Mullick was eventually ordered to expiate his sins by a penance known as the Praischetta ceremony. After having swallowed a quantity (a "good bit" according to a native correspondent) of a certain substance which is usually used as fuel, he had to give alms to the Brahmins, and shave his head and face perfectly clean. So was his sin expiated, and Mr. Mullick may now not only practice at the Bar, but mix with his own caste fellows in every domestic and religious ceremony. But the Praischetta ceremony does not seem to crown the edifice of a European education very satisfactorily.

WE regret to have been compelled to defer consideration of the Financial Statement of the Government of India, but a notice of the Resolution published in the Gazette Extraordinary of the 18th inst. shall appear in our next issue.

THE Trevandrum Correspondent of the Madras Athenæum, writing on March 18, announces the arrival there of a rhinoceros, by rail and backwater from Bangalore, in a wooden pen (on wheels). Few people would call this an interesting animal; but there is no reason why, if made a show for the amusement of the multitude, it should not be as well treated as other living curiosities; and the account of its sufferings is sad enough to call for the interference of the Royal Humane Society. In the first place his travelling carriage, or "pen," was "just large enough to hold him and no more, so that he had no chance of getting way on, and escaping with a rush." Then, it (the change of gender is not ours) "had a massive and rusty old chain round its neck, which had actually worn itself into the raw flesh, right through its thick hide;" and the sun and the flies must have caused it much distress during the journey. A great crowd of natives assembled to witness its arrival at the Public Gardens; and its transfer from pen to den—the latter being so constructed, according to the Correspondent, that, during the afternoon, "the poor wretch will suffer all the horrors of a broiling sun, and in the monsoon be deluged with rain." Ariel fared hardly worse when confined by Sycorax in the "cloven pine," referred to by Prospero.

WE are indebted to the Pall Mall Gazette for an extract from the New York Tribune, informing us of a school in the City of Hartford where more than a hundred Chinese boys go through an Educational course lasting fifteen years. The period is rather a long one, sufficient to work great transformation; for the Chinese boy of ten could hardly be recognised in the American of twenty-five; but the origin of the institution is sufficiently interesting to draw attention to its progress, and wake sympathy in its behalf. It appears that a certain "Yung Wing" was brought to America for purposes of education, and the results were so successful, that, after a time, he conceived the idea of giving his countrymen the same advantages which he had himself derived, on a systematic scale, and by a way accessible to the many. The plan took him twenty years to mature, and its execution is thus described:—"It is the old story of men with great ideas—long years of waiting without a chance to work, long years of working without results, sudden reverses which put him back where he began. A young man so far Americanised that he took prizes at Yale for English composition, and had to learn Chinese again on going back to China, his task was to press upon the most Conservative people in the world what seemed a radical, if not a revolutionary project. He succeeded at last in a country where the death of an official's mother can delay an enterprise for three years, and rose with the triumph of his idea." This same "Yung Wing" (who must have become, by the way, an "old bird"), is now, it appears, a Mandarin of high degree, whose school will, in a few years, "send back across the Pacific a hundred young men who in China will be statesmen and philosophers."

Odds and Ends.

It is stated that Major Roocke will be appointed Military Secretary to the Nizam's Government, and Captain Gough will be made pucka Private Secretary to Sir Salar Jung. The command of the re-formed troops was offered to Major Roocke, but he declined it.

On the 28th March, at the Police Court, Calcutta, Nawab Enayet-ud-Dowla, a son-in-law of the ex-King of Oude, and one Aga Hussein, were charged with being in possession of forged documents, knowing the same to be forged, with intent to use them as genuine, under Section 474, Indian Penal Code.

THE trial of Babu Shama Churn, late Head Clerk of the Treasury Office, Lahore, for dishonest misappropriation of Government money to the value of Rs. 1,989-13-6, and for forgery, under Sections 403 and 471 of the Indian Penal Code, has resulted in his being sentenced by the Deputy Commissioner to four years' rigorous imprisonment, and a fine of Rs. 1,500, or in default one year's additional imprisonment. The prisoner was to be tried on other charges before the same Court on March 27.

A SIMLA correspondent says that a notice is going round the station inviting residents to have themselves, their children, and the children of their servants vaccinated as early as possible. ## ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL, SATURDAY, April 27, 1878.

THE TURCOMANS OF PERSIA.

THE Turcomans, or properly Turkman, of Persia—because there are other Turkman also in Asia Minor—have apparently entered into a new alliance with the Persian Government. We have not got the particulars before us, but more than a column is given to the subject in the Times of yesterday; and it is one which is well worthy of attention. West of the Caspian, Russia, in her annexations in Asia Minor under the San Stefano Treaty, has overlapped the Tabriz-Trebisond Post-road; and East of the Caspian the Shah has come to a territorial understanding with the Turkman. But the Shah, we are also told, has crossed the Russo-Persian frontier en route to St. Petersburg; and it is not improbable that the ahd-nama or compact in writing (for scribes abound even in Eastern deserts), may have accompanied his Majesty; and if it be about the Royal person or amid the Royal baggage, it will assuredly be shown at St. Petersburg; and if it be shown at St. Petersburg, it is not improbable that others beside the Shah and the Turkman will benefit from the knowledge so imparted. The question, however, arises whether the whole proceeding may not be in accordance with an international understanding, and whether the Perso-Turkman treaty or agreement, or whatever the paper be called in Oriental diplomatic language, is not the outcome of Russo-Persian harmony? This idea is not mooted till nearly at the end of the article to which we have referred, though we venture to think that it will have presented itself long before to the mind of the intelligent reader.

It is worth while to repeat the recorded aspects of the case, because we see a way of supplementing them with a new, if not better, chance of hitting the mark. The writer thus expresses his views of the so-called “amicable understanding”:—

It is quite possible, of course, that the whole proceeding is a sham, and that the Turcomans will consider their promises best “honoured in the breach.” It is not so easy to account for having gone out of their way to make those promises and to give guarantees for their fulfilment. It is far more probable that some pressing necessity, or some political foresight, has made them propose an understanding which, on the face of it, is to the advantage of Persia alone. There is yet another aspect from which this can be viewed. The Court of Teheran may be acting under the influence of Russia in the matter, and the Turcomans may have been induced by bribes to concede what was demanded of them. In that case the Russian Government might at a convenient moment to itself occupy Merv in the name of its ally, Persia, and thus by ostensibly legal means obtain possession of the half-way house to Herat. There is precedent for this view in the old schemes that were fabricated for the seizure of Herat, thirty-five years ago and twenty years ago. If such be the case, we think that the proverbial fickleness of the Turcomans may yet spoil any plan of this kind, for their sole object in surrendering some of their rights would have been to preserve Merv from a Russian domination.

There is yet, then, the possibility that Persia may have acted in the matter on the advice of others than Russia, for she has at her Court, besides Russia, the representatives of England, Turkey, and we believe Austria. Why, for instance, should, not England advise the possession of Merv by Persia? Why, indeed, should she not have advised it months and years ago? Why should she not have herself advanced money for the purchase of Merv, not to be won by force of arms, if the measure had ensured the fealty of the Tekkes—at a time when it would have been willingly accepted, and when a capable Governor at Mash-had would have fitly clinched the agreement? Gold has long been a self-evident solution of the Perso-Turkman difficulty; for it has been found that Persian armies were not sufficiently strong, and Persian commanders not sufficiently capable to subdue these marauders, whose presence in Kaiyan and along the high road from Mash-had to Shahrūd has been a standing disgrace to the Persian Government from the days of our earliest Envoys to the Shah, until now. English gold was long since suggested by the people of the plundered districts themselves, as the only practical remedy for their distress. “You Ingliz alone can stop these chupars; it is your business, Kar-i-shumast,” or words to this effect, were spoken to a British officer moving amid the scenes of devastation in the spring of 1872.

Of course all this is not so easily accomplished in 1878, when the new Russian victories have struck new terror of the Russian name into Persian as well as Turkman hearts. But it would indeed be cause for lament, and turning over a new leaf in the books of Oriental Diplomacy, were we to find that Russia had now done what England might so much better have done, not only in advancement of her own “selfish” aims, but in the interests of Persia and humanity. We are unacquainted with the history of this whole proceeding; but it comes strangely and unexpectedly to notice just as we learn that the Shah has set out on his second European tour.

Those who agree with us in the views already expressed upon the present phase of the all-absorbing Eastern Question, and who accept our definition of the true British-Indian interests involved in the situation of the day, will scarcely feel surprise that we have passed on from the West to the East of the Caspian in resuming consideration of the subject. It is here that we seem to be on the actual geographical, as well as political line of connection between Russian encroachment and India. We all admit the value to us of Baluchistan and Afghanistan, and, strange to say, of Turkish Armenia; consequently, that we are fairly concerned in retaining the goodwill of the two former and maintaining the integrity of the latter. Then how can we leave Persia and the Turkman out of the reckoning, or be indifferent to the part they play in the drama? Such, however, is done, and such will, we fear, continue to be done until the explosion of a mine or bursting of a shell awake us to the reality of the un-headed mischief. If proof of the assertion be wanting, none better could perhaps be formed than in the column and a quarter of the Times, which has furnished us with material for the foregoing reflections. It appears in the outer or Advertisement sheet; and, but for the figures and Oriental names, might be passed over as a theatrical criticism or other matter of, at best, no political importance.

THE Indian Life Assurance Company has resolved on winding up its business, which will be transferred to the Standard Life Assurance Company.

RIOTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

A loan of one hundred millions was the next operation. To encourage lenders, he promised to pay off the annuities by means of the bank of discount, and issued a prospectus for reimbursing the floating debt in twenty-four years. This would bring Calonne's operations down to 1800, long before which time the deluge was likely to come, and did come. The new Minister, no doubt, saw something of the kind in the future, but his only mode of preparing for it was the philosophic one of enjoying the present. The plenitude of money which Calonne was successful in procuring enabled him to gratify the Court. He bought St. Cloud from the Duke of Orleans, and gave it to Marie Antoinette. The King's brothers had their debts paid, and the grand seigneurs had what they pleased. "When I saw everyone tending his hand," observed a Prince, "I stretched out my hat, and Calonne filled it." Not only the grands, but the lesser courtiers, received their pensions and crosses that Turgot and Necker had so mercilessly cut off. He created all kinds of new places, with high salaries for few or for many. Twelve receivers-general did Necker's work. Calonne appointed forty-eight of them. In an operation on what was called the rescription, the officers were allowed to make a profit of thirty-two millions. He thus flung away the amount of a loan.—Page 370 of Vol. IV. of "History of France," by Eyre Evans Crowe.

SIR,—Our Indian subjects, numbering one hundred and ninety millions, may be said to be the most industrious, patient, frugal, and self-denying in the world. There is no other country so easily governed, if we try to do our duty, and refrain from giving way to crude fancies; but there is a point beyond which even the Indian peasant will not patiently endure. When the Emperor Aurungzebe treated them as wild beasts, they rose, and succeeded at last in destroying the Moghul dynasty.

Let us read what our greatest statesman, Sir Henry Lawrence, has written on this subject:—

The old Jaghir system, under which the Mahratta chief served the Deccan kings, was a good foundation for the regeneration of his country to work upon; but it must be remembered that it was not with the chiefs that Sivajee commenced operations, but with the despised and half starving peasantry of the Ghat-Mahla and Sawunt-waree. It was when Sivajee had gained a name, and had himself become a chief, that chiefs joined his standard. It is ever so in India. These is always ample material abroad to feed the wildest flame of insurrection; but not until it has assumed a head, will those who have a stake in the land join it. They will talk, they will write, they will plot; but seldom, unless in instances of great infatuation, when misled by false prophets, will the chiefs of the land join an insurrectionary move, so long as his own izzat has not been touched."—Allen's Edition of Sir Henry Lawrence's "Essays," page 172.

The French peasant is very patient and very industrious and self-denying, but he requires a cottage or hut of some sort, and he requires some clothes. The native of India will be content with a few boughs to protect him from the terrible heat of summer, from the pouring rains of autumn and from the cold of winter. He will be contented if he has a sixpenny rag round his loins, but he requires three things.

First. Enough of coarse food to fill his stomach once in twenty four hours.

Thirdly. A little wood or cow dung with which to cook his coarse food and make it wholesome.

In order to obtain these three requisites of life he will work with an industry unsurpassed in any other part of the world; he will be content to go on working all his life without any hope of the least comfort.

But our rich and benevolent Government has lately shown a tendency to overlook these three humble necessities. What—you will exclaim, after it has expended sixteen millions on famines or on fancied famines! The shying about of money does not necessarily relieve famine; the "Black Pamphlet" informed us whither a great deal of the money in 1874 went; the honest writer was hated by Government for telling the truth. The result of squandering money in Southern India last year appears to have been to create a gigantic system of forestalling, engrossing and regrating. Not only is the existing food in the country bought up by the great capitalists to be resold at double prices, but future harvests have been bought up by them. The fact is that not one Dives, but a thousand, have enslaved the people without allowing the latter to pick up the crumbs falling from their tables. The poverty of the people has led them into hopeless debt, and they must try to exist upon such portions of the crops as cold-blooded usurers will permit them to retain.

It is under such circumstances that Government has this year refused to tax the rich but has imposed heavy burdens upon the poor debtors.

In the histories of Judæa, Greece, Rome, and France, we read of a similar state of things. In Greece the burdens on the poor were removed by Solon, in Judæa by Nehemiah, and in France by Sully. In India we must abolish the vile octroi; Government year after year writes about doing this, but never does it. How can we be surprised at the occurrence of riots in Surat when we read the history of the octroi tax in that ancient city?

We must lower the salt tax. I am thankful to be able to write that eighty-seven Members of the House of Commons have shown their wisdom by voting against an immoderate tax on salt; but so lukewarm is the Times newspaper in advocating justice to the poor, that the Editor has omitted to publish the names of the eighty-seven honourable gentlemen; at least my search for the list has been in vain, though lists of both majorities and minorities are published by the Times on very unimportant questions.

Communism and Socialism are created and nourished by heartlessness and want of sympathy on the part of the rich towards the poor. We have checked slavery in many parts of the world; let us not lose our Indian Empire by permitting slavery to exist unchecked in that fertile country:—

As soon, however, as the labouring classes recovered from the stupor into which the loud clamour for production had thrown them, they began to resist being overworked, in the very country which had given birth to the extension of industry, i.e., in England. Concessions were extorted from the employers of labour, and five Acts were passed by Parliament in favour of the labourers, from 1802 to 1833, but were of no avail for thirty years in the absence of proper authority to enforce them. And thus, until the Act of 1833 was passed, children and young persons, were worked the whole night and the whole day ad libitum (see Report of Inspectors of Factories 30th April, 1860, page 51). This Act only prohibited the work of young persons (i.e., from thirteen to eighteen) from exceeding twelve hours per day, and that of others fifteen hours. Even this legislative measure was nullified by inhuman employers, who succeeded in circumventing the law by a complicated system of relieving or shifting of hands, moving about the labourers in the factory so as to puzzle the inspectors and elude prosecution. At last, with the agitation of the Chartist, and the repeal of the Corn Laws, came in what is known as the Ten Hours' movement. After a preliminary Act for the protection of women and young persons was passed, the punctilious minutiae of which show the difficulty of the law in coping with the slippery manipulation of the employers of labour, the ten hours labour day was fixed by Parliament, which came into operation in 1848, notwithstanding the opposition of the free-trade advocates, Cobden and Bright.

A powerful reaction followed upon this, during which the employers dismissed many of their hands, and with more or less success tried to escape the consequences of this Act of Parliament. Loud complaints against this and the tardy and uncertain enforcement of the law in some places were heard from the operatives; at their meetings held in Lancashire and Yorkshire the Act was called a mere humbug and a parliamentary fiction, and after some struggles in the courts of law a compromise was come to, which was ratified in another Act of Parliament in 1850, and that again was supplemented in 1853, just half a century after the first legislative Act on the same subject. This shows how hard the struggle was before the employers could be brought to reason, and to listen to the dictates of humanity.

The important legislative measures of 1867, known under the name of Factory Acts Extension Act and an Act for Regulating Workshops, were passed also in favour of the labouring classes, such being the imperative necessity of State interference in order to prevent the utter degradation of the labourer, and to protect the honest employer against unprincipled competitors who owed their success to brutal sacrifice of human life.—Page 172 of Kaufmann's "Dangers of Socialism," 1874.

OUR FRONTIER POLICY.

The first reason given for our intervention is, that trade through the Bolan Pass was not merely disturbed, but almost stopped, by want of security. This was undoubtedly the case in Khelat, but it is so in every independent Himalayan province. European traders are not allowed to show their faces in Bhootan, Tibet, or Nepal. In Afghanistan, commerce is periodically interrupted by civil war. This was the case in Bhootan at the commencement of the present year. The passage of caravans through the territory of such hill tribes as those of the Himalayas is practicable only when a strong ruler has established temporary order. Every ten years or so there is a civil war, or at least such disputes as those between the Khan of Khelat and his subjects. While these are being fought out trades must necessarily be insecure; that is an inconvenience to which we must submit, consoling ourselves with the reflection that, while one petty market is closed, others remain open. The only alternative course is to govern the country ourselves, preventing all political disturbances; and if it is to be considered legitimate, we must expect to see during this generation the subjection of all our present neighbours, after which our sons will have to deal with the States beyond. Next, it is said that it was necessary to put an end to anarchy, in order to prevent raids on our own territory. That would be a valid reason, if it were only true. It is, however, quite clear that the Khelat frontier was never seriously disturbed, and that at the time of our intervention it was exceptionally tranquil. The only raid was in March, 1874, and it consisted in an expedition of two hundred hill men to retake some fugitive slaves who had fled to our territory. This affair was settled at the time. "The state of affairs on the frontier," says the despatch, "during the spring and summer of 1875, showed some improvement. Major Sandeman's communications with the Murrees resulted in the submission of their chief, who visited Jacobabad, and in the recovery of much stolen property. No serious disturbance occurred within or near the British frontier, in the immediate neighbourhood of Jacobabad." We do not doubt that there was some cattle-lifting, and that our police had to be vigilant. Some insecurity is a necessary consequence of the neighbourhood of hill tribes. We only say that such provocation of this sort as we received from Khelat will occasionally be given by everyone of the States on our Northern Frontier, and that if it is sufficient to render annexation necessary, there will be no end to our career of aggression. We must continue to extend our dominions until we meet with a people in Central Asia who are always quiet and inoffensive. The plea for intervention most confidently urged is, not the disturbance of our trade or that of our frontier, which, magnify them as we will, were comparatively trifles, but our consideration for the people of Khelat themselves, and particularly for a certain tribe of Kutchees. "The Government of India," says the despatch, "were again compelled to recognise that, however irresponsible in theory they might be for the peace of the district adjoining the frontier, they could not in fact allow anarchy and rapine to prevail in those regions unchecked; and that, irrespective of the general interest which they had in the quiet and prosperity of the neighbouring countries, they had a special interest in Kutchee, arising from the circumstance that the boundary between it and Sind ran through an open country, so that any disturbance might affect British territory very closely. Here, again, we try to find a resting-place, to see something to distinguish the Khelat case from that of other Himalayan States; but in vain. The boundaries between Bhootan and the Julpigoree District, between Nepal and the Dhurbunga District, run through an open country, and therefore any disturbance in these principalities might affect us very closely. Should we therefore interfere by armed force in the civil commotions likely to break out before long in those regions? Our connection with Afghanistan is still more intimate. Must we therefore play over again the part we once acted at Cabul? It is plain that this is a reason for invasion which always exists, with regard to every neighbour. And so is another excuse strongly urged in the despatch, namely, that nothing was designed, one thing led to another, until we found ourselves committed. We first tried peaceful mediation; then, when it failed, armed intervention, and when that proved insufficient to ensure a permanent settlement of the country, we had unwilling recourse to the last expedient, permanent occupation by our armies. Such reasoning had its force years ago, when we did not know how easy is the step in the East from friendly assistance to conquest. It is inapplicable now that so many examples have taught us that in India there is no practical medium between non-intervention and conquest. There is always an undercurrent of feeling in favour of the extension of our frontier—a policy which brings with it many solid advantages to the officers who carry it out, and a reputation for spirit and enterprise to those who direct it. We should therefore steadily bear in mind the strong reasons which led the country to adopt the opposite rule of action. In the first place, it does not pay. The Himalayan Hills are poor and warlike; it is impossible to get a revenue from them, while the expense of governing them is great. Schuyler has shown that her conquests in Central Asia led to a serious financial embarrassment on the part of Russia. By seizing Khelat we have acquired the obligation of paying the Khan five lakhs a year as an allowance, of supporting a considerable force in a costly position for his defence, of keeping a Resident, with a great staff, at his Court; and whatever return we may get for this, we do not get a rupee in the way of money. Khelat must cost us at least twenty lakhs a year; we should not be surprised to learn that, with the fortification of Quetta, it costs a crore. Now, although some persons think such considerations mean and sordid, these spirited gentlemen object as much as their neighbours to a license tax. What is the good of acquiring land which costs much for protection, and yields no rent? Moreover, every step we take in advance deprives us of allies. Before the Khelat expedition we were trusted in Afghanistan. Now the Ameer has not even the decency to conceal his hostility. It may at any time be to us a serious matter that we have made reasonable men at Kabul tremble for the independence of their country, and dread the fate of Khelat. The farther we advance from our resources the more weak is the front we offer to an enemy. And, to look at it from another point of view, is there not something almost ridiculous in our position, when, after protesting for years that under no circumstances will we advance our frontier at the expense of a neighbour, we seize the first opportunity of the embarrassment of an ally to occupy his country?—Indian Daily News.

A CALCUTTA HEROINE.

With reference to Mrs. Carey, one of the few survivors of the imprisonment in the Black Hole, and who is mentioned by Mr. Rainey in a recent number of the Saturday Evening Journal, I am able to quote the following interesting notes from a fly-leaf at the end of our copy of Holwell's "Tracts." They are presumably in the handwriting of the former owners of the book:—

"Note 1.—August 13th, 1799.—This forenoon, between the hours of ten and eleven o'clock, visited by appointment, in company with Mr. Charles Child, at her house in Calcutta, situate in an angle at the head of the Portuguese Church-street, and east of the church, Mrs. Carey, the last survivor of those unfortunate persons who were imprisoned in the Black Hole at Calcutta, on the capture of that place in 1756 by Suraj-ud-Dowla. This lady, now fifty-eight (58) years of age, as she herself told me, is of a size rather above the common stature, and very well proportioned; of a fair Mesticia colour, with correct regular features, which give evident marks of beauty which must once have attracted admiration. She confirmed all which Mr. Holwell has said on the subject of the Black Hole in the foregoing letter, and added that besides her husband, her mother, Mrs. Eleanor Watson (her name by second marriage), and her sister, aged about ten years, had also perished therein, and that other women, the wives of soldiers and children, had shared a like fate there. (Signed) "THOMAS BOILEAU."

"Note 2.—Mrs. Carey died Saturday, March 23, 1801."

"Note 3.—(Written by another hand.)—Mrs. Carey was made the subject of some very pleasing Latin verses by Dr. Bishop, Head Master of Merchant Taylor's (where Clive was educated). See 'Fœnia Pœtica' (p. 230) A.D. 1766."

"Quam jussu Eoi, Calcottica in arce, tyranni
Captiva heu! subiit tristitia fata manus,
Et passim furibunda siti, moribunda calore,
Corpora robustis succubuere viris,
Fœmina languori, horrorique superfruit, omnes,
Tam varie miseras fœminia passa vices.
Scilicet antepedes, spirantem extrema maritum,
Viderat illa, pari membra datura neci;
Nec mora; prosiliunt oculis quasi fontibus undæ.
Et subita humectant ora gementis aquæ;
Hinc vita, unde dolor; nescit sitiendo perire,
Cui sic dat lacrymas quas bibat ipsa files."

(See H. B. Wilson's "History of Merchant Taylor's School," p. 1098.)

The above may be thus translated:—"When by the command of an Eastern tyrant, a captive band suffered, alas! a cruel fate in the Fort of Calcutta, and on all sides strong men fell, maddened by thirst and dying with heat, a woman outlived the weakness and the horror, a woman endured all the turns of such varied misery. She saw her husband breathe his last at her feet, and was about to yield herself to a like death, when lo! the waters leap from her eyes as from springs, and bedew her lips with sudden moisture. Grief gives her life. She cannot die of thirst, to whom fidelity itself thus gives tears for drink."

The first note quoted shows that Mr. Rainey is mistaken in implying that Mrs. Carey died in the seraglio. It may be added that there is no reason for supposing that she suffered any indignities at the hands of Mir Jaffir. She probably resided in his harem because it was the most appropriate place of asylum for a woman.—A. S. B.—Indian Paper.

LITERATURE IN INDIA: EDITORS.

An Indian editor, said the editor of the Englishman, in a recent speech at Calcutta, has many drawbacks to contend against: drawbacks arising from the want of a large professional literary class to write for him at command; drawbacks arising from the absence in India of that vast and widely-ramified system of channels for the conveyance of news through which, in England, prompt and accurate information is poured into the great centres of thought; drawbacks arising from unavoidably imperfect division of labour; drawbacks arising from constant interruption against which an English editor is protected; most serious drawbacks, gentlemen, arising from the numerical smallness of the community among which he works. It would exhaust your patience if I were to expatiate upon all or even half of these drawbacks. I shall therefore confine myself to a few words about one of the disadvantages arising from that which I named last. Most of the questions with which newspapers have to deal contain at bottom, and sometimes at top, more or less of a personal element. And, however much anxiously an editor may strive to avoid giving undue prominence to this element, cases must constantly occur in a small community like those of our presidency towns in which, unless he shirks his duty altogether, he will have to elect between doing violence to his conscience and traversing the convictions or trampling on the corns, or even writing down the interests of his friends, sometimes of his best and dearest friends. Then an Indian editor is known wherever he goes, and if he frequents social gatherings he must be prepared continually to meet face to face the very men whom he has offended, or, perhaps, men who may feel, with some reason from their own point of view, that they have been injured by him. Under such circumstances, I think that an Indian editor has very strong claims on your forbearance. I think it is essential for you, one and all, to remember that the true liberty of the Press consists not merely in its immunity from uncalled for legal restraints and illegal oppression by the powers that be, but that every one of you, in these small communities, is in some sense the repository of that liberty, and that it is as real, though it may not be as great, a blow to that liberty for men to withdraw their friendship or support from an editor on account of the honest expression of his convictions, as it would be for the Government to clap him into prison for opposing its views.—Times of India.

WELL-IRRIGATION.

Opponents of well-irrigation often lay stress on the fact that even natives, with all their experience of likely spots, constantly fail to strike water at a depth that pays them for their labour. If, it is argued, the ryot with his local knowledge, transmitted to him for ages, cannot sink wells at such a cost that irrigation from them answers, how can strangers venture to build them when ignorant of all the surroundings? A little revelation has, however, just been made in a long report on the Coimbatore district, which may explain the non-success of many wells. The ryot does not carefully examine his fields, and by studying the dip of the land or other natural signs, seek to come upon a spot where water will be near the surface; he acts in a much simpler way. Taking a sheep near the spot where he thinks a well is wanted, he pours water over the animal's head and sets it free. It wanders away, and the ryot follows, carefully on the watch to see where it shakes its head and scatters the water from its woolly poll. On that spot the well is sunk. The peasants are said to be sensible about many things, but they cling to the faith that is in them regarding the sinking of wells. They admit that the results are often unsatisfactory, but they hope for better luck in future. Perhaps the local folk-lore might furnish an explanation of their customs. In the meantime a few Government borers who could tap the water and show the ryots where to sink their wells, would be useful in Coimbatore. If the people have the common-sense they are credited with, they might learn to recognise that, valuable as a sheep's head may be for divining purposes, a boring tube has its merits too.—Pioneer.

STATION TALK.

SHAHABAD, March 21.—In 1874 I was for a time in Shahabad, and observed a great stir made about an imaginary famine when there was but a partial failure of the crops. Grain was stored by Government which no one wanted, and which I believe eventually was destroyed by damp and weavels. Relief-works were opened by the Government, and ostensibly by some native zemindars, and the latter received khilluts in recognition of the "valuable" aid rendered by them. I think some zemindars were even bold enough to have boasted about the large remissions made by them to their tenants, which on inquiry proved to be actually the portion of rents not paid by the ryots, and which were subsequently realised. In 1878, after the almost total failure of the bhudra and khureef crops (last year), the limited area under rubbee cultivation this winter, and its almost total destruction (including the poppy, the capsules of which have been drilled by worms, and given perhaps a four-anna yield) by blight, caterpillars, &c., and grain falling daily at the rate of one seer per rupee, not a move is being made to rescue the immense population that will be literally starving by May and June next. The troubles of 1874 succeeded to no troubles elsewhere, consequently the partial failure of the crops did not affect any except those who were in a chronic state of poverty. Grain was abundant. Prices did rise, but the rise was quite out of proportion to the grain in store, and due more to the banneeah's desire to make cent. per cent. when he can by any panic. The troubles of 1878 have succeeded the troubles in Madras and elsewhere; all the available stores of grain have found their way to the famine districts; the better classes of ryots have been tempted by high prices and parted with that which would have just kept themselves and their families from starving, and now find that they have trusted more to kismat for the future than they should have; the poorer classes, or the petty cultivators, had little, and this they have gone through. What can be the consequence to masses so situated? Zemindars are hard at work selling the scanty yield of the rubbee, because they know that if they do not look sharp after it, the little there is will be either seized by the banneeah creditors, who abound in every village, or be stored for home consumption by the ryots.

The zemindar cannot be blamed, for he has to meet the Government demand for revenue, swelled by the road cess, the public works cess, &c. Emigration to the colonies appears to be the only means of saving many, and I believe large numbers are anxious to emigrate with their families, but it seems none of the Colonies want labourers from India. I spoke to one gentleman who has been engaged in despatching labourers to one of the Colonies, and he assured me that more came to him with the view of emigrating than he could receive, as requisitions were very limited. He also told me that often batches of starving wretches came and took up their abode in his depôts by force and force had to be used to expel them. I have given above a narration of facts, which can be verified by any one not determined to believe that there are no signs of a famine, because the Government is determined that there shall not be one.—Friend of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

FRONTIER NEWS.—The frontier affairs have become once more settled, the various tribes having all accepted the terms of Government.

MAYO COLLEGE.—The marble walls and tower of the Mayo Hall, which is to form the centre of the collegiate buildings at Ajmere, are already several feet above the ground.

THE REV. A. TOOTH.—The Rev. Arthur Tooth, the incumbent of Hatcham, lately passed through Singapore, en route to Penang. If the Indian Daily News be not misinformed, Mr. Tooth is brother of the capitalist who floated the Perak Plantation Estates.

TEMPORARY TRANSFERS.—During Mr. H. Blanford's furlough to England, Mr. J. Eliot is to act as Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India, and Mr. Pedlar is to act for Mr. Eliot as Reporter to the Government of Bengal.

WILD ELEPHANTS.—As it is in contemplation to introduce into Rangoon an Act to prevent the destruction of wild elephants, precautionary measures are already being adopted in the province for the protection of the pachyderms.

VICE-REGAL SPORT.—The Viceroy's party had good sport at Majra, in the Nabun territory, killing three tigers the first day before luncheon; two fell to Captain Rose's rifle. Dr. Barnett killed a fine bear.

AMUSEMENTS.—The Corinthian Theatre Company, which has had so successful a season, performed for the last time on the 30th ult. The Calcutta Swimming Club Sports were to be held on the 6th April.

OPIMUM SMUGGLING.—Mr. Rivett-Carnac, the Opium Commissioner of Ghazipore, has recently been visiting Ajmere to confer with the local authorities regarding measures to prevent the opium of the North-West Provinces from being smuggled into Rajputana.

SIMLA.—A project is in good hands for re-decorating, re-lighting, and generally restoring the Simla Theatre. The results of last season's performances are held to be conclusive that with careful management theatricals at Simla are self-supporting, and something more.

HUNTING.—The sons of his Highness the Nawab Nazim of Moorshedabad, Mr. Bainbridge, the Judge, and Mr. Peacock, Resident, have been on a hunting expedition in the Maldah district. The party managed to bag two tigers, five wild buffaloes, and about thirty-hog-deer.

FAMINE OPERATIONS.—The Resident at Hyderabad has been requested by the Madras Government to urge on the Nizam's Government the necessity which exists for the village authorities in His Highness's dominions discouraging the wandering of their people across the frontier, and of receiving any found in distress in the Bellary district and returning them to their own villages.

NEWLY ADMITTED ADVOCATE.—Mr. Charles Alfred Andrews, B.A., of St. John's College, Cambridge, and of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law, has been admitted and enrolled as an advocate of the High Court. Mr. Andrews is the youngest son of Mr. H. Andrews, who is so well known in connection with the educational and religious institutions of this city.

A STUDENT RAO.—The Rao of Gadanti, heir to the quddi of Karauli, has been sent to the Mayo College at last. When the idea was first mooted, his mother threatened to throw herself down a well. How she was won to wiser views as regards her son and less heroic measures as regards herself, we have not heard; but it is a fact (and we find this notice of it in the Indian Daily News) that she has determined to let the well alone.

RINKING.—Rinking promises to be as fashionable at Simla this season as it was last, though the stringent rules in regard to admission are not likely to add to its popularity, outside of the official society which reigns supreme on Olympus. Though owned by a public company, the shareholders in which, by the way, are principally officials, the first of the code of rules reads as follows: "The Rink is open to all persons on the Government House Visiting List."

ITALIAN OPERA.—Signora Capozzi was honoured with a perfect

ovation on the occasion of her recent benefit, when the opera of "Norma" was performed with great éclat. We never remember any prima donna to have received a more flattering reception; several times during the evening the Signora had to retire, loaded with splendid bouquets and garlands of flowers and ribbons. Pigeons were also let loose, and directed in their flight towards the stage, bearing round their necks complimentary gifts to the fair beneficent. It is the first occasion that we have seen this pretty continental custom adopted in Calcutta.

VILLAGE RIOTS.—Riot cases between antagonistic village parties are becoming rather common in Behar. The source of such disputes is generally a piece of land, of which each party wants to get forcible possession. The other day the case of the "Empress v. Jalapore and Ouranga Ryots" cropped up; we now again hear of a similar case between the ryots of Pillich and Rangurh, in the district of Patna. It appears that, Lalji Singh, of Rangurh, together with about 200 men, went out to cut and take away wheat forcibly from a piece of piece of land in Pillich. A riot ensued, in which one man, Bailura Singh, of Pillich, is reported to have been killed.

BLOWING UP WRECKS.—Lieutenant Stafford, R.E., has arrived in Calcutta, with a party of Sappers from Rorkee, for the purpose of blowing up the wrecks in the port. Operations were to have been commenced on Saturday under the decks of the Asia, but the Port Commissioner's divers have lately been doing such good work in recovering cargo that it has been decided not to touch the Asia at present, but to proceed against the wreck of the British Viceroy. The explosive material used will be gun-cotton in long tubes, instead of powder in canisters, and the charges will be fixed under the direct superintendence of Lieutenant Stafford and Mr. Duff Bruce.

JABALPUR SCHOOLS.—The first report of the Christ Church Schools, Jabalpur has been issued. The schools were founded to provide European and Eurasian children in Jabalpur with a good middle-class education, and they have been quite successful; more than 100 boys being taught. The Committee have since started a boarding-school for girls, and are desirous of opening a boy's boarding-school, in order to extend the benefits of education to the many children scattered throughout the Northern Division of the Central Provinces. They cannot do this until one school-house at least has been built. The annual subscriptions necessary for the maintenance of the schools are above Rs. 2,000; and as this amount is collected entirely from residents in Jabalpur, an appeal to persons outside is now being made for the building fund. The schools seem to be doing a large amount of good.—Pioneer.

THE MUDALIYAR.

The individual who is to furnish us with the necessary material for our "picture" on this occasion, is drawn from the ranks of the agriculturist population. Not that agriculture is the occupation to which the Mudaliyar takes most kindly, or that that particular calling is, in any way, typical of the class now under notice, but that, to the Hindu mind, the Sudra classes, as a whole (and the Mudaliyar is but a fraction of that whole) are most intimately associated with the "tilling of the ground," and that, therefore, it is from among such (the agriculturist) classes that we must make a selection that will serve, as we have said already, for a fair average specimen of the bulk of their community.

An agriculturist Mudaliyar, unlike his brethren in other walks of life, is almost invariably found in the Mofussil, and, even there, his home is in the more remote village rather than in the Kistba, as the district towns are called. To a homestead in such a locality, therefore, where the Mudaliyar can give his lands and other belongings the full benefit of his personal supervision, we must invite the reader to accompany us, if he wishes to see something of the home-life and every day occupations of this particular subdivision of Hindu Sudra society. In a narrow winding lane branching off from the bazaar street, which latter is the only one at all adapted, and that but poorly, for wheel traffic; along which you must step most carefully for fear of landing in a puddle of mud and filth of every description, in one of several buildings of the fashion in vogue with us from time immemorial, resides our friend the Mudaliyar. Opposite the house, on a vacant space of ground, in miserably thatched sheds erected around a spreading tamarind tree, are housed the draught cattle and milch kine and buffaloes belonging to the Mudaliyar, who is just now superintending the sweeping out of the cattle-shed, with a view to increasing the dimensions of an already formidably-sized manure-heap, with the foul effluvia arising wherefrom the air is being poisoned for yards around. The house itself is no very imposing structure, but to Hindu eyes, at any rate, it wears an air that unmistakably betokens the owner's being in comparatively comfortable circumstances of life. The Mudaliyar's daughter-in-law is busily engaged in besmearing the threshold and street pials with cowdung, after which they will be ornamented with the pretty diagrams in powdered chalk one so often sees native women making on the floor in front of their houses. Her husband, our Mudaliyar's son and heir, is performing his morning toilet at the extreme end of one of the pials, sputtering, spitting and clearing his throat with that grating sound that is as invariably the accompaniment of a genuine Hindu 'facewashing,' as the chombu (globular vessel) of polished brass, containing water at his elbow. Another daughter of the house is, probably, busy in the kitchen cooking a meal, or distributing the remains of the previous night's supper to such as may prefer a cold meal for breakfast. The Mudaliyar's "gude-wife," who is, of course, the presiding genius of the household, is still in bed, though wide awake, as we can not only hear her calling on "Siva, Siva," "Hara, Hara," or "Mahadeva" (all different names of the same deity) as she sneezes and yawns herself out of the dirty heavy piece of country sheeting that does duty for mattress, coverlet, "and warp" but we also observe her watching, lynx-eyed, the movements of the various younger members of the family. After despatching the bullocks to their work in the fields (which form the chief part of the family property), and the cows and buffaloes to pasture, after a bath in the neighbouring tank, and after a short visit to the village temple (for Vellalar people are devout worshippers of local deities, and staunch supporters of local religious institutions of every kind), the Mudaliyar, as he is styled par excellence in the household, to distinguish him from the younger, and of course subordinate members thereof, who have just the same right to the title, turns up in time for the morning meal. The majority of Vellalar Sudras are bigoted Saivas; and there is, therefore, worship performed to that god, before the business of eating commences. The worship is neither elaborate nor intricate in its details, the worshipper very often simply throwing a number of certain leaves and flowers (sacred to Siva) upon the Linga (or stone symbol by which the creative attributes of the deity are rudely represented) while he repeats one or more of the god's thousand names. The breakfast that follows this pūja (worship) does not, according to our notion of things, suffice to satisfy our physical wants, as the latter performance is supposed to do our spiritual ones, and it is therefore followed by the traditional siesta—except, indeed, on extraordinary occasions (such as a visit of the Collector or other officer) when it will be necessary for the Mudaliyar, and perhaps his sons, and sons-in-law to go out to attend to business. After the siesta, there may be another meal, then a stroll through the village, and finally a return home late in the evening to sup and turn into bed. This dull routine of life is often varied, however, by periodical festivals, and not unfrequently too, by domestic occurrences in the family. The celebration of one of the minor Hindu festivals in a village is a very different thing from the so-called worship that is performed at any of the great native shrines on such occasions as the Mohasira Ratri. Many of these former partake largely of the character of a household rejoicing. The Pongul feast, for instance, is identical with the "joy of the harvest." Rice of the year's crop is then cooked for the first time; and, in token of gratitude to the giver of that and all other things, is offered to the gods before being eaten by the worshippers. Then there is the native New Year's Day, when the whole house is whitewashed and cleaned out, when the housewife lays in her stock for the year "In pots and pans,

And brooms and fans."

There are also certain ceremonies at which the women alone are worshippers; but which make a pretty big hole in father's, husband's, and brother's purses, for the purchase of new cloths, and similar female 'never satisfiable' wants, and which are hailed with unlimited delight by the youngsters, to whom the idea of Vritam, as these ceremonies are called, is inseparably connected with the preparation of cakes and other highly palatable confections. Such is the ordinary run of life in a Native Indian (Sudra) Mudaliyar household. A man and wife, with children of all ages (some of them having children of their own), all living together in comparative harmony and almost unexceptional happiness, is perhaps an interesting, if not an edifying spectacle in these days when Anglicised forms of civilisation are sapping the very foundations of our whole social structure with but questionable changes. Domestic arrangements like this may be absurd and even improper in a general Western sense, and more particularly in a solid scientific point of view; but, in taking leave for the present of our subject, we would beg to express it as our deliberate and unhesitating conviction that modern civilisation (regarding the progress of which, we must confess, we are sick of hearing our fellow countrymen talk) has simply and literally nothing better, or even so good, to offer us in its stead.—Madras Mail.

Miscellaneous.

PONDICHERY.—The relief operations in Pondicherry were closed on Feb. 25 last, having been carried on since Dec. 17, 1876. The number of persons relieved was upwards of 7,000 a day, to whom 2,170,000 rations were distributed besides money and cloths.

CAMP OF EXERCISE.—It is rumoured that the Madras Government contemplate holding another "Camp of Exercise," in which some twenty-four regiments of infantry, cavalry, and artillery will take part, the locality selected being Palaveram.

THEATRICAL.—The 43rd Amateurs intend giving a performance at the College Hall early in April. One of the pieces selected for the entertainment being the celebrated nautical burlesque Black-eyed Susan; the Mail and Maggie is said also to be in preparation.

FRENCH NUNS.—Six European nuns, belonging to the French Mission, who arrived in India from Singapore by the French steamer Meinam, on March 29, left by Saturday evening's mail train for the Coimbatore Mission. They proceeded to Coimbatore, it is said, with a view of affording relief to the distressed famine-stricken poor of the district.

HIGH PRICES.—In Bangalore fowls and eggs in the local market are fetching fancy prices. One has to pay twelve and fourteen annas for a half-starved hen, and ten pises for an egg. The mutton is not the very best, and is selling at five annas a seer, and beef at three annas a pound, and the cry is—"No pasturage," the earth is completely parched, and fodder of the poorest kind only is procurable.

MORTUARY REGISTER.—The last published official mortuary return shows that there were 363 deaths in Madras from the 16th to the 22nd March, being 36 more than the average of the corresponding week for ten previous years. Of the deaths, 13 were from small-pox, 100 from fevers, 72 from dysentery, 12 from diarrhoea, and 171 from other diseases; and of those who died 3 were Europeans, 7 East Indians, 21 Native Christians, 62 Mahomedans, and 255 Hindus.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.—Mr. Lynsdale, an Agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, on the 29th March, at the Presidency Magistrates' Court, Black Town, before Mr. Campbell, charged three jutka drivers with cruelly ill-treating their ponies by using them when they had sores on their bodies. His worship convicted the defendants, and sentenced the first and second to pay a fine of two rupees each, and the third defendant to pay a fine of three rupees.

BANGALOR.—The Pioneer considers it a sign that distress in Bangalore is not so great as heretofore, that several of the girls attached to the Roman Catholic Foundling Institution have been claimed and removed by their parents. It shows, in the first place, that their parents are able now to support them; and, secondly, that the ryots, recovering from the effects of the famine, are on the lookout for wives, to replace those who were carried off by starvation and sickness. There are some four hundred children now in the Catholic Foundling Institution, most of whom are boys.

"IMPERIAL GAZETTEER."—According to the Mail, Mr. Lewis McIver, C.S., the Madras Sub-Editor of Mr. Hunter, in the compilation of the "Imperial Gazetteer," goes home for eighteen months on medical certificate; and is not clear who is to take the sub-editorial work during his absence. The Mail considers Mr. C. D. Maclean, Acting Sub Collector of Coimbatore, to be probably better qualified than most members of the Civil Service for the post, but is perplexed as to the chances of his acceptance of it if offered.

SUICIDE.—An inquest was held on the evening of the 27th March by Mr. P. D. Shaw, Deputy Coroner, at Washermanpettah, touching the death of a native man named Annamalai Moddely, and a female named Papanah, who had thrown themselves into a well. The former was an old man of 70 years of age, who had been suffering for a year from a large tumour on his throat. A few days ago he complained of the pain, but never threatened to destroy himself. The woman was suffering from a pain in her chest for four years, which gradually became worse. The deceased had often threatened to destroy herself. The jury returned a verdict that the death of the two parties was caused by their throwing themselves into a well, whereby they were drowned.

TESTIMONIAL TO DR. BALFOUR.—The Members of the Madras Apothecaries' Fund are about presenting Dr. E. G. Balfour, the late Surgeon-General, Indian Medical Department, with a testimonial in appreciation of the services rendered by him to the fund. The testimonial is in the form of a silver casket, which has been manufactured by Messrs. P. Orr and Sons with their usual good taste and style, and is 13½ inches in length, 3½ inches in depth, and 5 inches wide. The casket is lined with maroon velvet and satin, and the sides bear an embossed representation of a Hindoo procession proceeding from and returning to the temple at Conjevaram. The lid is a burnished piece of plate with a beaded border, and bears the following inscription:—"To Surgeon-Major E. G. Balfour, late Surgeon-General, Indian Medical Department, Madras Presidency, in grateful appreciation of the invaluable services rendered to the Madras Apothecaries' Fund, from the members, widows, and orphans of the institution."—Madras Mail, March 21.

STATION TALK.

CAMP DESSA, March 23.—H.E. Sir Richard Temple, Governor of Bombay, arrived here yesterday evening. The commanding officers of the different corps, with their staff and other officers of the station, assembled in full dress at the Brigadier General's bungalow, from which, accompanied by an escort of the 2nd Native Cavalry, they marched in the direction of "Bhoyan," a village about a mile and a-half on the road to Ahmedabad, to meet his Excellency. Near the village his Excellency received a salute of twenty-one guns from the Gaekwar, whose representative was present with his Highness's Contingent to welcome his Excellency. The people, who had assembled in great numbers near the village and the General's compound, were disappointed that they could not obtain a good sight of his Excellency, for it was dark when his near approach was heralded by the firing of the British salute from a detachment of battery that had been posted opposite the General's bungalow, and before the last gun was fired, his Excellency had proceeded into the compound, where the men of H.M.'s 2-15th Regiment presented arms, and the band performed. But the people's earnest desire to see the Governor, considering that his intended visit had been here a talk of some months, was gratified to the full when, after inspecting early this morning the regimental battery and cavalry lines, his Excellency, accompanied by the Brigadier-general and other officers, rode through the native bazaar. His Excellency, looking none the worse for his hard journey on horseback from Ahmedabad, salaamed good-naturedly to the people, who never had heard what a Governor was, much less seen one. From morning to noon Sir Richard Temple received visits from the Nawab of Radhanpur, a deputation of the Vazier of his Excellency the Dewan of Pahlampur and the Dewan's cousin, who have come here to invite Sir Richard Temple to his Excellency the Dewan's dominions, and the representative of the Gaekwar. At five p.m. his Excellency held a levee in the 18th N.I. Mess, where the European officers of the station and the native commissioned officers of the 18th N.I. and the 2nd L.C. were presented to him. After, his Excellency, accompanied by a considerable number of European and native officers, went to the Gaekwar's bungalow, in the Gaekwar's camp, about two miles from the British cantonment, where, in a durbar Sir Richard Temple presented the Delhi Banner, hitherto not given, to the Nawab of Radhanpur. Early to-morrow morning his Excellency proceeds to Mount Abo, where he will stay for two days, and most probably on the 26th will avail himself of the invitation to Pahlampur, where grand preparations are being made to give his Excellency a hearty welcome. It is not known whether his Excellency will return thence to Deesa, but there is greater probability of his proceeding direct to Ahmedabad. The visit of Sir Richard Temple is said to be connected with the plans about the removal of this cantonment. Those informed must no doubt have acquainted his Excellency with the sanitation, &c., of the camp, but in my humble opinion, which I mistake not is that of several doctors, the health of the people, both military and civil, will greatly improve, if the rubbish and refuse of the whole camp were not deposited in the bed of the river, which is not half a mile distant from the bazaar. Of course the Cantonment Fund has to make money out of this, which is sold as manure after rotting for about twelve months. But then the people have to pay too dearly with their health for it, and this money could be easily made just as well if some distant place were selected for the deposit. Besides in the very proximity of the river are built temporary latrines for the whole native population. The health of the camp some years ago, when its atmosphere was not contaminated with the horribly disgusting smell arising from the latrines and the heap of rubbish, was good. If the suggestion made were carried, I am quite sanguine Deesa would become as clean and healthy as before.

Miscellaneous.

THE "MAIKONG."—Some of the passengers wrecked last monsoon near Cape Guardafui in the Messagerie's steamer Maikong are about to try to recover from the French Company the value of the baggage and personal effects lost by them at that time.

BREACH OF PROMISE CASE.—On Thursday, April 4, Messrs. Ardaseer and Hormusjee, attorneys for Manockjee Limjee Manockjee, the defendant in the well-known Parsee breach of promise of marriage case, filed an appeal and deposited Rs. 500 as security for the respondent's costs of appeal against the decree of Mr. Justice Bayley, passed on the 7th ult. in favour of the plaintiff Goolbai, for Rs. 3,000 and costs as between attorney and client.

DISTRESS AT GOA.—According to latest accounts, it appears that distress still prevails at Goa. The grain crop this season is very small, and fears are entertained that the poorer classes will be the great sufferers. The Portuguese Government have directed the Collectors of different districts to adopt measures to mitigate the distress after ascertaining what quantity of grain will be reaped this season, and how much will be necessary for the use of the inhabitants.

THE LICENCE TAX.—Ahmedabad is now sending its petition to Parliament on the licence tax, and not satisfied with pointing out the injustice of the measure, the inhabitants propose that the Indian Government should curtail its expenditure by reducing the pay of the officials under Government, such pay being in their estimation much too high for the amount and kind of work done per month. They suggest that Government should reduce all salaries above Rs. 500 per month by 10 per cent. or 20 per cent., and that certain unnecessary highly-paid posts might, without loss to the public at large, be entirely abolished.

THE THAKUR of Bhaonagar was to ascend the throne on the 5th of April, and arrangements for the great ceremony were being rapidly carried forward on the departure of the mail. Numerous invitations to politicals, Darbar officers, and others have been sent out, and a large concourse is expected. Various forms of entertainment have been decided on, one of which being no less, they say, than Wilson's great Circus. The rejoicings are likely to extend over at least two days. The kindly-hearted young prince deserves a good demonstration to do him honour on such an important and joyous occasion.

PRISON LABOUR AT BARSEE.—Dr. Cruickshank, Inspector-General of Prisons, applied to the Government of Bombay for sanction for employing about 1,200 prisoners from the jails at Yerrowda, Poona, Sholapore, Tanna, and Bombay on the irrigation work now going on at Barsee. Government have sanctioned the proposal, and have directed that sheds should be erected for the prisoners. It has also been directed that proper precautions should be taken for preserving the health of the prisoners, and that they should be sent to the nearest jail when sick. We trust that there will not be so much sickness among the prisoners at Barsee as at the Nera Canal, and that the authorities will keep strict watch upon the wholesomeness of the water and food which the prisoners consume.—Daily Telegraph and Deccan Herald, March 29.

DRAINAGE.—The Bombay Town Council at their meeting on Tuesday had the subject of the new drainage scheme under consideration, the result of their deliberations being the adoption of a motion made by Colonel Hancock to recommend the immediate commencement and vigorous prosecution of the proposed works, together with the Bunderwada Reservoirs. Government are to be solicited to grant the necessary loan, and the Municipal Commissioner will prepare a financial statement upon the assumption that the drainage works be begun at once and finished within three years. Colonel Hancock intimated that pressure might be felt in a year or two—he thought more probably in 1882—but their position financially was strong enough to tide over it. The Chairman (Dr. Blaney), in the course of the discussion, mentioned that upon sanitary grounds there never was a period during his experience when the proposed works were more needed than at present.

EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT.—We have received—says the Bombay Times—a long and admirable letter from "A University Man" upon the Educational Department, which, for reasons that the writer may not improbably guess, we are unable to publish in extenso. What he says, however, about reforms in the department may be dissevered from the context:—"It is a common subject of remark that since the days of Mr. Peile, new combinations of circumstances have arisen, which require to be met with adequate reforms. But the general impression at present is that the difficulties have been either avoided or met in a way that has not given general satisfaction. However this may be, I may mention that some of these difficulties are the grading of the lower educational service; the removal of inequalities in the emoluments of subordinate officers serving in different districts but performing the same kind of work; the admission of qualified natives to the graded ranks of the higher educational service, which, by the way, as far as the professoriate of Elphinstone College is concerned, was one of the conditions in the deed of gift by which a large sum of money was given to Government by charitable gentlemen of Bombay for the purpose of founding Elphinstone College; the relations between the University and the Educational Department; the regular promotion of subordinate Educational officers of proved merit to similar or higher posts in other departments; the question of opening Provincial Colleges, and the amelioration generally of the status of educated natives."

OLD BOMBAY.—Mr. Talboys Wheeler in his "Early Records of British India" places the Indian public under a new debt of gratitude. We have often had to acknowledge the picturesque detail and historic skill with which he has clothed the dry bones of the past. But here he gives the pith, or indeed the very words, of the original record he has elsewhere treated so successfully, and as a result we have in one handy volume a tolerably comprehensive collection of original authorities, as found in the Government Records, and the works of old travellers, from the earliest periods down to the rise of British power in India. In other words, we have a miniature copy of those series of historical publications at home, such as the Rolls, Camden and Surtees Series, which are doing so much to render English history really comprehensible. The work before us is useful and interesting rather than ambitious, and is, we trust, only the pioneer of a long series in which the various Governments might well take a pecuniary risk. The section devoted to Calcutta contains numerous extracts from the records of the Home Department, while as regards Madras the compiler had access to the old records of the commercial period, illustrating the primitive system of administration, the old English life within the walls of Fort St. George and Black Town, and the relations between the English and the natives. Yet Bombay is richer than either Presidency in records relating to the earlier period of the English occupation, and tons of documents, invaluable to the student and historian, lie rotting in our Secretariat, unknown, at all events, if not quite uncared for. Some years ago the local Government did appoint a well-known scholar to the congenial task of editing such selections as were best worth preservation. But the Supreme Government were shocked at the extravagance, and cancelled the appointment. This is a matter into which Mr. Wheeler might well inquire. He is a laborious student; and is, we should imagine, almost perfect in the really difficult art of good compilation. The volume before us is a good test of his powers, and we probably give it the justest praise when we endorse his own words:—"The labour which has been spent upon this volume is beyond all calculation. It cannot be judged by the results, but only from the voluminous records which have been carefully searched, but yielded nothing. The time expended, however, will never be regretted, should it appear that the information now collected from original or half-forgotten sources has helped to throw more light upon the rise of British power in India."—Times of India.

THE GRAND ORIENTAL HOTEL.

The shareholders of the company owning this new undertaking, have good reason to congratulate themselves on the progress made with the building, which now rears its lofty roof far above all surrounding objects within or near the fort. So long as little more than the scaffolding was visible, the beholder was not impressed with any idea of special magnitude, but now that the massive sides and elegant front in solid brick, are seen sixty-five feet high, it is apparent that the building is entitled to a place far above its fellows. So likewise when standing within the four walls of the enormous dining-hall, the largest and the loftiest in Ceylon certainly, and probably anywhere to the eastward of Suez, it is impossible to deny that so far as ample space and excellence of design and arrangements for free ventilation are concerned, everything has been done to render the building a success. Of the numerous suites of bedrooms, of the private dining-room, of the ladies' sitting-room, the elevated smoking and look out rooms, it is as yet too early to form an accurate idea; but the work of flooring and building up partition walls is going rapidly forward, and in a month or two more the visitor will be better able to form an idea of the ample accommodation and many comforts that will be provided in the "Grand Oriental Hotel." There is ample provision as regards space and ventilation in the kitchen, where two sets of patent-cooking apparatus will be arranged. The cellars and storage room, consisting of some score or two of arched brick chambers, beneath the basement floor, promise to be more than sufficient for all the future requirements of the establishment. A patent lift worked by steam will be a welcome addition to the many comforts of the establishment. Nor must we omit to mention a spacious billiard-room on the north side of the building on the basement floor, and which is approached by a private entrance apart from the general body of the hotel. So far as it is possible to form an opinion at its present state, the building seems admirably adapted to provide comfortable and spacious accommodation for a large number of guests. It is expected to be habitable by the end of the present year, and will probably be opened for business shortly after, ready for the large influx of passengers that must follow the utilisation of the breakwater.—Ceylon Times.

JYMKANA.—Active preparations are being made at Nuwara Eliya for the coming Jymkana, which promises to be a brilliant success.

Miscellaneous.

GALLE.—The strength of the garrison at Galle has been weakened by the departure from that place for Colombo of one company of the 57th Regiment.

COLOMBO MUNICIPALITY.—According to the official accounts published by the Colombo Municipality, the total expenditure last year amounted to Rs. 464,000, and was covered by the revenue from local taxation.

THE GOVERNOR.—His Excellency the Governor has left Nuwara Eliya on a visit to Badulla, where small-pox is raging, and where, according to the accounts that have reached us, but little precaution has been taken to prevent its spread. Sir James Longden has since gone on to Ella, and proceeded thence to Happutale to inspect the railway trace.

SAVINGS BANK.—From the report presented at the annual meeting of the Ceylon Savings Bank, on Saturday, we gather that the position of the institution is eminently satisfactory. The rate of interest on deposits for the ensuing year was fixed at 6 per cent. on sums of Rs. 1,000 and under, and 5 per cent. on sums exceeding that amount.

COFFEE.—Coffee shipments to date show a falling off, as compared with last year's exports, of 102,000 cwts.; and as Colombo stores are mostly empty, the difference must continue to increase. Reports from the districts are, however, favourable, and prospects are described as excellent in most of the planting localities.

MEN-OF-WAR.—Another very uneventful week, the monotony of which has only been broken by the arrival of a Brazilian and an American man-of-war. The Brazilian vessel has displayed commendable economy in refraining from wasting powder to salute the fort; but the United States craft fired the usual salvo, and the fort returned the compliment. The officers of both vessels have been the guests of the garrison during their stay.

CEYLON WEATHER.—The weather, which has been exceedingly hot in the low country, is all that could be desired for the coffee districts, where the blossom, on which we recently reported, set well, and is likely, with the present weather, to be succeeded by another good show in April. These remarks refer especially to the districts south of Kandy; but on the north side the weather is very favourable, and good blossoms are now making their appearance in all directions.

A NEW POET.

"Constance," a poem written by an Anglo-Indian, and having its scene laid in the Himalayas, seems to claim a brief notice, as it has been spoken well of elsewhere. The poet is fond of describing hill scenery; and this he does with some force, though not always gracefully; as when he writes—

"There hangs the avalanche. The glacier there
In seas of icy slobber creeps for ay."

The plot, however, is the remarkable thing about "Constance." Miss Constance de Walden is a young lady living, just before the Mutiny, at some hill station. She is in love, after a dainty and surprisingly modest fashion, with Vernon, the hero. Shortly after the reader's introduction to her, as she lies "on Himala's flowery breast reclined," her life is saved by the villain of the story, St. Clair—whom she at once captivates. St. Clair's admiration is not returned; indeed, Miss de Walden seems to share the author's dislike for "this spawn of hell," as St. Clair is uncivilly called. St. Clair—father had been turned out of an estate by the Indian Government; and his son, vowing vengeance, laid plans for a great revolt; the Southal rising, the Sepoy mutiny, and a Russian invasion all forming part of his comprehensive programme. The young man's attempts to

"Stir Sedition's venom festered dregs
And drop, like Cockatrice, strife's dragon eggs," are described with much circumstance. At one time he meets on a hill peak a Goorkha, a Sikh, and a Mahratta, and with them devises the great coup. Vernon, however, is a secret witness of the meeting; the plot bursts while it is hardly ripe; there is an engagement, in which both Vernon and St. Clair take part, in the "Pass of Peril." Miss de Walden who, however captivating, is evidently strong-minded, is a spectator. A storm of thunder and lightning rages at the time:—but the scene shall be described in the poet's own words:—

And simultaneous with the flash there fell
A peal terrific as the volu'd knell
Of thunders bellowing through the womb of Hell.
Seem'd to her mind, daz'd, wilder'd and distraught
By one terrific, all-absorbing thought;
That thund'rous peal, that flood of fiery glare,
Gushed from the carbine of the dire St. Clair.
And, when her eye, recovering from the shock,
In shuddering dread resought the fateful rock:
Vernon, St. Clair, the mountain band were gone.

The dire St. Clair, fortunately, is quite done for; but Vernon, his rival, turns up a little later, and finally marries Miss de Walden. The rhyming of this "poem" is a shade better than the plot, perhaps, but this is a favourable way of looking at it.—Pioneer.

Home.

THE Academy states that Rajendralala Mitra, who last year was deputed by Government to examine and report on the ancient remains of Buddha Gaya, has in the press a large volume on the antiquities discovered on the spot. The title will be "The Hermitage of Sakya Buddha."

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Teheran has sailed for Bombay with £113,000, £70,000 being in bar gold, £30,000 in gold coin, and £13,000 in bar silver. The Mondogo has left for Brazil and the River Plate with £50,541 in sovereigns.

PROFESSOR PEPPER, at whose School of Chemistry and Physical Science, in Tunbridge Wells, it was recently announced that pupils would be received with reference to the Military and Civil Service Examinations as well as other objects, re-appeared at the Polytechnic Institution on the 20th inst. The learned Professor's lecture was on the "Chemistry of the Sun," with Spectrum Analysis Experiments, and a novel application of the attractive Ghost Illusion.

TELEGRAPH ROUTES TO INDIA.—We notice that in the Indian section of the Society of Arts an interesting paper is to be read on Friday evening next, May 3, by Major Bateman-Champain, R.E., on "The Telegraph Routes between England and India." The chair will be taken at eight P.M. by Lord William Hay. On Friday, the 17th, Mr. Juland Danvers is to lecture on "Agriculture in India."

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £50,000 in bills on India were received on April 24 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £373,800, at an average rate of 1s. 8'651d.; and to Bombay, £126,200, at an average rate of 1s. 8'649d. Tenders on both presidencies at 1s. 8'gd. will receive about 5 per cent., those above that price in full. The whole of the amount advertised for tender has been again got rid of, and as applicants received only a small percentage of what they applied for at the above rate, the results of the present allotment are therefore rather more favourable than was the case last week.

COLONEL THE HON. J. C. STANLEY.—This gentleman, who was the second son of Edward John, second Lord Stanley of Alderley, by the Hon. Henrietta Maria, daughter of Henry Augustus, thirteenth Viscount Dillon, and heir presumptive to his brother, Lord Stanley of Alderley, has just died. He had been ill only a few weeks, and his death has been a great shock to the members of the family. The late Colonel Stanley was formerly in the Grenadier Guards, and born Sept. 30, 1837. He served with his regiment during the Crimean war, and subsequently was made aide-de-camp to his Excellency Lord Canning, the Governor-General of India.

THE WOMEN OF INDIA.—The annual meeting of the Indian Female Normal School and Instruction Society was held on the 24th inst., in St. George's-hall, Langham-place, Mr. A. Beattie presiding. The object of the society is to bring the knowledge of the Bible within the reach of the women of India by training Indian-born teachers in schools and Zenanas, sending out English ladies to teach in these places and lady medical missionaries, and by employing native Bible-women to read the Scriptures to their countrymen. The report stated that in Madras the Normal School of Eurasian Teachers has been opened, and that the Napier-park Girls' School has been very prosperous. At Masulipatam, Palamcottah, and other places in Southern India the work has been most successful. In Northern India the eight missionaries who were sent out last year arrived safely at Calcutta, and the work there is actively progressing. The year's receipts amounted to £12,334, and the expenditure to £14,261, leaving a deficiency of £1,926, towards which the balance in hand at the commencement of the year amounted to £1,536, thus making an actual deficiency of £390. The report was adopted.

THE HIBBERT LECTURES.—On Thursday the opening discourse of the first series of seven lectures on "The Origin and Growth of Religion, as Illustrated by the Religions of India" was delivered by Professor F. Max Müller, M.A., of Oxford. With the sanction of the authorities it was read, as will be the rest, in the Chapter House of Westminster Abbey, both morning and evening, and each time before a large audience, including dignitaries and other clergy of the Established Church, and eminent Nonconformist divines of various persuasions. Among those present to hear Professor Max Müller on one or other of the two occasions may be named the Bishop of Adelaide, the Dean of Westminster, Canon Farrar and Duckworth, the Rev. Dr. Martineau, Messrs. Robert Cust, A. J. Ellis, W. S. W. Vaux, M.A., Moncreu Conway, T. G. Irving, C.E., and of the Hibbert trustees—Mr. Jerom Murch, of Cranwells near Bath, writer of the memoir of the founder of the Trust; his son, Mr. J. C. Murch; Messrs. W. P. Price, James Heywood, F.R.S., P. H. Laurence, C. J. Thomas, and T. Warren, with the Secretary to the Trust, Mr. Percy Lawford. It deserves remark that at least one-half the audience were ladies, several being titled. Of the 1,500 ticket-holders about one-tenth are clergymen. The lecturer was warmly cheered both morning and evening on rising and on resuming his seat.

DEATH OF GENERAL J. CAMPBELL.—General Sir John Campbell, C.B., K.C.S.I., died on Monday at Edinburgh in his seventy-seventh year. He entered the Madras army in 1820, and in 1834, according to officials' despatches, displayed "active zeal, intrepidity, and judgment" in dealing with the savage tribes in Orissa known as the Circars. In 1836 he was specially mentioned by the Chief Commissioner of the Madras Presidency for an affair at Oodindherry, when, "gallantly charging the rebels with his little band of six troopers, he killed ten men and took one prisoner," a feat which so intimidated the natives that they never afterwards ventured to show themselves in any numbers. In 1837 he was appointed Principal Assistant to the Commissioner in Goomsur, took part in the severe campaign against the Khond tribes, and was employed in 1841 in suppressing human sacrifices in the Orissa Hills. In 1842 he went with his regiment, the 41st, to China, and during that expedition so distinguished himself as to attain the rank of lieutenant-colonel and the third class of the Order of the Bath. In 1847 the Marquis of Tweeddale, Governor of Madras, recommended Colonel Campbell as agent in Khond, where the practice of human sacrifice had been restored; and he commanded the Goomsur Expedition, which utterly put a stop to human sacrifice and to infanticide among the Soorada tribes. Between 1837 and 1854 he was instrumental in rescuing 1,506 men and women who had been destined for sacrifice. Colonel Campbell returned home in 1854, was created a Knight Commander of the Star of India in 1869, and attained the rank of General in 1872.

NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA (LIMITED).—The annual general meeting of the shareholders of the National Bank of India (Limited) was held on the 23rd inst., at the City Terminus Hotel. Mr. R. O. Campbell, the chairman, presided, and in moving the adoption of the report, drew attention to the balance-sheet, and said they had had a very large turn over of money and a very moderate margin of profit on their exchange operations. They had not been free from loss in realising their collateral securities for the payment of their bills of exchange, but they had not had any great loss. Their general policy had been to work closely, avoid speculative business, secure their returns when they could do so at a reasonable profit, and encourage local business at their branches as far as it could be done with safety. In this way they had made a profit which, though not large, they hoped would be considered satisfactory.—Mr. John Borradaile having seconded the motion, some discussion followed, in the course of which complaint was made of the meagre information given in the accounts, and of a certain number of persons who enjoyed the privilege of making remittances from India to London at exceptionally favourable rates. An amendment was moved to the report that the directors should state the circumstances under which certain persons enjoyed this privilege. The Chairman, in reply, said they had been advised that they could not discontinue the arrangement referred to either in fairness or honour. The accounts were published in the customary form. Mr. R. P. Harrison, in further reply, said members of the Bengal Civil Service, after a specific period of service, were entitled to an annuity of £1,000 if they chose to receive it in England, or 10,666 rupees if payable in Calcutta. The Bank of Bengal considered it would be advantageous if they could induce members who had retired or were retiring from the service to accept from Messrs. Coutts their annuity, payable in London at a fixed rate of exchange at 1s. 11½d. The bank, however, was not allowed to continue this arrangement by the Secretary of State, who contended that it was entering on exchange business. On that the National Bank of India, supposing at the time it would be a good arrangement, entered into it. There were now eight annuitants. The amendment was withdrawn, but the directors subsequently agreed to take counsel's opinion on the matter. A further amendment to the effect that the report lay on the table till a statement of income and expenditure for 1877 be furnished to the shareholders was lost, and ultimately the report was adopted. A discussion followed as to granting a pension of £200 a-year to Mr. Fitzwilliam, a retiring director, and the board finally decided to pay it themselves.

RED BOOK FOR SERGEANTS.
By W. BRIGHT, Colour-Sergeant, 37th Middlesex R.V.

* Includes new System of Attack, Musketry Regulations, and other Recent Alterations.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Under this title, Colour-Sergeant Bright, of the 37th Middlesex R.V., has prepared an elaborate series of 'Test Questions' in all the matters in which a Sergeant of Volunteer Infantry has to be examined for his Certificate. The questions are very well framed, and very complete. Except in a very few instances, the answers are not given, but each question is followed by a reference to the Field Exercise, or the Rifle Exercises, from which the student will gain the information necessary to frame the answer. The book is interleaved with blank paper, so that the answers, when discovered, may be written out. Altogether the scheme is a very ingenious one, and we commend the new 'Red Book' to all Sergeants or intending Sergeants. We should add that the book contains a useful Appendix on certain points of military etiquette with which all Volunteers ought to be acquainted."—Volunteer Service Gazette, March 2, 1878.

"The object of this work is to enable a candidate for promotion to the rank of Sergeant in the Volunteer Infantry to acquire by heart a thorough knowledge of the subjects of his examination. . . . The questions are clearly framed, and . . . a very good method has been adopted for impressing the subject on the memory. A simple, handy book of the sort was much wanted, and the want has been supplied."—Broad Arrow, March 2, 1878.

"In this useful little manual of fifty-eight pages Mr. Bright has succeeded in making a 'royal road' for those members of the Volunteer Force who may desire to qualify themselves for the rank of Sergeant. . . . The 'Red Book for Sergeants' is a concise and practical guide, and should be in the hands of every Volunteer in the Kingdom."—Weekly Dispatch, March 10, 1878.

"The work is very carefully compiled and neatly got up, and seems well adapted for the end in view. . . . This 'Red Book' takes a comprehensive view of what all Volunteers, commissioned or non-commissioned, should know, and cannot fail to be of great value to all ranks of the Service. Some very useful information is given in an Appendix."—Military Record and Volunteer News, March 13, 1878.

"A compact shilling 'Red Book for Sergeants' appears very opportunely, as Volunteers are turning their thoughts to active service. . . . A most useful guide for Volunteers."—Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper, March 23, 1878.

OPINIONS OF VOLUNTEER OFFICERS.

The following is a copy of a letter received from Lieutenant-Colonel C. E. HOWARD VINCENT, Commanding Central London Rifle Rangers (4th Middlesex), President of the Volunteer Conference, and late of the 23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers:—

"Lieutenant-Colonel Howard Vincent has read with great interest the 'Red Book for Sergeants,' compiled by Colour-Sergeant Bright, of the 37th Middlesex. The questions have been very carefully framed, and there can be no doubt that writing out the answers to them will impress the duties of Sergeants more on their memories than any other system. The publication of this book affords additional evidence of the successful zeal with which the Non-commissioned Officers of Volunteers apply themselves to their military duties—to the great gain of the entire Force.—Feb. 21, 1878."

One Officer (a Major) writes:—
"I have no hesitation in expressing my opinion that it should be in the hands of every Non-commissioned Officer in the Service."

Another (a Captain) writes:—
"It is likely to be of service not only to Non-commissioned, but all ranks in the Volunteer Service."

Similar approbatory letters have also been received from many other Officers of the Volunteer Force.

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,
C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of the rices. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employees who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with. It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. . . . The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Muhammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most cursory reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him a patient hearing on points the most open to controversy."—Allen's Indian Mail.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligencer.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.
 Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

Summary and Review.

Our latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, April 15; Allahabad and Madras, April 13; Calcutta, April 12.

THE estimated famine expenditure in Madras from the beginning of April till the close of the famine, is fifty lakhs of rupees, and in Maisur (where no revival of acute distress is expected) ten lakhs and thirty-six thousand, depending, however, on a seasonable rainfall in June. The distress in the North-West Provinces and Oudh is thought to be diminishing somewhat during the harvest; but prices remain high. Improvement is especially marked in Bareilly. According to the Pioneer, the importance of the Surat affair has been exaggerated, and is purely local. The Raja of Suket has been formally deposed by the Government of India.

FROM a Lucknow paper it appears that the public distress has abated sufficiently to admit of the stoppage of all relief works and closing of district-poor houses. There is, however, apprehension expressed that recourse to these means of alleviating misery may again become necessary. The following we quote from the Times of India as regards Kashmir, where the famine is reported to be very severe:—"Thousands of people are crowding into British territory, where the authorities are doing all in their power to alleviate the distress. Many deaths from starvation have occurred amongst the fugitives, who have just reached the border line to die. The Maharajah has sent 4,000 maunds of rice to the relief of the people in the Jhelum Valley, and has despatched an officer to Rawal Pindee to buy up grain and forward it to the valley. He has also ordered that the Murree route be put into thorough good order—thus giving work to a large number of destitute people, who are to be paid for their labour in grain."

REPORTS from the Patna division are stated to be by no means satisfactory. Rain is urgently wanted in the Sarun district; in Shahabad the rabi has been greatly damaged by caterpillars and blight; in the Patna district pulses have been almost wholly destroyed, and gram and linseed partly. In another part of Bengal, Puri and Orissa, the people are said to be feeling severely the dearness of rice; whilst exportation to Madras still continues.

THE Pioneer states that Mr. Horace Cockerell will be confirmed in the appointment of Secretary to the Government of Bengal in the Judicial and Political Department, rendered vacant by Mr. Steuart Bayley's transfer to the Home Office; that Mr. Cordery would officiate as Secretary to Government in the Panjab, in lieu of Mr. Lepel Griffin, going home; that Messrs. Macdonald and Prinsep would be confirmed in the Calcutta High Court; that Messrs. Tottenham and A. T. Maclean would be acting Judges in the vacancies caused by the absence of Messrs. Birch and Morris; that Mulavi Amir Husain would be appointed to the Bengal Legislative Council; that Mr. A. C. Lyall was to assume charge of the Foreign Office on the 13th April; and that General Strachey arrived in Simla on the 13th April.

WE have received a pamphlet entitled the "Full Report of a Public Meeting held at the Town Hall of Calcutta on the 2nd March, 1878, regarding Indian Expenditure and Taxation." It is printed at the Englishman Press in Calcutta, and contains more than twenty-five pages of closely-printed matter in double columns. The meeting is one to which we have before referred, but the form in which it is now chronicled for review and criticism is too suggestive to be passed over without comment. That particular kind of education which has produced from the lips of natives of India speeches on the model, and up to the average mark of platform oratory at home; that particular capacity which enables a pupil to turn to account his acquirements in a foreign tongue and foreign ideas; and that particular channel into which the thoughts of the educated Indian are turned for the display of his knowledge; all these points are well illustrated in the pamphlet before us. In now republishing the bare Resolutions passed, we purpose immediately reverting to the subject in a fuller and more conspicuous manner.

This is the first Resolution, moved by Rajah Digambar Mitra, and seconded by Maharajah Narendra Krishna:—

That, in the deliberate opinion of this meeting, the excessive poverty of the mass of the population is the chief cause of the widespread suffering which results from periodical drought and scarcity; and that it is imperatively necessary, therefore, that the growing demand upon the Indian Exchequer for the ordinary wants of the State and for insurance against famine should be provided by judicious retrenchments and economical administration, without permanently adding to the burdens of the people by further heavy taxation.

THE second resolution, moved by the Honorable Kristodas Pal, and seconded by Babu Jaikissen Mukerji:—

That it is apparent from the published statements and opinions of official and other authorities, that without any sacrifice of efficiency, great economy is practicable in Home Military charges and the local army expenditure of India, and that in the opinion of this meeting the principle of joint partnership, on which the Home Military charges of this country are apportioned between it and England, is opposed to law and equity.

THE third resolution, moved by Babu Surendranath Banerjee, and seconded by Babu Damodar De Burmon:—

That the enormous outlay on public works of all kinds since 1860-61 without adequate returns and commensurate benefits in many cases, has greatly strained the financial resources of the Indian empire; and that reason able and judicious economy in this as well as other branches of public expenditure is, in the opinion of this meeting, calculated to bring about the desired equilibrium between income and expenditure. Suffice it to add that all these were put and carried, it appears, unanimously. The two next and last resolutions relate to a petition to the Houses of Parliament, of which a brief analysis will be comprehended in our forthcoming remarks on the general question.

If the opinion of the local paper, mentioned by the Times of India, be correct, as we have little doubt it is one based on experience, the attention of governing authorities might be given with advantage to arrest the evil here described :—

The Nyaya Prakash of Surat thinks that the local outbreaks of cholera are owing to the extensive sale of damaged grain in the bazaars. The grain merchants are in the habit, it appears, of storing grain in large quantities in pits, which imparts to it the most unwholesome and dangerous qualities. This plan is had recourse to in years of plenty, when the cupidity of the owners prompts them to keep grain out of sight in this manner, till a time of scarcity affords the opportunity of reaping a golden harvest by converting the secreted grain into money.

THE retirement of Mr. Kemp, the so-called father of the Bengal Civil Service, to which we have referred elsewhere in the usual chronicle of passing events, is an example of a professional career extending over nearly half a century. Out of more than forty-six years' service, more than forty-five had been spent by this gentleman on duty ; and we feel pleasure in quoting the Pioneer's estimate of his personal qualities, that they "were such as to save him from the opprobrium which might have been expected to attach to a man who so long obstructed promotion." Truly does our contemporary add : "it would be difficult to accord higher praise."

ACCORDING to the Times of India, certain inhabitants of Bikanir have petitioned the Government for annexation of their territory to the British Dominions. They allege that the state of the country is verging on anarchy, and that a body of the Raja's troops, deputed to levy certain dues claimed by the Raja from the Zemindars of Mahesur, some time since entered the village in question and killed nine persons, including the Zemindars themselves and three of their women—besides wounding fifteen others, all of whom are mentioned by name in the petition.

THE same telegram mentions the report that the Indian Government had sanctioned a scheme for the construction of light railways in the North-West, the estimated cost of which will be two millions and a-half, the expenditure being distributed over a considerable numbers of years—fifteen lacks this year, and thirty-seven the next, and each succeeding year till the series of lines is completed.

BEFORE going to press, we are favoured with the Monday telegram of the Times, which, though devoid of general interest, acquaints us with the circumstance that the appeal of the Puri Raja would be heard this day in Calcutta before a special High Court Bench, consisting of the Chief Justice and two puisne judges. The trial, we are told, has created a profound sensation in Orissa, owing to the special sanctity both of the accused and his victim. And it is worthy of remark that the assessors were for acquitting the Raja ; although the recorded conviction and sentence to transportation for life showed the Judge to be of a contrary opinion. Doubtless, the result of the appeal will be wired home shortly. Meanwhile, the statement that the appellant "is only twenty-two years of age, and is said to have hitherto led a blameless life," will give rise to some speculation on relative standards of morality.

WE read that his Highness Takht-Singhji, whose minority terminated on April 4, was installed the next morning on the Bhaonagar gadi by the Political Agent with great ceremony in darbar. After Colonel Parr had handed the Royal seal to his Highness, Mr. Peile delivered an eloquent address, to which the Thakur Sahib replied, thanking the British Government. The whole town is decked out most gaily. Great rejoicing prevails among the people. His Highness commemorated his installation by giving one lakh of rupees to the Rajkumar College, and also granting Rs. 15,000 as nuzzur towards famine relief.

By a paragraph in the supplement to the Friend of India and statement we observe that Maharajah Sir Run Uddeep Singh Rana, Bahadur, the present Prime Minister of Nepal, appears to be taking a good deal of interest in educational matters. The subject was neglected by Sir Jung Bahadur, but the present Prime Minister is said to aim at the establishment of a college that may send up students to the Calcutta University. At present there are two schools at Khatmandu entirely supported by Government—a Sanskrit school and an Anglo-Sanskrit school. The former is conducted in the old fashion, but the Anglo-Sanskrit school is the Maharajah's pet institution. Here education is imparted in English, while Sanskrit is taught as a second language. Some of its students are going up for the next entrance examination of the Calcutta University. The number of boys attending the English school has risen to seventy within a year.

SPECIAL reason has been found why the memory of the lamented and eminent architect, Sir Gilbert Scott, should be held in respect by the citizens of Bombay. We learn, from the Press in that Presidency, that the deceased took the greatest interest in the Bombay University Library Tower, and that the officers in the Public Works Department were in the habit of sending him home, up to the time of his death, photographs denoting the progress of the structure. It is also mentioned that he had been heard to say "it was one of the desires of his life that he might live to see how that noble tower would look after its completion."

A THREATENING telegram, dated Pera, the 2nd May, appeared in the papers of the 3rd idem, to the effect that General Tchernayeff had been appointed to the command of an Indian expeditionary column, consisting of 50,000 men, now being formed near Orenburg. By way of adding to its significance, the destination of this formidable army was stated to be Kabul. The above telegram will, however, be better understood in connection with a statement made in the National Journal of Berlin, that a plan for the invasion of India had been submitted by General Tchernayeff to the Emperor Alexander, and had received the approval of the council of officers to whom his Imperial Majesty had referred it.

MAJOR-GENERAL FERDINAND WHITTINGHAM, C.B., whose death on April 28 we regret to notify in the week's obituary, was the second son of the late Sir Stamford Whittingham, K.C.B. (a distinguished Peninsular Officer, and, at the close of his career, Commander-in-Chief at Madras) ; his dates of promotions are as follows :—Ensign, Nov. 2, 1832 ; Lieutenant, Feb. 19, 1836 ; Captain, April 30, 1841 ; Brevet Major, Dec. 23, 1842 ; Major, Oct. 1, 1847 ; Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel, June 20, 1854 ; Lieutenant-Colonel, Aug. 29, 1856 ; Colonel, Oct. 26, 1858 ; Major-General, April 7, 1865. Major-General Whittingham joined the Chinese Expeditionary Force in the end of 1841, reaching Hong Kong in November. He served as Aide-de-Camp to Sir Hugh Gough throughout the operations of 1842 (Medal), and was present at Segoan, Chapoo, Woosung, Shanghai, and Chin Kiang Foo.

THE resolution of the Government of India in the Financial Department, republished in the Gazette of the 18th March last, is a clear and comprehensive paper, which merits close consideration. As it has been summarised and reviewed elsewhere, rather in its general form than with reference to particular points, we take occasion to select three subjects of interest to which it refers. Firstly, We learn that the net cost of the famine will probably be "about nine-and-three quarters millions sterling," of which nearly seven-eighths are debitable to Madras ; that before the commencement of the famine "the finances of India might be considered to be in a condition of equilibrium ;" and that the principle having been admitted and put in practice, to secure "in years of prosperity a substantial surplus of revenue over expenditure," whereby Government can meet the charges thrown upon it in years of famine, it has become necessary to look for additional resources to supply inevitable deficiencies. The prospect is not the less dark because Sir John Strachey's careful examination of the accounts during the seven years preceding 1877-78 had resulted in the discovery that "excluding the cost of famine relief, the Government had just managed to pay its way." But Governments are not individuals ; and we are thankful not to have to compare this position with that of a man contriving, by rigid economy, to live within his income, and suddenly called upon to provide for relatives or dependents whom he had before considered capable of working out an independent livelihood.

Two ways of meeting the difficulty presented are obvious. Reduction of expenditure and imposition of new taxes. In either case delicacy of treatment is required with discrimination, but the first question may belong rather to the Financier, and the second to the Statesman. One is in some sort a matter of machinery, to be judged by professional skill; the other has to do with men and should be committed to one who knows human wants and sympathies. In the present case reduction is confined to indirect measures, and is discussed in a somewhat negative sense. It cannot naturally be expected in the charges for Productive Public Works, because these include the more important proposals entertained for "protecting the country against the consequences of drought and famine." It is talked of as having been applied successfully to the army up to 1875-76; but since that year there has been a rise in military charges, and a scheme of decrease might at this hour be inopportune. With regard to taxation, destined to fall partly on the trading and partly on agricultural classes, the Licence Tax is estimated to bring in about £700,000 and the addition to Local Rates about £500,000 a year. The last is imposed in the provinces of Northern India and Bengal alone; but an increase to the Salt Tax had, irrespectively of provisions against possible famine, been held expedient for Madras and Bombay "in order to carry out the long-declared policy of the Government in regard to the equalisation of the salt duties throughout India." To the £1,200,000 derived from the Licence Tax and Local Rates, £400,000 are added as a contemplated gain "by the extension of provincial responsibility." We have thus a total of £1,600,000.

THREE paragraphs we quote from the Gazette in extenso; they are concise, and express the actual situation:—

Although it is thus confidently expected that the new taxation will enable the Government to fulfil, in the coming year, its pledge to devote £1,500,000 to the relief and prevention of Famine, it is clear that the financial position is not such as to justify at the present time new measures which would involve considerable reductions in any great branch of the existing revenue. It is true that all those branches of revenues are prosperous, but there are several causes which render caution obligatory on the part of the Government.

The extreme pressure of the famine has passed away, but relief operations still continue in a large tract of Southern India, and much suffering still exists among the poorer classes in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. Thus the prospects of the future are not free from anxiety. The state of political affairs in Europe cannot wisely be ignored. Further, although the position of the silver market seems far more hopeful than it was, it is impossible to contemplate without some anxiety an operation of such unexampled magnitude as the remittance from India to England in the ensuing year of £17,000,000.

With every desire to press on the accomplishment of the fiscal reforms which it has bound itself to undertake, or which have been prescribed for its adoption by Parliament and the Secretary of State, the Government of India feels that it cannot, with due regard to the condition of the finances, do very much at the present time. It would be in opposition to the pledges given by the Government, and to the instructions of the Secretary of State, to undertake any such measures of reform if they would involve fresh taxation, and this prohibition must be applied to the future as well as to the present. No risk, therefore, must be incurred of doing that which might render it necessary hereafter to impose fresh burdens.

MESSRS. NICHOLLS AND CO., in their Calcutta Financial Circular for March, notice that the Budget estimates for 1878-79, "inclusive of two millions and three quarters provincial rates and taxes, give a revenue of sixty-three millions and a-quarter sterling, against fifty-nine millions of the regular estimates for 1877-78. Expenditure sixty-one millions, surplus over two millions, including four millions and a-half for public works, one million guaranteed railway capital withdrawn, and £600,000 for loans to Native States. To meet deficit, the cash balances will be reduced one million and a-half, and two millions and a-half will probably be borrowed." Then, after referring to the new taxation and anticipated surplus, they make the satisfactory admission that, "in face of the heavy famine expenditure, the results shown are more favourable than the most sanguine could have anticipated."

THE latest number of Good Words contains an interesting article by Dr. George Smith on the late Dr. Duff's work for Christian education in Southern Asia. In it this eminent missionary is classed as the last of six remarkable men who, during the past century and a-half, have been sent out to India and China by Great Britain and Denmark, the five being Schwartz, Carey, Judson, Morrison, and Wilson. But Judson, the founder of the American Baptist Mission in Birmah, was appointed by the "Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions" of his own land; and so far from England taking credit for his work, we find it recorded that the Bengal Government ordered him and his three companions, shortly after arrival at Calcutta, to return home by the ship in which they had made their outward voyage. The writer of the article under notice understands that Sir Charles Trevelyan is "preparing an account of the origin of the great English movement in Calcutta in 1830-35;" and thinks that the whole, when fully written, will form one of the brilliant chapters in the history, not only of Christian missions, but of educational progress, and of the civilisation of a subjugated empire by the governing race. It will furnish an Oriental analogy to the influence of Rome in the conversion of the Northern nations, and to that of Greece in the Renaissance and Reformation of Europe.

REVERTING to the necessity put upon the American missionary, Adoniram Judson, in 1812, to find a field for the exercise of his profession elsewhere than Calcutta, it may not be unprofitable to inquire into the action of the British Parliament about that period in respect of religious instruction for natives of India. In June, 1813, Lord Castlereagh, then Foreign Secretary in Lord Liverpool's Ministry, moved a resolution, "That such measures ought to be adopted as may tend to the introduction among the natives of the British dominions in India of useful knowledge, and of religious and moral improvement, and that, in furtherance of the above objects, sufficient facilities shall be afforded by law to persons desirous of going to, and remaining in India, for the purpose of accomplishing these benevolent designs." This looks much as if the Calcutta policy, which had been illustrated a year before in Judson's case, was not wholly approved by the authorities and public at home; a view that is confirmed by the discussion on the resolution, and its adoption by a majority of fifty-three in a house of a hundred and twenty-five members. Wilberforce was a prominent speaker on that occasion, and advocated the cause of the missionaries.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Indian Daily News, writing from Rawal Pindi on the 25th March, relates, among other items of intelligence, that the huge Buddhist monolith, unearthed some months before at Jhelum by the workmen employed in constructing the railway, had been removed to the Lahor Museum, where it occupied a place among the other archaeological treasures of the Panjab. It is suggested that Dr. Leitner or Mr. Growse be called upon to decipher the inscription upon this monument, for the benefit of an anxious public; and the suggestion is accompanied with a lament at the uncertainty of authoritative action being taken in the matter. Perhaps, after all, a little delay will do no harm. We are quite sure that no one will be more desirous for the deciphering than the learned gentlemen themselves whose names are mentioned; but for the million, we apprehend that Mammon will offer more attraction than monoliths.

A STORY has been lately going the round of certain Indian papers which, if characteristic of the ways and weaknesses of Indian Governments, is also illustrative of the ways and weaknesses of our native subjects in the Far East. It is to the following effect:—Some time ago the Government of Madras asked its officers whether paper could be made of prickly pear "advantageously"? We are wholly ignorant of the wording of any circular that may have been adopted for the occasion; but it is presumed that the real meaning conveyed was much as follows:—"We do not wish to be troubled with a report of non-paying scientific results; give us, however, the figure of any of the supposed pecuniary gains, if any, to be obtained from the Cactus. There is no reason why the State should not put money in its purse as well as its individual subjects; quite the contrary." Many answers were received. Among them, one Collector reported that although in his district the manufacture of paper had, as a rule, long since ceased, an intelligent Muslim had succeeded in procuring such good specimens of paper alleged to be made from prickly pear that he had induced him to continue his researches and produce something superior. The sequel is sad, if instructive. An advance in cash was made; fortunately not a large sum—one rupee only; enough, however, to point the moral and adorn the tale. On receiving the money the manufacturer of papyrus left the village with all his family, and has not since appeared, nor has he provided any clue to his "whereabouts." This last word is apparently extracted from the Collector's report on the subject, for we find it in inverted commas, together with the assertion with which the said extract concludes—"I do not believe that the paper shown was made of prickly pear fibre." We are scarcely surprised that, after reading these and other reports, the Government of Madras resolved that it did not "seem necessary to pursue the inquiry."

Odds and Ends.

MR. G. D. OSWELL, B.A., of Keble College, has been appointed Tutor of Bishop's College, and is expected to arrive here about Easter. Mr. Oswald took a Second Class in Classics.

MR. T. E. VOIGHT has been appointed Acting Consul for the Austro-Hungarian Empire in Calcutta.

THE Lieutenant-Governor, N.W.P., will leave Lucknow on Wednesday evening, the 10th April, and arrive at Nynee Tal on the 12th.

DR. S. W. FALLON has just issued Part XIII. of his "Hindustani-English Dictionary." More than half the work has now been published, as it is to be completed in twenty-five parts.

IT is said that Mr. A. W. Garrett, M.A., Inspector of Schools, Presidency Circle, will be appointed, as a temporary measure, a Professor in the Presidency College, in addition to his own work.

SIR JOHN STRACHEY is suffering from low fever intervening upon influenza, and is in a weak state.

MR. KEMP, the father of the Bengal Civil Service, retires on the 15th April, after a service of more than forty-six years and a-half, of which forty-five and a-half were spent on duty.

COLONEL R. H. KEATINGE, V.C., C.S.I., Chief Commissioner of Assam, is allowed furlough to Europe for two years. He leaves for England shortly.

THE HON. R.E. EGERTON, Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, left Bombay for Simla on Tuesday. Mrs. Egerton went home in the mail steamer from Bombay.

MR. A. MACLEAN has been appointed to officiate as a judge of the High Court, Calcutta.

THE Rajah of Suket has been formally deposed by order of the Government of India. He is to remain for the present at Lahore, and his son, if found fitting, well succeed him.

THE Rajah of Pooree, who was lately put on his trial on a charge of murder, has been found guilty, and sentenced to transportation for life.

THE Governor of Bombay recently visited the Central Provinces, with a view to settle the boundaries between the Khandeish and Holkar's territories. Holkar is stated to be greatly dissatisfied with his treatment.

THE Vernacular Press Bill has already been put in force, the first to fall under its effect being the Bengal native paper Samachar.

A CONTEMPORARY says that Mr. Justice Cunningham, who is already known as a novel-writer, is about to give the public another picture of Indian society, the scene of which will be laid in Madras.

A REPORT received from Nepal states that the heir-apparent of the Maharajah is dead.

MEETINGS are being held by the leading Mohammedans in Calcutta, to adopt measures for sending further help to Turkey.

THE scheme for the establishment of Civil Appellate Benches in the Mufasal in Bengal will soon be brought into operation.

A VOLUNTEER CORPS is to be formed amongst the residents on the Nilgiris.

ACCORDING to local telegrams crops are being damaged by locusts and other insects in Bellary, Kurnool, North Arcot, Madura, and Tinnevely.

THE Government of India have moved the Secretary of State to agree to the pay of all their Under-Secretaries being raised to Rs. 1,500.

THE native regiments at Lucknow, chiefly consisting of Pathans, have volunteered for service abroad in the event of war between England and Russia.

THREE Burmese Ambassadors have arrived at Ceylon by steamer from Rangoon in charge of return presents to several persons who had forwarded presents to the King. They took some Buddhistical sacred books to be kept in Ceylon.

UNDER instructions from army head-quarters, all officers who may be on leave or furlough in Bombay (except those on medical certificate) are directed to rejoin their corps at once, all leave and furlough being cancelled.

ALL the butchers of Bankipore are said to have closed their shops as a protest against the imposition of the Licence Tax.

THE new Scottish Orphanage at Mahim was opened on April the 13th in the presence of a large number of visitors from Bombay by H.E. Sir Richard Temple. The cost of the new structure has been about 80,000, and accommodation is provided for 110 children.

COMPLAINTS come from Goa of repeated despotic acts committed by the new Governor, Viscount Sergio de Souza, and the imposition of unlawful taxes.

THE Bengal Chamber of Commerce thinks the Southampton route should be abolished, if it can be effected without greatly enhanced rates, and that the steamer with the India mails should not be kept waiting at Egypt for the coming up of the Southampton vessels.

A Punjab Gazette Extraordinary announces the closing of the routes to Cashmere. This action has been taken, on the recommendation of the Resident, on account of the prevalence of some distress, which is not expected to last long.

THE Administration Report of British Burmah for 1876-77 shows that murder, dacoity, robbery, and cattle theft have decreased, but the police signally failed in dealing with house-breaking.

OUT of twelve hundred houses at Bancoora, 706 were totally destroyed by fire on March 31.

ANOTHER Russian spy has they say, been discovered, and this time at Simla, in the form of "a veritable Turk, a fine-looking fellow, who says that he was at Kars when that fortress was stormed and taken by the Russians."

THE land postal line known as the Ahmedabad-Hyderabad postal line is abolished.

ON March 7 the Rangoon Jail was fired by the prisoners, and much damage was done. The guard killed two prisoners and seriously injured another. Other prisoners were injured in attempting their escape.

THE Dhond and Munmar Railway, which connects the north-eastern and south-eastern portions of the Bombay Presidency without the necessity of crossing the Ghauts, was to have been opened on the 17th April by H.E. Sir Richard Temple.

THE Thakore Saheb of Bhowanuggur, who was installed on the 5th instant, gives one lakh of rupees in donation to his Alma Mater, in the Kattywar Rajkoomar College, and sets apart fifteen thousand rupees, the amount of a nuzzur offered by his subjects, on his installation, to the relief of the sufferers by the famine.

THE falling-off in the trade of Calcutta in European piece-goods is well shown by the fact that the value of such goods exported from Calcutta to Bengal and other parts of India in February last was only Rs. 89,53,818, as compared with Rs. 1,00,10,069 exported in February, 1877.

IN the first two months of the current year the value of gold imported to this country was Rs. 21,95,654, and of that exported Rs. 2,58,100, whilst the value of silver imported was Rs. 1,30,81,757, and of that exported Rs. 14,29,209. This leaves a balance in favour of imports of treasure of Rs. 1,35,90,102.

THE River Surveyor of Moulmein has, we learn, discovered the rock against which the steamer Rangoon grazed a few weeks ago opposite the Amhurst reef. It is, we hear, a sort of pinnacle rock, and has now been buoyed. It is somewhat remarkable that the spot at which, according to Lieut. Jarrad's chart, there is supposed to be thirty feet of water at low tide, has been passed over hundreds of times by the steamer Rangoon.

THE following is the result of the Opium sale held at the Government Sale-room, No. 2, Bankshall-street, on April 3:—

NATIVE FEELING IN INDIA.

IN the few remarks recently made in this paper under the head of "Troops from India," we alluded to a recommendation for strengthening the Indian Executive which had been somewhat vaguely signified through the wires of the telegraph. Such a recommendation seemed to indicate the introduction of an essentially despotic sway, as well as new outward signs of strength; some innovation, in fact, calculated to disperse all notions of "England's decrepitude" and secondary position with regard to Russia or any other Power, whether in Europe or Asia; also, perhaps, but in a minor degree, to shatter the conviction that the Indian Government had, "to a considerable extent, during past years, sunk to the position of a mere State machine for carrying out the wired instructions of the Secretary of State." In resuming consideration of this question, it is more important to arrive at the root of evil than discuss a remedy which is ever available, and may be applied at any time with no more danger than entailed by increased expenditure. The Times Correspondent, who cannot naturally be supposed other than the representative of one shade of popular local opinion, attributes the circumstance that "the tone of native feeling in India is not as healthy as could be desired," primarily to the seditious writings of the Vernacular Press. An old-established Indian paper, more decidedly (if not more extensively) still the mouthpiece of popular opinion, thinks that if the gradual "advance of the wave of disloyalty over India be traced, it will be found to have corresponded curiously with that of the influence of the Educational Department." Now, there is ample material for reflection in either of the two reasons given for the unsatisfactory state of the Indian mind towards its rulers; because we have no doubt whatever that the unhealthy "tone of native feeling" is precisely the same thing apprehended as the "wave of disloyalty." The difference is in the mode of expression only; a mere façon de parler, according to the temperament of the speaker—inductive or imaginative, practical or poetical.

As regards the Vernacular Press, the mistake is not of to-day nor of the present Government, who have acted in the matter under a pressing exigency. That an error has been committed at all may be disputed by some persons; for ourselves we recognise it palpably in that hasty, easy, wholesale and indiscriminate application of civilised legislature which granted exceptional license to those who understand the term Liberty only in contrast to physical bondage; yet which inconsistently withheld many harmless class or social privileges of every-day life, while lavishly distributing dangerous and unknown exotics. In India, during the last month of the anxious year 1857, we stated an opinion,—and the statement is now before us in writing—that the Liberty of the Press was a measure about as applicable to the country as would have been the Hackney Coach Act, the International Copyright Law, or the introduction of an Italian Opera. Let us, for an instant, without rejecting the simile as absurd, suppose that the last-named appurtenance of civilisation were transplanted to a Native State. Alas for prima donnas or prima ballerinas! If it were possible for their syren sounds and graceful steps to fascinate patrons such as now contemplated, the inevitable sequel would be incarceration within the walls of a zandana. If otherwise, and they failed to arouse admiration, they would be spurned and thrown aside as things which money had rendered fair game for any kind of treatment. Briefly, then, the liberty of the Press in India is a lusus naturee, unintelligible and misinterpreted; consequently the Vernacular Press Act comes out of place, and should never have been requisite; but otherwise, and under the circumstances, we believe it to have been a wise and sound measure, and its recent restrictive application is indisputably judicious.

The question of Education is also a serious one, and relevant in our investigation of the causes of discontent apparent in India. But we do not admit, as inferred by one writer, that "the variety of learning with which the Educational Department has plied the natives of India, is a compound which, if not essentially unwholesome, is entirely unsuited to their constitution, and has grievously disagreed with them." This evil will correct itself, and is, from time to time, being corrected by the Directors of Public Instruction, in communication with the Home and Local Governments. Unfortunately, the first two or three generations of students; educated as the British Government loves to educate its subjects, afford no sufficient evidence of what will be the eventual outcome of Education generally. The first stage of this important process represents, as it were, the "little learning" which we are taught to consider dangerous; and we are yet only in that stage. Let us hope that, once past this Rubicon, our students will gain something of moral tone and loyalty, and lose much of conceit and false ambition. Good examples are greatly wanting of perseverance, steady conduct and usefulness throughout a life; and these good examples must be looked for among the pupils themselves, and not be confined to teachers. But all this is a work of time; of, at least three or four generations of students, and after completion of the first period, or stage, of Education on the principle of Western Civilisation. "To abolish the Educational Department," continues the writer from whom we have already quoted, "would no doubt appear to many people to be a very retrograde and even brutal proceeding. Yet we are inclined to think it would be an immense blessing to the people of India in the future, not if the stream of knowledge were for ever to be cut off from them, but if the mind of the Government on the subject of its educational system could be reduced to a tabula rasa, and a new policy worked out upon entirely different lines."

We disagree with every line of this quotation. The abolition of the Educational Department need not be a brutal measure if carried out in a good cause, but it would, in this instance, be little short of madness; and the experience of the past is the best foundation on which to build the edifice of the future. If proof were wanting of the broad spirit in which Government instruction is administered in India, it will be readily found on reference to Sir George Clerk's Memorandum accompanying Lord Ellenborough's letter to the Chairman and Deputy-Chairman of the Court of Directors, published some twenty years ago : and the attention at once officially given, and since maintained, to the principles laid down in these important papers is in itself a guarantee that the system pursued will be, for native students of every persuasion, void of offence as of occasion for discontent or disloyalty.

MR. T. T. COOPER.

Eighteen months ago, one dull foggy November evening, when London had scarce recovered from the turmoil which annually characterises the commencement of the chief magistrate's yearly reign of splendour, a young man of powerful frame and large stature might have been seen wending his way to the terminus through the motley crowd at Charing-cross. Few who saw him start for the East on that occasion were perhaps aware that he was one of the most intrepid of modern travellers, a man who literally for months together held his life in his hands, the well-known "Tang" Cooper, of Chinese notoriety; fewer still could have imagined that in the brief space of a few months the melancholy tidings would reach this country that he had been murdered while representing her Majesty at a station on the outskirts of China and Burmah. "Mr. Cooper, the British Political Agent at Bhamo, and two sepoys have been murdered at Bhamo by the Sepoy Guard; the assassins have been arrested. No clue as to the motive of the crime has yet been obtained, but it is not supposed to be political." Such is the brief telegram which narrates the massacre of one of England's enterprising sons, a typical representative of the reckless, daring spirit to whom this country owes in no small measure its present greatness and prosperity.

Born of wealthy parents Mr. Cooper, who from early infancy was infected with a roving and adventurous spirit, started, when barely out of his teens, on a tour to the Antipodes; he had not long been travelling in the wild regions of Australia when intelligence reached him of the altered circumstances of his position; things had not prospered with the family at home, and instead of being, as he had expected, the heir to a handsome competency, he found himself penniless and homeless in a distant land, away from any helping hand. Nothing daunted, he commenced the battle of life by repairing to China; why he selected that kingdom as his sphere of enterprise is not known, but it may be surmised from a passage selected from one of his works written some years afterwards:—"The great empires of Asia, almost up to our own time, presented an unknown field, which very few were able to enter upon and explore; religious prejudice and oriental conservatism combined to exclude the intrusive Western strangers; and but recently have we begun to acquire anything like accurate knowledge, either geographically or historically, of the vast empires and peoples of the true East. An angry and jealous fear of the aggressive force of Western civilisation has succeeded to contemptuous prejudice, and at the present time renders the Oriental peoples yet more reluctant to admit the presence of the foreigner, whom still they feel themselves unable to exclude. Of this Oriental exclusiveness, the giant Empire of China, slumbering in the conscious pride of its social and political system, which dates from the most distant ages, is the truest type." For a while he turned his attention, and with considerable success, to the Bar, but ere long his natural roving unsettled instincts urged him to the more adventurous paths of travel. He then conceived the idea of journeying through China to Burmah; but his efforts were not successful, owing to his arrest and imprisonment by the Chinese authorities. Effecting his escape, he was compelled to retrace his steps, and he returned broken in health and shattered in nerve, having undergone risks of life and limb such as to chill the blood in the veins of even a reader of his interesting and exciting account of this journey, published under the title of "Travels of a Pioneer of Commerce." After a wearisome attempt to penetrate the Mishmee Hills, situate between Assam and Thibet, he found it necessary to rest awhile, so he betook himself to India, and thence came to this country, which he had not seen for fourteen years. At that time the Panthay Mission, which had been visiting our shores, was just about to return, and he was requested by Government to accompany them to their own land. He willingly consented, and once again bidding adieu to his native shores, escorted the Envoy and his suite as far as Calcutta, beyond which, owing to the utter discomfiture of the Panthays by the Chinese, they were unable to proceed. Recognising the peculiar merits for frontier service of a person so well versed in the ways of semi-civilised barbarians, the Government of India appointed Mr. Cooper to act as Political Agent at Bhamo during the absence on furlough of the permanent holder of the post; but he had not long discharged the duties of his office ere a severe attack of dysentery, which nearly cost him his life, compelled him to return to this country to recruit his health: he was then temporarily employed at the India Office till the close of 1876, when he was ordered for the second time to India, on this occasion with despatches and papers for the Viceroy in connection with the approaching Imperial Durbar at Delhi on Jan. 1, 1877. After the termination of this duty he was re-appointed to his original post at Bhamo, where he remained till the date of his death.

Far removed from all the "busy haunts of men" being almost the sole European in the district, his former mode of life stood him in good stead; while his reputation on the frontier, amongst both Chinese and Burmese, rendered him peculiarly fitted for a position which requires no ordinary qualification effectually to fill. Possessing the power to an unusual degree of endearing himself to those around him, he will be mourned by many a far-off friend in this country, and his loss will be severely felt by the Government, in whose service he sacrificed his life. A. W.

DESPATCH OF NATIVE TROOPS WESTWARD.

The Monday morning telegram of the Times from India was not lacking in the usual interest. We reproduce the greater part:—

As an experiment of State policy, the despatch of native troops to Europe has proved successful beyond the hopes of even the most ardent advocates of the measure. The native soldiers appear, indeed, completely captivated by the prospect of being engaged in military service in Europe. The fact is—though hitherto it has not been sufficiently realised—that the native army is now composed of very different elements from those of which it was formed prior to the Mutiny. The old Bengal army was almost entirely recruited from high-caste men, who were forbidden by their religion to cross the sea, and who naturally, therefore, showed intense reluctance, if called upon, to fight out of India. The present army is, on the contrary, to a great extent recruited from the Sikhs, Pathans, and Punjab Mussulmans—all enlisted for general service and shackled by little or no caste prejudice. These are men to whom fighting is as the breath of their nostrils, and who have been for a long time chafing under the severe restraints imposed upon their bellicose instincts by protracted peace. The prospect, therefore, which has now been opened out to them of being employed in active service under conditions of honour and confidence, to which the native soldier is keenly sensible, has awakened a spirit of emulous enthusiasm showing that England possesses in India a reserve of military strength of which, till now, she appeared hardly conscious. This reserve, if scientifically organised, is capable of raising England to a first-class military Power, were it only from mere strength of numbers. It is stated that not only the actual native soldiers, but the classes from which they are generally recruited are manifesting the greatest eagerness to take part in the war. Commanding officers have reported to the Government that regimental second battalions can be raised in a few days. This enthusiasm is by no means confined to the Bengal army. Immediately the news of Indian troops being ordered to Malta became known at Mhow, the native officers of the 23rd Regiment, after the roll was called, advanced to the colonel and expressed their eager desire to be engaged in active service. Shortly after, the men collected in crowds round the colonel's bungalow, and on his coming out with the native officers a scene of the wildest enthusiasm is said to have occurred, the private soldiers with loud cheers taking up the request of the native officers.

A telegram from Madras states that when volunteers were asked for from the 15th Madras Native Infantry to join the 25th, under orders for Malta, the whole regiment came forward, earnestly begging to be sent. This regiment returned only six weeks ago from three years' foreign service in Burmah, the men having been settled in lines for only fourteen days. Many out of the hundred who were selected have not even seen their families since their return. They marched away nevertheless in excellent spirits, elated with the prospect "of going," as they described it, "to some place near England to fight the Russians." A petition for foreign service, signed by every man in the regiment, has been sent to the Commander-in-Chief by the 25th Madras Infantry. On every side similar accounts are received in all cases of regiments ordered for service, those chosen being regarded by the rest of the army with feelings of generous envy. The emulation is so great that the Colonel of the 9th is said to have had the choice of 1,000 from which to fill up the few vacancies in his regiment.

The Government are treating the troops with a liberality which is warmly appreciated. The men will receive batta and free rations, together with three months' pay in advance. The new equipment is also said to be both serviceable and attractive, consisting of a French-gray turban, tied in the same manner as in the Sikh regiments, with a patch in front bearing the number of the regiment, a red serge tunic, Zouave trousers, white gaiters, worsted socks, stout English boots, and a pair of blankets for each Sepoy.

We add the latest opinion of the Anglo-Indian Press, in the matter of the novel Expeditionary Force:—

The Pioneer of April 13 has the following remarks:—A native Indian army operating in Europe would be peculiarly placed, because, except its own officers, there would be none available for its management who could speak its language. If there happened to be heavy casualties among its officers, it would be as useless as a dismounted cannon. Its latent serviceability would be all there, but the European General in command would have no means of directing this and applying it. But there can be no question now of altering organisation. The native company officers could not be changed for Europeans all in a moment, even if it were decided that this were desirable, and as we have seen, there are very high authorities who think it would not be desirable even if it could be done. So, last of all, there is no sudden need for a great number of fresh officers per regiment. There would be no room for them in the existing organisation, which must be retained for the present. We may trust, therefore, that the various resources of the country would not be unequal to meeting the emergency, such as it is. On the other hand, the possibility that a long war may be fought in Europe, that England will learn to make use of the vast military resources of this empire, and that the arrangements to be done ultimately will be on a large scale, the problem which the Government of India dealt with in 1876 must be entirely re-stated. For one thing, the objection to having British company officers for native troops turned to a large extent in 1876 on expense. It was in a way waste of time to discuss the question whether or not that plan were desirable. Its cost put it quite out of reach. The arguments of Sir Henry Norman and Lord Napier may be regarded as aimed at, showing that the only system possible was fairly satisfactory. But if great masses of Indian troops go to Europe to engage in war there, the cost will manifestly be borne by England, and expensive systems, if clearly better than the inexpensive, may become feasible. It is not impossible to suppose that a system might arise under which native regiments would, independently of actual warfare going on, have tours of service in Europe—at Mediterranean stations for example, which will perhaps become more numerous than at present—just as European regiments have tours of service here. It might pay Great Britain to support the extra expense of keeping up considerable numbers of regiments in this country, who would be available for such service. Certainly if war breaks out the native army may have a grander future before it than any which its purely local service could promise.

THE Times of India bears unconscious testimony to the rapidity with which the embarkation of troops has been effected, for it writes on the 15th April, just a fortnight before departure of the first convoy:—"In reference to the rumours that have lately been locally circulated, we are able to state, on the highest authority, that the Government of Bombay have not received any orders to despatch any forces to Mesopotamia, or anywhere else; and that the Government of Bombay are not aware of any determination having been formed by the Government of India to send a force beyond seas at all. According to the latest news from Europe, moreover, any local preparation would be premature."

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—It may be asked how is the gigantic system of forestalling, regrating, and engrossing of corn in India, which has increased so rapidly since 1874, to be checked?

I beg to suggest three measures. First. The publication of the quantities of food stored in various parts of India.

Not only has the Indian Government neglected to publish this information, according to the practise of other civilised administrations, but it is itself, I believe, inexcusably ignorant on the subject. I beg you to correct me if I be wrong in this belief. In 1857 I had some difficulty in ascertaining the existence and localities of the chief stores of corn, but I had no leisure to make systematic inquiries. Since then the ignorance of Government appears to have increased rapidly, and since 1874 it has been the interest of the millionaire speculators to deceive both Government and the public: the wretched peasantry and townspeople see the prices of food rising, but cannot understand what is the cause.

As soon as an honest merchant in corn sends a consignment to a famine-stricken part of the country he finds that he is undersold by the speculators, who suddenly produce stores of corn, the existence of which had been unknown to the public. When the regular merchants have been ruined in their attempts to supply the market, the unprincipled speculators can make their own terms with consumers, with the official dispensers of Government relief, and with the non-official famine relieving Committees.

Secondly. Free trade is impossible under the wretched system of Government octroi. Were it not for the fetters imposed by octroi, corn could be stored in abundance by merchants in towns, as was done throughout the North-Western Provinces previous to 1858. For twenty-five years the wise laws passed through the influence of Trevelyan and Lord Metcalf had secured free trade in those provinces. The octroi has forced corn merchants either to keep their stores scattered throughout the villages or to export them. A few have made bargains with octroi contractors, and have thus established monopolies.

Thirdly. I urge the improvement of communications. A railroad is required for a most important line from famine-stricken Bellary to the sea at Karwar. My heart will rejoice when I hear of the erection of huge granaries at the port of Karwar from which food would be transported by railway to feed millions of cultivators of cotton who are ready to perish with hunger.

I beg once more to urge Government to encourage the planting of trees as much for medicinal and sanitary purposes as for providing fuel for cooking. How is it that such wide tracts in the Bellary district are still destitute of trees?

There is such wondrous beauty in the external form of trees, and so welcome a shelter beneath their over-arching boughs, that we should not feel surprised that in early ages groves were considered as the fittest temples for the gods. There are also, it must be remembered, few things in nature so pleasing to the eye as the form or the colour of the flowers which adorn at seasons the whole vegetable kingdom, and nothing so grateful to the palate of the rude man as the flavour of the fruits which trees afford. In addition to these were the multifarious uses to which their wood could always be applied. For buildings, for furniture, for implements of peace or war, or for ornament, it was indispensable. In ancient times it was from wood alone that man obtained that fire which enabled him to cook his food, to warm his dwelling, or to sacrifice to his gods."—Page 1 of Fergusson's "Tree and Serpent Worship."

Notices of Books.

Indian Finance Defended; a Refutation of the Opinion too Generally held that British India is Overburdened with Debt and Taxation. London: C. Kegan Paul and Co.

A very brief preface informs us that this very brief pamphlet is written by "an Indian officer of some experience," with a view to prevent misconception, and in the sole interest of truth. The assurance that he speaks in his capacity as a private individual, "without the knowledge of other officers of the Government, and without making use of any information which is not published by the Government and available to all," leads to the inference that the author is no stranger to the ways and figures of the Finance Department in India. And the conciseness with which the question is treated gives as good evidence as the faith in tabular statements that the process by which the results exhibited have been obtained is well understood.

The pamphlet is, no doubt, useful; but more so to one who has mastered the two Parliamentary Blue-books which have professedly supplied it with a starting point, than to the reader uninitiated in the mysteries of Indian Finance. There is nothing new in the argument in justification of the opium traffic, which will be neither convincing nor satisfactory to its opponents.

A New Source of Revenue for India. By George W. Strettell, H.M.'s Indian Forest Department. London: Marlborough and Co.

Mr. Strettell is an officer of considerable experience in the Forest Department of India; and in the pamphlet before us he has put forward a careful and well-reasoned argument in favour of the cultivation of plants which have hitherto been comparatively neglected; notably the Calotropis gigantea. Naturally, he thinks the development of the fibre trade of India should, in the first instance, be the duty of Government; and now that the Forest Conservancy in that country has become an affair of many heads and hands, and may be said to have assumed its legitimate dimensions, we know no way of dealing with the question which presents equal advantages. In any case, he has done good service in enabling the officers of Government as well as private speculators to become readily acquainted with a subject of no small practical value.

A man of Mr. Strettell's antecedents might add very much to our knowledge of, and interest in the forests and plants of the Sind province by showing how and to what extent the natives themselves have turned to account the woody and vegetable wealth at their disposal. The manufacture of paper to which he refers so frequently in his pamphlet was commonly carried on, even under British rule, according to the aboriginal native system; and we doubt much whether such practice has been wholly discontinued at the present date. We have some recollection of a long and rudely-rounded beam, some 14 feet by 2 or 1½, crossed at the finer extremity by a perpendicular log, acting as mallet. The upper part, or thicker end, being raised from the earth by a tolerably high stone, some eighteen inches were made to overlap, so that a heavy pressure thereon would lift the whole. To work it, a man (sometimes also a second) jumped on the overlapping end, and commenced a routine of mechanical pressure, much after the fashion of a French frotteur polishing, with the flat bit of soap attached to his foot, the wooden floors of an entresol or premier. The remainder of the process may be conceived in the following recipe:—Procure any amount of old fishing rets, or rope twisted into matting. Throw it under the immediate influence of the pounding machine. Keep continually feeding the hammer at risk of your fingers. The result, multiplied by three bleachings, will be very respectable writing-paper—Sind paper, be it understood. It would not do for Overland letters—nor would it adorn an album.

THE FALL OF KASHGHAR.

It is not many years since the Government of India despatched to Kashghar an expedition which was to do much, and prepare the way for more. At that time it was quite the fashion to profess an interest in the fortunes of Yakob Beg and his infant State. This isolated fragment of Mussulman dominion, standing intact amidst the ruins of more ancient Emirates and Khanates, and holding China in check on the one side, and Russia at bay on the other, was fitly understood to be a symbol of British interests, which all the world knows to consist, not in our island itself, or in anything we have done or are doing there, but in the maintenance of barbaric Islam against civilised Christianity throughout Asia and Europe. Consequently, it became obvious that Kashghar was necessary to the preservation of our Indian Empire; and our friendly relations with its ruler were believed to be such that we could use Kashghar at pleasure as a base of operations for driving the Russians out of Turkestan. These important political connections were to have been confirmed by an Embassy from Constantinople to Yakob Ali, completing the golden circle which binds England and barbarism together in seemingly union. However, the Embassy never came off. The Envoy was stopped by sickness, and by alarm at the frightful region before him; and the Sultan's counsels had to be entrusted to vicarious and mercenary hands. A second Embassy might have been more fortunate, had there been any Kashghar to which to send it; but meanwhile the course of events has been such as to suggest the gravest doubts whether diplomatic intercourse between that kingdom and Turkey in Europe has not come to an end for ever and ever. Neither State can congratulate itself upon the auspiciousness of the conjuncture selected for opening friendly relations. The Envoy, in fact, left the country he visited on the verge of ruin, and returned to find his own country in a condition only a few degrees better. One and the same year witnessed the destruction of the Mussulman Empire of Kashghar, and the downfall of the Turkish power in Europe. There is even a certain approximation between the dates of the decisive events in these great catastrophes; the capture of Yakob Ali's capital is removed by only a few days from the fall of Plevna. Meanwhile, what has become of the British interests so intimately concerned in Kashghar? A bulwark of our Indian Empire, it would appear, has been swept away, and we are left the weaker. Any desperate expedient would have been preferable to this undesirable result. The Government need not have shrunk from any measures, however bold, even to the sending of a new Kashghar expedition, to take barometric observations, collect plants and animals, and spread the ægis of British power over the failing fortunes of Beg Kuli Beg. But nothing was done, and Kashghar, like Babylon, has fallen.

Worse than this, it has fallen almost unnoticed. Our professional alarmists have been too busy in Eastern Europe to spare time for dirges and woeful prophecies over Western Asia. Besides, the ruin of Kashghar has been brought about not by the Russians, but by the Chinese; and it is not yet the fashion to fear that the Chinese may turn us out of India. Nor has the war been one of aggrandisement; for Kashghar was a revolted province of China. That enormous Empire has of late years been slowly recovering its losses by rebellion upon its Western frontier. The rebels were the Tunganese, that is, the Mahomedan subjects of the Emperor, who had become Chinese in almost every respect except their religion. The last successful rising began in 1862, among the Tungan tribes far to the north-east of Kashghar, aided, however, by a large immigration of Mussulmans from that State. In a short time, all the Western frontier of China was in a blaze; the Celestial Government was utterly unable to restore order; and the last vestige of its authority disappeared from the revolted districts when the Governor of Kuldja, on the 7th of March 1866, blew up the citadel and the garrison, rather than surrender to the besieging Tungan force. The result of all this was the establishment of three kingdoms—if so they can be called—in the territories formerly subject to the Chinese. To the north and east lay the territories occupied by the Tungas proper, containing the large towns of Manas and Urumsî; to the south and south-west was Kashghar; and midway between the two lay Kuldja and the tract of country occupied by the Taranshi, or the Kashghar emigrants who had been invited by the prospect of rebellion. This state of affairs, however, was by no means one of stable equilibrium; and before half-a-dozen years were out, one of three divisions had disappeared in consequence of the Russian conquest at Kuldja. This step had been provoked by the aggressive tendencies of the Taranshi, who, after clearing their new country of Tungan, had carried their depredations into Russian territory. The Tungan having now a monopoly of anarchy, turned their attention to Kashghar, and attacked Yakob Beg with an army of 5,000 men, who were not only defeated, but nearly annihilated, barely 800 returning to tell of the failure of the enterprise. The Chinese Government congratulated Yakob Beg upon his victory, and sent him a contribution made up of silver ingots, pieces of silk, and tea. For the next few years, the ruler of Kashghar was supposed to be acting in concert with the Chinese Government against the Tungan, from whom, in 1874, he conquered the two large towns of Manas and Urumsî. But it soon became evident that the Celestial Empire intended to grant Yakob Beg no further grace than that which the Cyclops promised Ulysses. He was to be devoured last; and so it has actually come to pass. Yakob Beg's tenure of Manas lasted barely a year. The Kashghar army was concentrated at home, and the Tunganese were left to their fate. By this time the Chinese had an army of 35,000 men on their Western frontier, immensely superior in organisation and armament to anything their revolted subjects could put in the field against them; and the Governor of Manas began to treat for a surrender. The Chinese were actually admitted into the town when their irregular conduct exasperated the citizens, who set upon them and destroyed them nearly all. This, however, was only the vanguard; the main body was still labouring up, and on Sept. 24, 1876, having previously occupied Urumsî without resistance, it sat down before Manas. The place was taken on Nov. 9 following, and was subjected, according to the usual fate of towns conquered by the Celestial forces, to the last extremities of spoliation and massacre.

The subversion of the Tunganese left nothing between China and Kashghar; and there could be no doubt that Yakob Beg would be attacked before long. At this critical moment of his fortunes, he died; and his son and successor possessed the throne for only a few turbulent months. Yakob Beg's death took place on the 8th of June, 1877, and one of his two sons murdered the other as they were returning from their father's funeral. The murderer, Beg Kuli Beg, was soon obliged to face an insurrection in the south-eastern portion of his dominions, in which the Khan of Khotan was implicated. Though at first successful, the rebellion was stayed by the total defeat and flight of the principal rebel; but the Chinese had meanwhile been advancing at the other end of the eastern frontier, and Beg Kuli Beg returned a victor to Kashghar only to find that one of his outlying cities—Kuchar—had fallen into their hands. Proposals for peace, or at least for a two years' armistice, were rejected by the Chinese General Izo, who immediately occupied Aksu and Ash-Turfan, and thus, before the end of October, had cleared his way to Beg Kuli Beg's capital. The fall of these places was the signal for negotiations between the Chinese General and the Khan of Khotan, which ended in the peaceful admission of the invaders to that city. In vain did Beg Kuli Beg, once more leaving Kashghar with an army of 15,000 men, endeavour to bring the Khan to a sense of his allegiance; he was checked at all points, and even slightly wounded. Hurrying back to defend his capital, he found that too in a state of revolt; and at last, sending off his women and valuables towards Audijan, in Russian Ferghana, he rode himself, with a guard of 4,000 men, across the Russian frontier to Osh, and threw himself upon the protection of the Governor. The Chinese captured Kashghar on the 17th of December, and made it no exception to their general rule of fire and sword. The unhappy Tunganese are still flocking over the border into the Russian province of Osh, to escape the fury of the Celestial host. For the Government of Kashghar, the Chinese have arranged for the present by putting Mursa Ahmad, the former Beg of Tashkend, in Beg Kuli Beg's place. This man was found in a prison when the Chinese army entered Kashghar. Such has been the end of a State which used to be gravely spoken of as a principal bulwark of India against Russian aggression. It is unnecessary to say that India is just as secure now as when Kashghar flourished, and was honoured with Embassies. One important result is that China and Russia have now been brought more extensively into contact. During the long period of their intercourse in Central Asia, these two great Powers have ever remained on a friendly footing; and it is not likely that the traditional policy of either will suffer any violent alteration now; though the possession of Kuldja by Russia may create a difficulty. This place belongs of right to the Chinese, and was captured by the Russians from rebel Chinese subjects only seven years ago. In view of the recent Chinese successes, the garrison of Kuldja has been strengthened; but the measure has probably been dictated only by excessive caution.—Friend of India.

STATION TALK.

LAHORE, March 26.—A case of criminal breach of trust occurred a few days ago, and it only shows how careful the public should be in intrusting property to persons of whom they know little or nothing. An individual of the name of Martin set himself up as a watchmaker in a little room belonging to the building occupied by Alfred and Co., chemists and druggists, near the Ice-house, and advertised in the local journal. The advertisement was headed "Why send your watches to Calcutta or Bombay for repair?" This was just the way to attract customers, and it proved successful. The station was in need of a good watchmaker, and Mr. Martin was one. Many gentlemen patronised him. One day the police was informed that Mr. Martin was non est, and that he had carried away with him a number of valuable watches. He said that he was going to Shadara, and never turned up since. On an entry being made into his room by the inspector of police, three American clocks were found, but the watches were missing. The police has got a descriptive roll of his person, and it cannot be long before he is arrested.—Not long ago an individual giving himself as a colonel in the army of the Ameer of Cabul, visited Lahore, and took his quarters in the hotel of Mrs. Cunningham. His appearance indicated him to be a gentleman of high breeding and polished manners, and he looked more like a Turk than anything else. Though ostensibly a Mahomedan, he drank simpinkin and brandy, and was liberal with his pegs to acquaintances. He spoke a little English and made himself agreeable to every one. Nothing displeased the colonel more than when any one declined to accept a peg from him. His expenses at the hotel were about Rs. 10 a day, or about Rs. 300 a month. For a colonel he was very young, as his age did not appear to be more than twenty-five or thirty years. All sorts of rumours were circulated regarding him. Some said he was an imposter, others that he was a Russian spy. He was under the surveillance of the police during his stay in the hotel, but nothing was elicited which went to prove that he was a secret agent of the Russian Government. After the expiration of a month his small bill was presented for payment, but the colonel said he had no funds; that he expected remittances from Kabul, and that as soon as he received the money he would adjust his account. After a few days the bill was a second time presented, when the gallant colonel replied that he must go to Peshawur and would send a remittance, without fail, on his arrival. Rather than incur any further loss, he was permitted to go to Peshawur, and has not been heard of since, leaving his hotel bill of Rs. 400 unpaid. Whether he contracted any other debts in Lahore I do not know, but I consider those tradesmen fortunate who refused him credit on the strength of his supposed rank of colonel. He has proved himself a veritable chevalier d'industrie, and has probably sought "fresh pastures to feed upon."—A recent despatch from Mr. Elias, Joint Commissioner of Ladakh, to the Government of India, was tampered with on its way, inasmuch as the wrapper was torn open and certain documents extracted as well as a few bills. Some of the officials of the Maharajah of Cashmere are suspected. The Government of India is now investigating the matter. Mr. Elias' ultimate destination is, I believe, Kashghar. Tents and a complete equipment for travelling are now being purchased for him by Mr. Shaw at Calcutta. What can be the object of the Government of India in deputing another person to Kashghar, when it is well known that the country is in a great state of excitement and disorder? Another officer, Captain Biddulph, has been deputed to Gilgit to watch the Russian movements beyond the frontier.—A horrible murder has been committed here. The other day the body of a young Hindu female was taken out from a well near the Book Club. A gardener discovered it from the stench produced, and on being taken out, the neck of the victim was found secured by a rope to which was attached a ghurra filled with kunkur and closed at the mouth. The corpse was in an advanced stage of decomposition, having been in the well for ten or eleven days. It was identified as that of the wife of a mistress employed in the Railway Workshop. The deceased lived in the city, and on the morning that she was missing had on her person jewellery to the value of Rs. 200. The police has been investigating the case for some days, and the murderers, three in number, have been discovered. It would appear from the particulars received that the murder was perpetrated in broad daylight, and on the last Saturday of the month (February), when all Government offices were closed. The place selected for the deed was in a public office, the room of Mr. Lincoln, clerk to General MacLagan, P.W.D. The unfortunate woman was addicted to drink, and it is supposed that she must have been either drugged or made drunk, then strangled, and the body afterwards removed to the room of General MacLagan, where it was hid under some matting or old dhurries. At night it was thrown into the well. The jewellery was found concealed in the record room of the same office. One of the murderers is a chupprassie in the P.W.D.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

CHANGE OF COMMAND.—Major-General Stewart, commanding the Meen Meer Division, and who is proceeding home on sick leave, makes over his command to Major-General Sir Sam Browne on the 15th inst.

MR. P. CARNEGIE.—On the 30th ult. the talukdars and other members of the Bareilly Reform Club convened a meeting to bid farewell to Mr. P. Carnegie, the retiring Commissioner. An appropriate address was presented.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On the 4th inst. Mr. S. F. A. Thompson, an assistant of the Calcutta Landing and Shipping Company lost his life in the river. He was proceeding from the ship Eurydice to the ship Star of Scotia by cargo boats lying between the above ships, when he lost his footing, and fell between the boats. He was never seen to rise again.

KING'S OWN LIGHT INFANTRY.—H.M.'s 51st King's Own Light Infantry, from Peshawur, marched into Subathoo on the 6th inst. For want of accommodation four companies encamp under canvas below the old cemetery, and will, it is believed, shortly proceed either to Solun or Jutog, the old barracks at Subathoo station having been condemned.

NEW ROAD.—Plans and estimates, the latter amounting to Rs. 4,00,000, for making up the frontage of the new river-side road in Calcutta, from Abheeretollah Ghat to Bagh Bazaar, having been submitted by the Port Commissioners, and the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal having approved the scheme, has sanctioned the execution of the work.

EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT.—A Calcutta paper says that, owing to the pressing need of additional officers in the Bengal Educational Service, the Government of India has been moved to place at once the services of Mr. A. Gough at the disposal of the Government of Bengal. In the event of this not being done, the Government of India has been further moved to telegraph the Secretary of State to send out immediately at least three officers from England.

STORMS.—There were showers and storms in the majority of the districts of Bengal during the week ended the 23rd of March; and by a heavy hail-storm at Manda, in the Rajshahye district, four men were killed, many houses and trees blown down, and the crops seriously injured. Prospects are generally good, though complaints of the dearthness of rice are numerous, especially from the districts in which a large export trade was carried on.

CAPTAIN HUMPHRIES.—Captain Humphries, who met with a bad accident in the Hog Hunters' Steeplechase at Meerut, is doing well we are glad to hear. The thigh was fractured, but is in a fair way to get thoroughly mended. In more professional language, "complete apposition has occurred," and the patient will be fit to go for the Grand National at Umballa in the autumn. At the time of the accident he was on a horse of Major Luck's, of the 15th Hussars. The animal put both forefeet into a blind watercourse, and turned a somersault on to his unfortunate rider. The course is said to have been very badly chosen, and the obstacles concealed by standing crops.

SCENE IN COURT.—On the 2nd April the proceedings of the Court of the Commissioner of Lucknow, Colonel Reid, were varied by the following incident. Sentence of death was being pronounced on a Mahomedan for the murder of a woman, whom he had killed with the savage ferocity of a wild beast (having inflicted no less than twelve wounds on her, all more or less fatal), when the prisoner stooped, pulled off one of his shoes, and hurled it at the Commissioner in a paroxysm of rage and despair. The shoe struck the Judge on the left shoulder. The murderer was at once seized by the police-guard that accompanied him, and his hands were pinioned.

CALCUTTA COMPANIES.—During the year 1877 fourteen new joint stock companies, with capitals aggregating Rs. 39,52,000, were registered in Calcutta; five companies increased their capital to an amount altogether of Rs. 3,42,500, and four companies, with capital aggregating Rs. 29,50,000, were wound up or transferred. At the end of the year there were 155 companies, whose united capital amounted to Rs. 7,55,46,500, in existence on the Calcutta register. From the time that the Joint Stock Companies' Act came into operation in 1857 the number of companies started has been 334, of which 139, with capital amounting to Rs. 15,12,76,900, have been wound up or transferred.

ODISH STATISTICS.—The annual report on the administration of the Province of Oudh for 1876-77 states that 1,216 criminal prisoners were released and the sentences of 3,713 were partially remitted in celebration of Her Majesty's proclamation on January 1st, 1877. The bathing fair held at Ajudhia in February was attended by great crowds, for it is the belief of the natives that their sins will be forgiven them, as well as millions of their ancestors, if they manage within four minutes and a half to bathe and go through certain ceremonies, especially during a peculiar conjunction of the planets which takes place only once in eighty years. As this was one of the occasions, the rush to the river was very great: numbers were trodden under foot, and sixty-five persons lost their lives. The police returns show a decrease of crime, though murders, which number 110, give an increase of twenty-four more than the preceding year. The prisons were not nearly so full, the health of the prisoners was good, and the death-rate only 1·3 per cent. The value of imports fell off to the amount of ten lakhs; that of exports increased by forty lakhs. The imperial taxes amounted to Rs. 16,726,703. Cholera, fever, and small-pox were very prevalent throughout the province, increasing the death-rate beyond that of any previous year. The Educational Department worked satisfactorily; and though female education made little or no progress, the number of scholars in the various schools was 64,197; and 195 original works, seven translations, and forty-one republications were published, excluding many insignificant pamphlets. The reward for snake-killing having been dispensed with, is the only excuse that can be given for the small number (eighty-eight) of snakes destroyed, while that of wild animals rose to 527.

STATION TALK.

OOTACAMUND, March 31.—This little Peddlington is subject to occasional outbreaks that assume formidable appearances, but are soon over and leave not a trace behind; the present little civil war may be termed the Battle for the Trees; the fight will be a harmless one, as the weapons used are only human tongues and the woodman's chopper, and as the latter is not used to chop off heads, but only to cut down trees, the former will soon get tired and retire from the strife. . . . In ordering the trees in St. Stephen's compound to be cut down, the Chaplain was not aware that he was raising a hornet's nest around him, for, strange to say, he did not consult the opinion of the public generally, but only of such persons as he deemed necessary. For my part, I like to see our Church stand out boldly, instead of being hidden by trees, as though we were ashamed of it, but those who have an eye for the picturesque, and a relish for antiquities, consider that the removal of trees that have been growing for years has robbed the church of any beauty that may have been reflected on it by the surrounding foliage, and destroyed by one fell swoop the growth of years. This is the political and sentimental view to take of it, but the Chaplain, though not without taste, has still a leaning towards the practical, and sinking present appearance for the prevention of future destruction, has dared to execute dire wrath on shade-giving, picturesque, too numerous, and withal deceptive acacias. These trees, pretty to look at when covered with a sheen of gold from their feathery yellow blossom, are like whitened sepulchres, all glorious without, but, underneath the splendour, filling the ground with roots that spread above and below, destroying all that comes in their way. I have heard that, in Australia, whence these trees were imported, a heavy fine is imposed on any one who plants one of these trees within a certain space of a dwelling-house. They are known in their own country, here as strangers they have been planted indiscriminately; they are around our path and will soon be around our bed; already have I seen shoots springing up between the boards in verandahs. In a country like this, so many people sojourn for a time and as soon as practicable return to their old country, these have to bury their dead and go their way; it is therefore most necessary that the burial places should be as much as possible saved from destruction. No loving hand to repair the ravages of time, all that human foresight can do to keep up decent appearances should be done, and the roots of the trees that have raised such a controversy were wending their way towards the resting-place of the dead. For the sake of the living, too, the Acacia dealbata should be as much as is now possible eradicated from the station; we know not how many deaths from typhoid fever may not be laid at their roots. Health should certainly be considered before beauty. The rain that fell the week before last has not been supplemented by continued showers. Ootacamund had very little of it. Lovedale was more favoured, but here we are as burnt, dried up, and withered as before, and look with longing eyes at every little bit of cloud we see, hoping it may be laden with a refreshing shower; the high north wind scatters the clouds into small fragments that float over our heads and go over the hills and far away. In the Wynad the rain has been partial; it is amusing to hear planters talk about the number of cents of rain each estate has had, and to see how he who can score inches holds his head up as though he really did expect a bumper this year. The demand for houses has broken out again. I fancy now that Government are really coming some people who were afraid of having a house on their hands and waited for a certainty of Governmental movements, will come badly off. His Grace the Governor and family will be located at Woodlands on their arrival, as Government House is not nearly ready to receive them. The rooms at Woodlands are so small that the family alone will fill them. I believe Mr. Barlow is thinking of taking the house when the Governor vacates it. It is early days to speak of the Commissioner in his official capacity, as he is a new broom at present, but he gives promise of suiting the place and the place suiting him. Mr. Johnson is to remain as acting Assistant Commissioner for three months longer, and as Mr. Maclean has been gazetted to Coimbatore, it may be Mr. Johnson will continue in the acting appointment.—Madras Times Correspondent.

THE MADRAS PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—The second concert of this Society was to take place on the 6th April, at which will be performed Handel's oratorio, "The Messiah." There is every promise of a rich musical treat, and we hope to see the accommodation of the Banqueting Hall tested to the utmost. The choruses are strong and have been well drilled, while the solos could scarcely be in better keeping than they are—certainly could not in India.

THE HARBOUR WORKS.—The North arm of the Harbour is progressing, its length being now about 700 feet from the shore, and the inner point reaching nine fathoms of water. The two steamers belonging to the Harbour Works, which bring granite from Covelong, are anchored within a few yards of the extreme point of the North arm. We understand it is intended to cut open a canal south of the North arm from the beach to Cochrane's Canal, so that the Coom shall always be flushed with fresh water.

TRAVANCORE MISSION.—From the annual report of the Mission Hospital and Dispensaries in South Travancore placed at our disposal, we find that the Mission had a time of severe trial, for besides having famine and cholera during the greater part of the year they had to mourn the loss of two missionaries. The number of new cases registered for the past year was 15,988, being a slight increase on the previous year. The sufferings from famine, says the report, were great, but through the munificent bounty of his Highness the Maharajah they were enabled to feed and clothe the poor famine-stricken. Few deaths were from actual starvation, but the attendant famine dysentery and dropsy carried off many. The total income of the mission for the past year from all sources amounted to Rs. 5,270-11-3, and expenditure Rs. 4,800-14-4, leaving a balance in favour of the Mission of Rs. 469-12-11.

MR. A. M. SAUNDERS.—Mr. Arthur Morrel Saunders, the new Agent and Manager of the Madras Railway, is the brother of three Bengal Civil Servants, namely, Mr. C. B. Saunders, c.b., the retiring Chief Commissioner of Mysore, Mr. R. F. Saunders, the Judge of Azumgurrh, and Mr. L. I. Saunders, Commissioner of Ajmere. These gentlemen are the sons of the late Mr. C. A. Saunders, who for a number of years was the Secretary and factotum of the Great Western Railway in England. Mr. A. M. Saunders was professionally educated in England, the Continent, and America, and has been for some years Assistant Traffic-manager of the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railway. He went home lately to apply personally for the Agency of the Madras Railway. He is expected in Madras by the next mail. He is thirty-eight years of age, and a bachelor.

MISSING NATIVE OFFICER.—The Madras Times learns that an official intimation has been received by the Military Authorities in the Madras Presidency of the sudden disappearance of a Native commissioned officer of the 40th Regiment, N.I. It appears that this officer obtained leave of absence to proceed to Rai Bareilly, and left Secunderabad on the 22nd of April last by the railway, travelling with a third-class ticket. It is stated that he had with him a money order for Rs. 1,700, besides jewels, cash, and cloths to the value of Rs. 400. The officer is also worth considerable property, roughly calculated at about Rs. 20,000. Some days after a telegram was received by a relative of the missing man from some of the family inquiring if he had left Secunderabad. There being a suspicion of foul play, the matter was at once brought to the notice of the Commandant, who set about immediately to gain a clue as to the whereabouts of the missing man, for which purpose intimation was given to different Government officials; but all to no purpose, and no clue has yet been traced as to the fate of the man. An official report having, we hear, been sent to Government with a view to the matter being put into the hands of the police, the matter was referred to the Inspector-General of Police, who, we are told, has recommended to the Government that a first-class native detective be employed to solve the mystery, his search to commence from Secunderabad to the place to which the officer intended proceeding. The man was last seen alive at Shahabad by a police officer engaging a passage to Callian. The local Government, having approved of the suggestion of the Inspector-General, have sanctioned the necessary steps being taken at once.

STATION TALK.

MUSCAT, March 21.—Having made the round of the bazaar we proceeded to his Highness the Sayyid's palace to pay him a visit. We were accompanied by a very intelligent Arab interpreter provided for us by Mr. Maquire. After going up and down a number of narrow streets—or rather lanes, for there is not a genuine street in all the capital—we entered one differing in nothing from the others, in which thronged a crowd of armed men, Arabs and Beloochis, his Highness's body-guards. The interpreter stopped at a ponderous gate close shut, and told us that was the entrance to the palace. He knocked, and a little wicket was opened; he spoke a few words, and we were invited to enter. We found ourselves in a sort of courtyard, around which was built the palace, a very unpretentious two-storied edifice. To our left, close to the gateway, was a good-sized room, the front of which was formed of iron bars. It was occupied by a splendid African lion. The royal brute looked at us with considerable curiosity, and we returned his gaze, wondering what was his particular rôle at the palace gate. Doubtless it is his business to strike awe into the souls of the turbulent who may seek to interview the Sovereign without being duly impressed with an idea of his Highness's power. In the quadrangle of the court-yard a leopard occupied a cage, but he was of no account compared to the lion. On our right were eight or ten Arab mares, some of which were evidently of considerable value. Before we had time to take a further inventory, an intimation was sent to us that his Highness was ready to receive us, and we were invited to go forward. We were conducted to the foot of a large ladder with a hand-rail, and we ascended. When we got to the top we found ourselves in a sort of antechamber with whitewashed walls, in which some half-a-dozen Arabs were standing about. One without a turban, but wearing a small white skull cap, and very plainly dressed, advanced towards us and held out his hand. This was his Highness himself. We shook hands, and he very politely ushered us into the next room, the hall of audience. It was a very plain apartment, with the long narrow windows characteristic of Muscat; the walls white and unadorned; the furniture plain to a degree. A few cane-bottomed chairs were ranged on one side of the room, and in front of them was a small carpet. His Highness motioned us to sit on the chairs, and then he sat down on a sofa a little apart. In place of a carpet he put his sandalled feet on a small bed made of common "bed ticking," about four feet long by three feet wide. His Highness is apparently about thirty-five years of age. He is tall and spare, like most Arabs. His handsome countenance wore an expression of melancholy, which is never dispelled by a smile. He is very grave and dignified, but perfectly simple and unassuming in manner. The conversation began by an expression of satisfaction on the part of his Highness that we had visited Muscat. He hoped we were well, and said that he heard I was going to Constantinople. Had I any news about the war? I told him that a Treaty of Peace between Russia and Turkey had been signed, but that according to the latest accounts received when we were leaving Kurrachee, the Russians were occupying some places near Constantinople in spite of the protests of the Sultan. His Highness said that since the Russians had got so near to Constantinople it was not at all likely that they would go back. They would no doubt stay there as long as they could. I then told him about the supposed understanding between England and Austria to limit the results of the Russian aggression, and his Highness paid great attention to that point, putting repeated questions to elicit further information. He remarked that England might have interfered to advantage before, and prevented the Russians from getting close to Constantinople, but that now they were there the difficulty was much increased. Sayyid Turkee, I afterwards learned, takes a great interest in these different phases of the Eastern Question, and his sympathies are strongly aroused in favour of the Turks, in this business regarded by the Arabs (who cordially hate them as a general thing), as the defenders of Islam against the assaults of the infidel. The Sayyid appears to be a man of good sense and of fair knowledge of politics and geography. Being told that Captain Jourdan was a French officer, his Highness asked whether he had come direct from Paris. When informed that he was returning from Japan to France via Persia and Russia, the Sayyid remarked that the route was very long and difficult. He appeared to know something about Japan and the other countries mentioned. He asked whether France would go to war with Russia if England did so, and seemed rather disappointed upon hearing that "a great bazaar" which is to be held this year in Paris will most probably induce that Power to pursue a policy of peace for several months to come. While the conversation was in progress, coffee was handed to us. Some minutes afterwards sherbet—or rather orgeat, a preparation of almonds and sugar and water—was brought in. We then rose to depart, and his Highness accompanied us into the outer room, where the Governor of the town was introduced to us. We shook hands with Sayyid Turkee, and so our interview with his Highness ended.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MR. R. A. DALYELL has been permitted to resign his seat in the Madras Board of Revenue at his own request; so Mr. Ballard now becomes substantive first member, Mr. Sullivan second, and Mr. Davidson third member.

HIS EXCELLENCY SIR RICHARD TEMPLE gave a large evening party on the night of the 8th April, when the leading gentlemen of the native community had the pleasure of being introduced to the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, and also to Major Sandeman, C.S.I., Governor-General's Agent at Kelat.

MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER.—We understand that the Municipal Commissioner, Colonel Merriman, as representing Government, and Colonel Baker, as representing the Port Trust, have had a conference on the subject of the proposed Magazine at Tank Bunder for the storage of explosives, the first cost of which it is suggested should be shared by Government, the Municipality and the Port Trust.

CONFERENCE AT GOVERNMENT HOUSE.—On the arrival of H.E. the Governor on the 2nd April in Bombay from Baroda, H.E. the Commander-in-Chief, and the Heads of the Military and Marine Departments at the Presidency, were summoned to a Conference at Malabar Point, in consequence, it is understood, of instructions received from home which had reference, among other matters, to the defences of Bombay.

RETIREMENT.—It is stated that Mr. W. E. Gordon, Acting Accountant-General, Bombay, has applied to the Government of India for permission to retire from the date of Mr. C. E. Chapman's return from leave in June next. Mr. Gordon entered the service of the Account Department in February, 1835; and during an unusually long service of over forty-three years the aggregate of leave taken by him amounts to less than six months' privilege leave.

BOMBAY UNIVERSITY.—On the 12th April there was a meeting of the Senate of the Bombay University, at which, to the gratification of all the Fellows, his Excellency Sir Richard Temple unexpectedly appeared. He graciously permitted the Vice-Chancellor, the Hon. Mr. Gibbs, to occupy his wonted seat in the Chancellor's chair, and contented himself with closely watching the proceedings, and conferring degrees. Some little disappointment was felt that he did not join in the debate upon the furtherance of physical science.

A RUSSIAN AT RAJKOT.—The correspondent of the Bombay Gazette writes:—We are at present honoured by the presence of a Russian merchant, whose stock-in-trade consists of various nic-nacs. This gentleman has a noble and prepossessing look which bespeaks a Russian nobility. He not only speaks English, French, German, and other continental languages, but has a masterly command over many Oriental ones. The bellicose attitude between England and Russia seems to have whetted the native appetite here to see a live Russ.

REPORTS FROM MADRAS.—The Madras Times learns that the Government of Portuguese India has astonished its subjects by the propagation of an order requiring the several churches at Goa to contribute annually from their private funds a certain amount to maintain an experimental school of agriculture. The same paper is pleased to hear that his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos has permitted Mr. Chisholm to design a College for the Government of Baroda. It believes that in the vicinity of Ahmedabad, the Athens of India, there will be great scope for reviving the Eastern Arts.

SURAT.—Our Surat correspondent, writing on the 9th April, informs us that some of the men arrested for complicity in the late licence-tax riots at that place have been liberated upon bail. The statement that the treasury was removed from the Castle to the Cantonment turns out to be untrue. The rumour appears to have originated through some boxes of powder being taken away under a guard of sepoy. Mr. Olivant, the Acting Collector, Mr. Young-husband, C.S., Mr. Scannell, Superintendent of Police, and Mr. White, C.E., who took up their abode at the Castle during the riots, still remain there. Sepoys continue on duty at Japa Gate, but no further outbreak is anticipated.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR.—On the evening of the 4th April a meeting was held in the Durbar-Room of the Town-hall, Bombay, at which the Governor, Sir Richard Temple, presided, for the purpose of organising means to increase the fund for the erection of the proposed Cathedral High School to the amount estimated to be required, so that the work may be commenced and carried out at once. Government have granted for the site of the new school the triangular piece of ground to the north of the Freie Fountain, and at the junction of Hornby-row and the Esplanade Main Road. It is expected, we believe, that in all about a lakh of rupees will be required. There are already Rs. 65,000 in hand, and Government have a surplus of Rs. 11,500, which they are willing to devote to this purpose if a similar further sum can be raised by private subscription. It was to accomplish this object that the meeting was held, when an influential committee was appointed to receive subscriptions. An addition of Rs. 11,500 by subscriptions, plus the Rs. 11,500 from Government, raise the total to Rs. 88,000, and with that the work can be put in hand. The design of the building is to be prepared by Colonel Fuller. It is desired to commence work and get in the foundations before the break of the monsoon. The amount subscribed in the room on behalf of the fund was Rs. 2,900.—Bombay Gazette.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF THE PUNJAB.—On the evening of the 9th April the Hon. R. E. Egerton, C.S.I., the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, accompanied by Major Bates, Private Secretary and Aide-de-Camp, Mr. Lepel Griffin, Officiating Secretary to Government, and Colonel Black, Military Secretary, left Bombay for Allahabad, en route to Simla, by the Jubbulpore mail train from the Byculia Station. Shortly after five o'clock several civil and military officials assembled at the station to bid him good-bye. About half an hour afterwards the Lieutenant-Governor, with Miss Temple and Captain Frith, drove in a carriage and four to the station, escorted by four sowars of the Governor's body-guard. He was received at the station by the Hon. J. Gibbs, the Hon. L. Ashburner, C.S.I., the Hon. Dosabhoj Framjee, C.S.I., the Hon. Rao Sahab Wishwanath Narayan Mundlick, C.S.I., the Hon. Mahomed Ally Rogay, Mr. C. Gonne, General Aitchison, Captain Cook-Collis, Colonel Justice, Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief, Sir Frank Souter, Kt., C.S.I., Mr. J. H. Grant, the Municipal Commissioner, Major Furse, Captain Babington, Superintendent of the Railway Police, and Subedar Mahomed Cassum. Here his Honour shook hands with those present, and proceeded to the platform of the station. At about 5.45 P.M. the mail train arrived at the station, and a saloon was specially set apart for the disposal of the Lieutenant-Governor. The assemblage then wished him good-bye and a prosperous journey to Simla. Captain Babington accompanied the train to Khangaum. The 21st Native Infantry furnished a guard of honour, consisting of 100 rank and file with band and colour, under the command of Lieutenant Melville, at the compound of the station, and presented arms. A salute of fifteen guns was fired from the land battery on the occasion. Major Sandeman, C.S.I., who has lately returned from England, joined the Lieutenant-Governor's party at the station.

NATIVE FEMALE EDUCATION.—On the 3rd of April Sir Richard Temple delivered an address on the important subject of native female education. The occasion was the annual meeting of the friends and supporters of the Alexandra Native Girls' English Institution, and there was a large number of both native and European ladies and gentlemen present. His Excellency pointed out that the men of the different native communities are now being generally educated in the arts and sciences, and in the poetry, the literature, the politics, and the history of Europe, as well as the history of their own country; and it followed that sooner or later they must have their wives, their daughters, and their sisters educated in the same manner. It was natural that the men should desire the companionship in their own families of women educated somewhat in the same manner as themselves; and they might be sure that human nature would overcome even the most ancient prejudices and superstitions. As sure as the sun which had set that evening would rise again in the morning, the higher education of the women would follow the higher education of the men. It was claimed for native young men that they were intellectually equal to Europeans; but, however that might be, it must be admitted that at present the women of India were intellectually very much below the women of Europe. His Excellency appealed to any native gentlemen who had visited Europe to say whether the women of Europe were not in grace, in virtue, in ability, immensely superior—immeasurably superior—to the women of India. He did not say there was any natural superiority—that was not for him to judge; but owing to the system of education, owing to the circumstances of the country, the superiority he had spoken of did exist. In conclusion, his Excellency exhorted Hindoos and Mohammedans to lose no time in following the example of the Parsees, and providing for the higher education of the female members of their communities.
